WHAT ABOUT THIS?

In 1932 the printing industry throughout the United States made a determined effort to have a bill introduced in Congress to prohibit the Postoffice Department of Washington from having stamped envelopes let to any large corporation for the purpose of this department to sell to bankers, corporations and other businesses this printed material in competition to the printing trade of the United States. These conditions have existed under both the Democratic and Republican administrations.

It is claimed by the Postoffice Department that the government makes a profit in letting this contract. We presume it best to make a small profit, and in all probability could make a profit by taking up any other legitimate business from the business interests of the United States. But, is it right that the National Government should compete with the business interests of the printers or any other business?

The National Press Association made strenuous efforts to have a bill introduced by Senator Oddie of Nebraska, before the Senate known as Senate Bill No. 4080, in 1932. Our own good Kentucky Senator, Mr. M. Logan, of Bowling Green, expressed himself as very favorable to this bill, and responded to a query made by the editor of the Advertiser as follows:

U. S. Senate, March 22, 1932
Mr. J. R. Wallace,
Walton, Ky.
Dear Mr. Wallace:
"I think S. 4080 introduced by Senator Oddie is a very meritorious bill and shall support it. I thank you for writing me."

Very truly,
M. M. Logan.

It appears from what we can learn that the bill got in the hands of a committee and there it stayed and was never introduced.

It seems to us that printers of some states are very negligent of their own interests in not urging and insisting that their national representatives in Washington take care of their (printers) interests by having the bill passed. It means many thousands of dollars to the printing industry. This industry is taxed by the National Government for every employee in their establishments, and at the same time is a competitor for part of their business.

Now, it appears from the subjoined article, the National Government contemplates entering the mattress making business.

Protest against this government's intention to go into the business of manufacturing mattresses in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama was made today by the Southern States Industrial Council on behalf of the private industries of the South.

In a telegram to Harry L. Hopkins, FERA Administrator, John E. Edgerton, president of the council, declared that the government has already encroached upon the domain of private enterprise and regulated it to the point of almost absolute control and expressed the opinion that all of the public benefits which could be expected or even imagined from such a course would be more than offset by the "moral and material costs to the same public."

Mr. Edgerton's telegram follows in full: "Taking cognizance of the announcement of the government's intention to go into the business of manufacturing many thousands of mattresses in Kentucky, Tennessee and Alabama, the Southern States Industrial Council, speaking for the private industries of the South, feels compelled to register strong protest against this further encroachment of government upon the domain of private enterprise which it is already regulating to the point of almost absolute control."

"We think it extremely unfair and unsound in any instance for the government to tax its citizens for capital with which to go into competition with them and it is contrary to one of the most fundamental principles of our democracy."

"Our information is that the budding industry as a whole is already suffering acutely from dull business, while many employs in that industry are in distress from lack of work. The purchase of necessary equipment as well as the large amount of raw material will undoubtedly further upset the markets which are already so high as to almost kill consumer buying."

"The use of untrained and inexperienced help, as is contemplated, will entail further great economic waste. It seems to us that all of the public benefits which could be expected or even imagined will be more than offset by the moral and material costs to the same public. Sm."

It will have undoubtedly the hurtful effect of weakening the confidence of the public in the government's sense of fair play.

"We believe the government can purchase at fair prices all the mat-resses it needs from manufacturers who are already equipped to make them and who need the business in order to keep their people employed."

—Walton Advertiser

SEEKING A FAIR DEAL

More than 250,000 mine owners and miners in 12 states—which produce over 200,000,000 tons of bituminous coal annually—have gone on record as being unalterably opposed to federal hydro-electric projects.

Their reasons are simple. In the case of the mine owners, investments are threatened. In the case of mine workers, jobs are menaced. Every time the federal government builds a hydro plant, existing steam plants must slack. Another market for coal is destroyed. Mines shut down. Men are thrown out of work. Railroads and dozens of other industries patronized by the coal business, feel the blow—and they, in turn, must dismiss employees of their own. It's a vicious circle that weaves its way thru the entire fabric of our commercial life.

The private electric industry has given us the best and cheapest electric service in the world. It is prepared to meet any prospective demand for service, and at present its installed capacity is far beyond consumption. It has built up a magnificent system of both steam and water-power plants, which makes delays or interruptions in service almost unknown. It pays heavy taxes, and employs a vast army of men at good wages.

There is no need for federal plants. The argument that they would provide needed employment is extremely fallacious—it is reliably stated that for every temporary job they create, a permanent job is lost in private industry. That is the grave situation coal and electric and other industrial workers face now—and they deserve the widest public understanding and sympathy in their efforts to obtain a fair deal.

A GREAT RECORD

In his recent annual address, the President of the National Board of Fire Underwriters said: "Stock company fire insurance is the foundation stone of the entire financial and economic structure. Its efficient functioning and solvency are of immediate and vital concern to every citizen of the country, be he rich or poor; and if there were any failure, or even apprehension of failure, the need for prompt and sweeping governmental action for the purpose of putting fire insurance upon a sound basis would be even more imperative than it has been in the case of other essential instrumentalities of our national life. It is, however, a fact of impressive significance that since the depression began there has been no suggestion powers of government should be used to repair defects of the stock fire insurance system. By common consent, even among radical theorists, it has for generations past so done its work and so demonstrated its economic adequacy and social value that only harm could result from further governmental interference."

No industry has done more that is beneficial to the public at large—none has been freer from abuse. The quality of its management is unequalled—during the trying years of depression hardly an important stock company has experienced the slightest financial difficulty. As in the past, it continues to be the bulwark of industry—the agency which makes possible the building of homes and factories, the extension of credit, the normal routine of commerce and trade. Without protection fire insurance affords, every person owning property, or with a dollar invested, would be in imminent danger of losing his savings.

The fire insurance industry has reason to be proud of its record. And so has the general public, which reaps the benefits.

BIG IMPROVEMENT IN U. S. STEEL AND IRON EXPORTS

A striking improvement in the iron and steel export trade of the United States during the current year is revealed in figures just sent to the Louisville District Office by the Department of Commerce. Sales abroad during the first five months of 1934 showed an increase of 618,599 tons, or 149 per cent, over the corresponding period of last year.

PROSPEROUS MINING

It is not an exaggeration to say that leaders of the metal mining industry feel more encouraged than for some years past.

There are strong movements on foot throughout the civilized world to rehabilitate silver, in the interest of stimulated international commerce and general world recovery. Reports from the industries manufacturing mining equipment indicate that the mines are preparing for heavy increases in production. In brief, the stage is set for a genuine mining revival.

Prosperous mines are great employers. They are great taxpayers. They distribute large sums to investors in all walks of life. They create new purchasing power, that extends through agriculture, the professions, all industries. They are one of the three basic industries, and their revival is essential to our future.

PHOEPHESIES COME TRUE

Life insurance executives have proven themselves excellent prognosticators. Last January a number of them prophesied the 1934 would be among the greatest years in the history of the industry, and that volume of business would depend less upon sales of a few very large policies and more upon sales of a greater number of small policies.

Both prophecies are coming true. Almost without exception, the life companies are reporting heavy gains in new business. For the first four months of the year, the gain averaged 16.1 per cent over the same period last year, and the trend continues upward.

The gains likewise, are occurring because of increased sales of small policies. One representative company, for example, showed a gain of 42 per cent in volume of business with 100 per cent gain in policy applications.

The latter experience is especially noteworthy. It indicates that the average American worker has really obtained a new, and more thorough realization of thrift and saving through life insurance, both for protection and investment. He has been impressed by the fine record the industry has made during depression—he has faith in its management, its methods. He believes also that the best way to assure his own future and that of his dependents, is through life insurance.

Yes, 1934 is a great life insurance year—a fact which presages much for the economic welfare of our people.

GET DOWN TO FACTS

In a recent address, Federal Coordinator of Transportation Esman, the nation's leading unbiased authority on transportation problems, said that Congress should provide for a careful investigation of the economic soundness of new waterway projects.

Mr. Eastman pointed out a crucial fact that we have a surplus of transportation. This situation has led to the most destructive and wasteful kind of competition, not only between different types of transportation but within each group. And the public pays through the cost of service, as pays for all other kinds of economic waste.

The history of waterways in this country does not make encouraging reading. For the most part, they have not been able to pay their way, even though they were built with government funds and pay no taxes. Many of the larger waterways have sustained heavy deficits for the taxpayers to make up. In other instances they have paralleled railroads and taken valuable business away from them—the expense of investors, workers and the public at large, which depends on the rails as the backbone of all transportation.

Mr. Eastman is frankly dubious as to whether, if all costs are taken into consideration, waterways will give us cheaper or better transportation than we have at present from existing agencies. The least Congress can do is to make a dispassionate examination, based upon Mr. Eastman's recommendations and get down to the hard economic facts.

WHERE COOPERATION

SPELLED PROSPERITY

A recent report by O. M. Orchard, counsel for the Department of Agriculture and Markets at Madison, Wisconsin, is of interest to every farmer as an example of successful cooperative effort.

A few years ago growers of fox furs, of whom a heavy percentage are located in Wisconsin, were faced with tremendous losses, due to chaotic markets and declining prices. Then the growers rallied under the leadership of a responsible executive, and formed a cooperative. In a series of 89 meetings, 58 per cent of the industry was signed up in five-year contracts. On the strength of the contracts, a number of international banking houses, including one in London, readily loaned the new co-op money with which to establish a selling agency in New York City.

The result is that ranchers are now receiving double the former price for their pelts. The volume turnover, in the second year of operation, is forecast at $4,000,000.

That is what one cooperative has done to bring order out of potential ruin. Other cooperatives dealing in cotton and dairy products and walnuts and so on, have done much the same thing. In the farmer's lexicon, cooperation and prosperity are becoming synonyms.

THE PAST AND THE PRESENT

"No system is perfect," said Cassius E. Gates, past president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce recently. "Certainly wrongdoers should be punished. Abuses should be corrected. Wise governmental regulation is needed in many directions—but it is not necessary, in the desire to cure one evil, to go so far as to destroy the fundamental rights of institutions and of men."

All genuine progress must be built upon the foundations of the past—or that which has been learned through trial and error and long experience. Change which dismisses the past as being entirely unworthy of consideration must inevitably do great damage and little permanent good. To keep that which time has proven valuable and worthwhile, while eliminating that which is inimical to the common welfare, is the purpose of the patriotic American.

Today we have an excellent example, in many countries, of what uncontrolled zeal to make changes can do. Germany, Italy, Russia, come to mind—and the fact that unbiased observers forecast that present system of government in those powers will either collapse or be entirely overhauled, is significant. Human rights were abrogated, traditions were forgotten, dictatorships with a vast lust for power were set up—and a feeling of rebellion grows constantly in the hearts and the minds of their peoples.

We are seeking to do great things in America. We can do them only if we temper the theories of the present with the experience of the past.

WANING ENTHUSIASM

A year or two ago it was widely believed that enthusiasm for municipal ownership of electric plants was growing. It was forecast that within a very short time there would be a tremendous increase in the number of towns trying such ventures.

Now even zealous municipal ownership advocates are admitting that the movement has not produced the expected results. That admission, as a matter of fact, has been made by the head of a municipal ownership league who recently said that the mass of public opinion was for private ownership.

With the single exception of Camden, New Jersey, no large city has recently authorized a bond issue for municipal plant, though a number have voted on them. Municipal projects that have been approved are in very small towns, and according to the Annalist, the project turned down by the city of Cincinnati alone probably outweighs in actual importance the projects approved, with the exception noted. And Milwaukee, the only important American city which consistently elected officials running on the Socialist ticket, has more recently turned down a municipal power project.

This trend can be attributed to two main causes: First, the fact that a large number of towns with municipal plants have sustained heavy deficits which the taxpayers had to make up; second, that the standard of service provided by the private electric industry—both as to efficiency and rates—is superior to that of municipal plants, even with their advantages of tax-free-dom and public subsidies. The avowed American is a very practical person—and practical considerations are dictating his vote on schemes to put his town into the power business at his expense.

CANADA IS BUYING A LOT MORE AMERICAN FURS

After three years of depression, the Canadian market for American furs is showing definite signs of improvement, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. Imports of American furs into the Dominion showed a gain of 72 per cent over the figure for March, 1933. Practically all Canadian imports of furs from the United States are undressed fur skins, the chief items being muskrat, fox, rabbit, Persian lamb, mink and kolmski. During 1933 imports from the United States of furs were valued at $2,751,424, against $2,703,342 in 1932. Muskrat was the chief import from the United States.

TWO KINDS OF COMPLAINTS

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 16.—The Public Service Commission recently announced rules and regulations of procedure, specifying the manner in which complaints shall be filed. The recently created commission is completing preliminary phases of organization after a study of activities of state utility regulating commissions in a number of other states.

The rules provide for the making of two kinds of complaints, formal and informal, against utility companies alleged by the complainants to be violating the law or the commission's rules or orders.

Formal complaints may be made "by the commission of its own motion, or by any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or by any body politic or municipal organization, or by any public utility, or by ten persons, corporations, or associations, all of which shall be customers of the utility complained of, or ten complainants of all or any of the aforesaid classes, by petition or complaint in writing."

Complaints must set forth "any act or thing done or omitted to be done by any corporation, person, or public utility, including any alleged infringement of any rule, regulation or charge heretofore established or fixed by or for any corporation, person, or public utility in violation, or claimed to be in violation, of any provision of law, or of any rule or order or decision of the commission."

All formal complaints must be verified and must be made on the forms provided by the commission. Copies must be supplied by the complainants to the defendant corporation.

In all cases of complaints, the commission may order a hearing or may dismiss the complaint after due notice to all parties.

Informal complaints may be made by letter or writing and matters thus presented may be taken up with the utility company complained against in an endeavor to bring about an agreement without a formal hearing. No form of informal complaint is prescribed by the rules, but in substance the letter of other writing in which the complaint is made must contain the essential elements of a complaint.

"This informal procedure," the commission says in its rules "is found efficacious in a great number of cases and is recommended."

The rules and regulations, copies of which may be obtained from the secretary, fully cover the manner of making application for certificates of public convenience and necessity, for authority to adjust rates and for authority to issue securities, notes, bonds, stocks or other evidences of indebtedness.

The commission already has granted many applications for certificates of public convenience and necessity to municipalities testing to construct utility plants or make improvements to existing plants with the aid of federal funds.

Wilbur Miller, of Owensboro, is chairman of the commission. Lloyd Clark and Wm. D. Cochran compose the commission.

RULINGS OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO TOBACCO ADJUSTMENT SIGNERS

Points of special interest in the tobacco adjustment program at this time include the ruling that non-signers shall not be permitted to use the barns of contract signers. Contract signers, on the other hand, may use without limitation the barns of non-signers.

Under tobacco contracts, where a portion of the tobacco was grown by a share tenant or share-cropper, a trustee must be appointed to distribute the first and second adjustment payments, and the deficiency payment in case production is less than the market allotment. The trustee appointed must be mutually agreeable to all tenants and the landowner. The appointment of the trustee and the signatures of all share-tenants or share-croppers and the landowners must be on the certificate of compliance form before any adjustment payment will be made to them.

If any production adjustment contract signer did not plant wheat in 1932 or 1933 he will not be permitted to plant wheat for grain this fall. This ruling is applicable to both the corn-hog and tobacco contracts.

A corn acreage in excess of the 1932 or 1933 acreage does not constitute a violation of the tobacco contract unless corn is sold. Tobacco contract signers are allowed to grow an excess acreage of corn if all of it is fed on the farm.

HOW TO FIGHT BEAN BEETLE

The Mexican bean beetle will continue its ravages until frost; in fact it is often a greater pest to late beans than to the early crop. Directions for spraying and dusting are given in Circular No. 257, of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington. Copies also may be had from county agents.

8 DEMOCRATS TO BE ELECTED

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 17.—Democratic congressmen will be elected in eight of the nine Kentucky congressional districts is the forecast of Attorney General Bailey P. Wootton, chairman of the Democratic State Central Executive Committee.

"The only congressional district I am willing to concede to the Republicans is the Ninth," said General Wootton. "I feel confident that the first Democratic congressman that has represented Louisville in many years will be elected in November and believe that Congressman A. J. May will be returned to congress from the Seventh district by an increased majority," he said when asked his opinion as to how Democrats will fare in the congressional races.

All nine Kentucky congressmen in the 73d, congress were Democrats for the first time in many years, due to the redistricting mudslide which resulted in electing members of congress from the state-at-large instead of by congressional districts.

The Ninth district is overwhelmingly Republican and it is generally conceded that John M. Robison, of Barbourville, former representative from the old eleventh district, will return to congress. But Democratic leaders seem confident that they can retain the other eight seats in the house.

The Eight counties which compose the Seventh district gave a vote of 43,774 for President Roosevelt as against 31,354 for Hoover in 1932. In 1930 in the race for the United States senate Senator M. M. Logan received 242,672 votes in the counties which compose the Seventh, and Robison, the Republican candidate polled 23,230, registering a majority of 558 in the territory now embraced in the Seventh district.

When Mr. May won his first race for congress in the old district, defeating Mrs. John Langley in 1930, he polled a total of 26,141 votes in the counties now embraced in the Seventh district. Mrs. Langley's total vote in these counties was 21,229.

Emmott O'Neal, Democratic nominee for congress in the Third district, which embraces Jefferson county, appears to have a splendid chance to be the first Democratic congressman from Louisville in recent years. Democrats have won in the last two elections and have strengthened their position by taking control of the city and county administration. The Third district gave a Democratic majority of 5,265 in the presidential election. Factional strife within Republican ranks has been bothersome in both the Third and Seventh district.

Party nominees for congress at the Nov. 6th, election follow: Fifth district (Boone, Campbell, Carroll, Gallatin, Grant, Kenton, Oldham, Pendleton and Trimble counties) — Democratic, Brent Spence of Ft. Thomas, incumbent; Republican, J. Lincoln Newhall, of Covington.

Sixth appellate district (Bath, Boone, Bracken, Campbell, Carter, Elliott, Fleming, Grant, Greenup, Harrison, Kenton, Lewis, Mfson, Nicholas, Pendleton, Robertson and Rowan counties) — Democratic, William H. Rees of Maysville, incumbent; Republican, Russell N. Victor, of Erlanger.

There are no elections this year in the third, fifth and seventh appellate districts.

BUYERS REMAIN UNTIL TOBACCO CROP IS SOLD

There will be no occasion this year for growers in any section to any section to harvest green tobacco, according to J. B. Hutson, chief of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's tobacco section, who makes the reassuring announcement that some buyers will remain on the market in each section until the crop is sold.

At a conference held in Washington by adjustment administration officials with warehousemen and manufacturers it was agreed to open some of the markets earlier this year in order that farmers who had tobacco ready for market might get the money for their crop and manufacturers agreed to keep buyers on the market until the crop was sold.

It was also felt that early opening of markets would promote more orderly marketing by providing farmers a longer time in which to sell, and that this action would also encourage growers to handle tobacco in such a way that it would be of the highest quality and bring the best possible price. During the first week or two after the opening of markets, sales will be on a restricted basis in some belts, since the marketing of tobacco will probably be comparatively light.

MANY AMERICAN HOMES BADLY NEED PAINTING

That a large number of American homes are probably in need of paint is evidenced by the Peal Property Inventory now being conducted in 64 cities throughout the U. S. says a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. This inventory is for the purpose of collecting hitherto unavailable data on the physical condition of city homes. A study of forty-two cities, the data for which is already tabulated, indicates that the typical city dwelling is a three to five-room single-family house, of wood construction, has a value of from $2,000 to $7,000, and is from 5 to 35 years old. The survey shows that approximately 60 per cent are in need of repairs and it is safe to assume that these repairs include paint. In the large majority of instances from 80 to 95 per cent of all homes are of wood construction where paint, of course, is essential to appearance and preservation. In one typical American city, for example, the study shows that 35 per cent of the homes are in good condition, 44 per cent are in need of minor repairs, 18 per cent are in need of structural repairs, and the remainder are considered unfit for habitation.

KENTUCKY GRADUATE TAKES COTTON JOB

H. P. Kirkman, a graduate of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has taken a position as assistant in the cotton adjustment program. His headquarters are at Hickman, Ky. Mr. Kirkman has been carlot inspector of fruits and vegetables for the Kroger Grocery & Baking Company in St. Louis. While a student in the College of Agriculture he received a Danforth Foundation scholarship. He was graduated in 1931.

NEW SPORTS TO BE INTRODUCED

Richmond, Ky. Aug. 11.—Intramural athletics at Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College this year will include several sports hitherto strangers to the campus, according to T. E. McDonough, director of athletics.

There will be three separate programs carried on. For men, the fall program will consist of boxing, swimming, volley ball, and basket ball. The winter schedule will have aerial dart, table tennis, base ball, and playground base ball will be played.

Although no definite schedule has been given out for women, there will be competitions in the following sports: aerial dart, archery, swimming, playground base ball, badminton, tennis, and basket ball.

There will be competition in all of the sports, and a system of tournaments, either round robin or elimination, will be organized. All of the games that require team play will be carried on by class organization, except basket ball, in which a league will be played, the teams chosen by counties. A system of plaques, one trophy for each sport, will be instituted and the names of the winning individual or team will be inscribed and left as a permanent record of that achievement.

"This intra-mural is being instituted to offer each individual the opportunity to take part in some sport," said Mr. McDonough. "With the facilities we have with which to offer such a schedule there is no reason why every student should not have the chance to participate in one or more sports."

Dissatisfaction Among Dairymen of Boone; Asked to Organize

Meetings Being Held To Determine Sentiment of Farmers— Present Price Paid For Milk Far Too Low Is Claim of Producers

The proceeds from the sale of milk and its products has been the principal income for more than 75 per cent of the farmers within a radius of fifty miles of Cincinnati during the past thirty years. A few years ago, when milk and its products were bringing a fair price in the markets, the rural communities as well as the larger urban centers were prosperous. The people had money with which to pay their taxes. They built good roads, churches, schools, and the vaults of the banks were filled with money resulting from the sale of dairy products.

The situation today is appalling. The fact is, the outlook is worse than it was in 1932, in a large part of the Cincinnati milk-shed, many of the producers have been without pasture during the entire summer, due to the drought, and many of them have not raised sufficient feed to feed their cows the coming winter. The prices of feed are from 200 per cent to 500 per cent higher than they were in 1932, and the price paid to the producer for milk is less than it was at that time.

There are two things that have contributed to this great change. One, of course, is the depression. The other is the lack of organization, and the inability of the milk producer to get his share of the consumer's dollar, because of the fact that he has been deprived of that necessary and needed organization which is the only means by which he can get a fair price for milk.

It is true that various laws have been passed with a view to obtaining a better price for dairy products. Last year, the Ohio Legislature passed the Burk law. Under it was created the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission and various Control Committees in the cities and towns of the State of Ohio. The purpose of all this was to get for the milk producer a better price. The law has accomplished but little. The agencies that were set up under the law for the purpose of carrying out the purposes of the law, have been ill-conceived. As a result, the law has been almost as much of a detriment as it has been a benefit.

Last June, a number of the milk producers in Ohio, who were greatly dissatisfied, started a movement to get a better price for milk. A meeting of the representatives of all of the producers in the Cincinnati milk shed was held in Cincinnati. A committee was appointed to obtain $2.50 per 100 for all base milk, which would have been an increase of 70c per 100 from the price then paid. The committee, after numerous attempts, succeeded in getting the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission to fix a price of $2.35 per 100 for No. 1 milk, and $1.55 per 100 for No. 2 milk, making a blended price increase of about 34c to 25c per 100.

A further effort has been made to increase the price for September to $2.70 per 100. This is only a mark to shoot at at present, and the possibility of obtaining it or anything like that is not promising without a strong organization of a large majority of the milk producers in the milk-shed to back up their demands.

If the milk producers in this territory are going to get the price to which they are justly entitled, it is only through a strong organization that it is possible for them to get it. It is true that we have in this territory three milk producers' organizations, but these organizations have never done anything for nearly a year to increase the price of milk to the producers. The fact of the case is, it is absolutely impossible for them to do anything. They will not work together, and working individually and separately, they cannot accomplish anything. It is impossible for any one of these organizations, to get a majority of the milk producers in this territory, and without a majority it is impossible for any existing milk organization to accomplish anything in the way of getting a better price for the producers.

A committee of twelve members was selected, about three weeks ago by the representatives of the milk producers who met in the Court House at Cincinnati. This committee was composed of three representatives from the Co-Operative, three from the K. I. O., three from the Milk Producers Union, and three from the independent producers. This committee was composed of some of the largest milk producers in the Cincinnati milk-shed, and at a meeting held several weeks ago, by a vote of ten to two, decided to form a new milk organization and a Constitution and By-Laws were adopted for that purpose.

Milk meetings will be held throughout the territory during the next five or six months, with a view to enlisting the members in this great movement to consolidate the milk producers into one body. It is not the purpose of this milk organization to destroy existing organizations, but it is the purpose to put the milk producers in a position where they can fix and demand their own price for their own product—something they have not been able to do for a long time.

This movement will not be a success unless every milk producer in this milk-shed realizes that it is impossible for him to get anywhere and get any better price for his milk under the existing set-up, and that it is only through one great, powerful organization that he can get his share of the consumer's dollar.

A meeting will be held at the New Haven School House in the southern part of Boone county, on the Louisville Highway, next Friday evening, August 24, at 8:00 p. m. Every milk producer in the southern part of Boone county, as well as other parts of the county should join in this great movement for the mutual benefit of all of the milk producers in the territory. Now is the time to act. Let us get together and fight our own battles, because we can do it better than all the laws passed by Congress or by any State Legislature.

Do not forget the time and place! Other milk meetings will be announced later.

HUGE NUMBER

EXPECTED TO ATTEND 4-H AND UTOPIA CLUB FAIR AT FLORENCE SATURDAY, AUGUST 25. MANY EVENTS ON THE PROGRAM

All roads will lead to the Florence Fair Grounds next Saturday where preparations have been made to care for three thousand people who are expected to attend the second annual free 4-H and Utopia Club Fair.

The gathering is not only to be a fair, but a home coming for the people of Boone and neighboring counties where everybody can meet and talk to old friends and make new acquaintances.

The Executive Committee has spared no time in making this an event no one can forget. The program list has been increased considerably this year, and over five hundred exhibits are expected.

Besides the special events, Gaid's fiddlers and others will furnish old time string music. Among the attractions will be a girl's band. The special events include a rolling pin throwing contest for women, a hus-ban-d calling contest for women, a fat race (200 pounds or more) pig dancing, a rabbit race for boys under 14, rope jumping for girls under 14, a pet parade, a whittling contest, and a band contest.

Any boy or girl under 16 may bring their pets and enter the pet parade. Valuable prizes will be awarded the winners of all special events.

The oldest person, the person with the biggest feet, and the largest family present will be awarded prizes worth traveling many miles. There will be ponies for the children to ride. All refreshments are in charge of the Utopia Club and everything will be sold for a nickel. The fair is free in every respect. There will be plenty of parking space and it is free too.

The Executive Committee who have planned the fair consists of D. H. Norris, R. V. Lents, Mrs. B. C. Stephens, Mrs. Vernon Pope, John Crigler and H. R. Forkner.

TABLES TURNED

PETERSBURG WINS THEIR SECOND GAME OF ELIMINATION BY TRIMMING BELLEVUE TO THE TUNE OF 4 TO 2—BOTH TIED FOR SECOND PLACE.

The Petersburg nine, behind the five-hit hurling of "Bill" Bradburn, won their second game of the elimination from Bellevue, 4 to 2. This was also the second game for the Bellevue team in the elimination, but the result was different in that Bellevue's percentage was lowered by the same amount that Petersburg's was elevated. Bellevue won their first game, while Petersburg lost theirs. Both teams now have a percentage of 50 and both think that is as low as their percentage will ever be in this elimination. So what?

Bellevue, the visiting team scored their two runs in the sixth, when John Walton and "Bucky" Rogers, the first and fourth men to bat in this inning, slapped out singles, and were scored by an error. Therefore, the earned runs for Bellevue were none, and unearned runs, 2.

"Jay" Ryle, twirler for the Bellevue nine allowed the Petersburg boys nine hits. These hits, however, were so scattered as to give Petersburg credit for only one earned run. Errors accounted for the other three runs.

The five teams composing the Boone County League this year are probably the most evenly matched teams ever to form a league in this county. Every team thinks they are going to be a winner of the elimination, and every team knows they have to play ball to win. Any one wishing to see a good game of baseball can be assured a just that by seeing a game between any of these teams.

The games to be played this week are between Petersburg and Florence at Florence and between Burlington and Bellevue at Bellevue. Come out and help your favorite team win by cheering for them.

BELLEVUE EVEN SCORE

WITH BOB & GENE SUNDAY. The Bellevue team, defeated the Bob & Gene team Sunday at the Bellevue ball park by a score of 9 to 3. This evened the count for the Bellevue boys as Bob & Gene gave them a trimming in the previous game.

Deck was on the mound for the Bellevue boys, while Ellis and Farns pitched for Bob & Gene.

At the close of the game a coin was tossed to determine the place the next game would be played with Bob & Gene winning.

The Bellevue boys will travel to the Elsmere park Sunday and will be fighting for this game. Both will pitch for Bob & Gene and Deck for Bellevue.

PROMINENT MAN

CALLED BY GRIM REAPER FRIDAY, AUG. 17—HAD BEEN LIFE-LONG RESIDENT OF BOONE COUNTY—SERVICES CONDUCTED MONDAY

W. A. Gaines, born July 2, 1853, departed this life August 17, 1934, at 11:25 a. m., following a brief illness from Chronic Nephritis. ## DROUTH CONTINUES

IN BOONE COUNTY. The drouth which has prevailed in Boone county for the past few months seems to have no end. Crops are burning very badly, and unless rain is had within the next few days all crops will be reduced considerably.

While talking to a gentleman who had just returned from certain sections of Indiana, he stated that crops in that state are damaged much more than in this county. However, adjoining counties have had a fair rain fall during the past month and crops are in very good condition.

FARMERS CUTTING TOBACCO THIS WEEK

It was reported this week that Rex Berkshire, of the Burlington and Bellevue pike and Ernest Collins, of the Francesville neighborhood were cutting their tobacco. This is probably the earliest date tobacco has been cut in this county for many years.

The gentleman who reported this item to us said that Mr. Berkshire was cutting a "fine" crop of tobacco. However, we are a little doubtful as to the fitness of the weed, due to the lack of rain.

Mark Cook, who is employed by D. R. Blythe as clerk, was back at his post Wednesday morning after a couple days absence. He was quite indisposed Monday and Tuesday.

BURLINGTON COCA-COLAS DEFEAT WILLIAMSTOWN

Saturday of last week the Coca-Cola team journeyed to Williamstown, defeating that team by the score of 7 to 4. This game was very interesting and each team displayed a good brand of ball. Voshell and Stuart Ryle were on the mound for the locals and both wiled a nice game of ball.

The locals were also victorious over Silver Grove Friday by the score of 11 to 6 in a fast game on the local ball park. The Burlington boys are heavy contenders for the championship and have a good following.

John Fitzharris, farmer, who lives five miles south of Beaver Lick, was in a critical condition Wednesday after three negroes had beaten him and had ransacked his home.

Boone county officials were told the negroes, who had been camping near Verona for three days, walked into Fitzharris' barn as he was milking late, struck him on the head and then tied and gagged him.

Physicians treated Fitzharris at his home. No estimate of the robbery could be obtained.

MAY COMPLETE THE MEASURING OF AAA LAND THIS MONTH

The measuring of tobacco, corn and cotton acres on farms under AAA contracts is going forward throughout the state and may be completed this month, according to the State Compliance Office at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington.

The compliance work is being speeded up by the cooperative action of tobacco control committees, corn-hog allotment committees and cotton allotment committees. These bodies jointly appointed the county engineering supervisors and county farm supervisors. The tobacco, corn and cotton acreages are being measured at the same time.

This cooperation on the part of the committees handling the various phases of the agricultural adjustment program in the state is highly praised by O. M. Farrington, State Compliance Officer. Not only has their joint action speeded up the work but also has materially reduced the cost of administering the program, he said.

Eighty thousand contracts were signed in the state covering 85,000 farms growing burley, dark air-cured or dark fire-cured tobacco, and 25,000 Kentucky farms are under corn-hog contracts, 4,500 under wheat contracts and 300 farms under cotton contracts.

FALL GOOD TIME TO SOW ALFALFA

August is perhaps the best time for sowing a field in alfalfa for the first time. Dr. E. N. Fergus at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington says that seedlings made then seem to be more generally successful than spring seedlings.

Even on soils that have previously grown alfalfa, August seedlings have one distinct advantage; that is, they may be made on perfectly prepared seed beds. For this reason, stands are likely to be uniform and relatively free from weeds.

Good seed of a strain or variety suited to Kentucky should be used. The use of adapted seed is important. Dr. Fergus recommends Grimm, Hardigan, Ontario variegated and Cossack.

A clover and grass seed drill gives the best seeding results, distributing the seed evenly and in such a way that all of it should germinate. Perhaps the next best method is broadcasting after a cultipacker. Or the seed may be broadcast after a drag he row. It is usually advisable to push the seed bed lightly after broadcast seeding.

When drilled, 10 to 12 pounds of seed to the acre is sufficient; if broadcast, 15 pounds should be used.

Many Green county farmers are reporting good Korean lespedeza pastures.

TOUGH ON GANGLAND WITH THIS SORT OF SHOOTING

Washington, D. C.—Five shots in three and three-fifths seconds, each shot hitting a "vital" spot on each and five man-targets, is a mark that Leo Gratosky, a Delaware and Hudson railroad police officer has set up for other fast-shooting revolver and pistol marksmen to match, and for gangsters to make note of.

The railroad policeman, as told in a bulletin of the National Rifle Association, put on his remarkable performance in an informal match at the recent Eastern small-bore rifle and pistol tournament at Camp Ritchie, Md.

In this brilliant demonstration of fast and accurate marksmanship, Gratosky cocked his .38-caliber revolver for each shot and had to change his aim each time as the five targets were spaced five feet apart in a row twenty-five yards away from the firing line. The targets used in the match conform to the torso and head of a man.

Luke Hopper, a Bell county farmer, sells an average of 70 gallons of milk per week from three cows at 20 cents per gallon, making a $10 weekly profit. He also sells 50 dozen eggs from 140 hens at 20 cents a dozen, making $6.82 profit. Mr. Hopper believes that poultry and cows give the greatest asset for any farmer.

MARKED DECLINE IN JAVA'S IMPORTS OF
U. S. LEAF TOBACCO

A marked decline in imports of American leaf tobacco into Java during the current year is revealed in a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. Two factors are responsible for the decline of Java's imports of American leaf. The domestic leaf is being employed to an increasing extent and is affecting the amount of imported leaf needed. Cigarettes, the chief products of the Javanese factories, are made as cheaply as possible and require large quantities of the cheapest domestic tobacco. Another reason for the reduced imports of American leaf is the apparent substitution of cut tobacco. Recently Great Britain has been supplying most of this type and it is possible that the leaf tobacco is still being furnished by American exporters but indirectly through the United Kingdom. Outside of leaf tobacco, cigarettes constitute the only other American tobacco item of any importance imported into the Java market.

of the law by the Commission or its staff.

He has failed to inform Your Excellency that the biennial report is the official record of proceedings of the Commission and is not only the report to Your Excellency and the General Assembly, but that it is also used to keep the taxpayers informed of the proceedings of the Commission in which there is a vast public interest among shippers and carriers and that this curtailment to which he refers was made because of the lack of funds and Your Excellency's request that all departments economize to the fullest extent.

The report has never been bound by leather as claimed by Mr. Sewell but in a very cheap paper board and cloth binding and he fails to state the current report is bound too cheap to afford a permanent record.

Our other expenses have been unduly curtailed because of insufficient appropriations, and the curtailment has cost the taxpayers several hundred thousand of dollars.

The city of Louisville is the railroad center of Kentucky; is more accessible to the people who have need of the services of our rate clerk and his residence there gives him better access to railroad officials and their records and enables him to better serve the public. This more convenient practice has proven its worth by many years practical experience. Incidentally this clerk only receives two fifths the salary paid by surrounding states.

The stenographer is the official reporter of the Commission and she only receives $100 per month which is considerably less than paid any other state employee of like training and ability including similar employees in Mr. Sewell's office. We can furnish Your Excellency with affidavits from those who make use of her records that she is just as, if not more, efficient than any who have ever served the Commission in this capacity. The reason for her residence in Dawson Springs is in order that she will be accessible to the Chairman who must handle the great part of the voluminous correspondence of the Commission. The charge of nepotism indicates the mental size of the author of the report and we shall not dignify it by making answer.

The duties of the Commissioners are state wide in their scope and the public can best be served by having the three Commissioners accessible in the three sections of the state instead of compelling those in the far reaches of the state to come all the way to Frankfort. The salaries paid the Commissioners are much less than any surrounding state and are about one third that paid those who practice before us. The salary of the auditor cannot be taken as a guide because it is in no way related and besides the duties imposed and ability required of the Auditor justifies a much greater salary for this work. Those charged with the same responsibility in private business are paid at least double or more. Your Excellency well knows that even the Governor's salary has never paid the expenses of that office by far.

The secretary is custodian of the records. She is highly efficient but the least paid by any state for similar services.

It is not true that the Chairman is employed as a traveling salesman, but it is true that he and the other Commissioners have private interests and are able to successfully operate such business.

Our maintaining residence in our districts is no different to what has been found practical in the operation of other state departments. For example, the State Highway Commissioners find it more efficient to maintain office in their respective districts; the State Board of Health finds it more efficient to maintain offices at Louisville; and the Commission of Agriculture finds it more efficient to maintain the Labor Department at Louisville. Other instances could be mentioned.

The report fails to mention the importance of the formal cases brought before the Commission and the time devoted by Commission employees to these cases.

More than fifty formal cases involving hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue were heard and disposed of. Others have been heard but not yet decided. Many of these cases require several weeks time to hear and reach a fair decision.

Your Excellency having had life training in the handling of civil actions knows that only a small part of the time required in handling actions of this character is taken in the hearing. The work only begins when the record is closed. Other very important cases in which the entire state is vitally interested have not been heard because of lack of funds.

Respectfully submitted,
Moses R. Glenn
Commissioner First District

HOW'S BUSINESS?

New York—Business reports the past week give a blurred picture, still leaving the Autumn months to show how far recovery has gone and how much it has been hampered by disturbing governmental activities.

The most accurate index of commerce, car loadings, shows a drop in one week of 6,000 cars and almost 36,000 cars below the corresponding week of 1933.

On the other side of the ledger, Dun and Bradstreet reported retail sales from five to seven per cent higher than those of the preceding week. Wholesale business reported the second highest volume of the year. Steel operations in the Youngstown District climbed from 35 per cent to 37 per cent of capacity, while the American Iron and Steel Institute reported that employment in the industry had reached the highest level in four years during June when there were 335,966 people at work, an increase over the preceding June of 117,820. Estimates of production of cars and trucks for 1934 increased from 2,500,000 to 2,750,000.

Reports from Washington said James A. Moffett Federal Housing Administrator hoped to get the home renovation campaign started during August but that he is meeting powerful resistance in attempting to have construction costs reduced as a means of stimulating business. General Johnson ran into this same obstacle last year in drafting a construction industry code with organized labor demanding still higher wages and placing home building beyond reach of moderate income citizens.

Operations of the oil industry for the first six months of this year were reported on the most profitable basis of any first half-year period since 1930, and the world cotton consumption during the 1933-34 season was reported as the largest since the 1928-29 season.

As has been the case for several months, strikes throwing thousands of persons out of employment and decreasing purchasing power, and uncertainty as to the future course of the Federal government were reported slowing down future commitments so necessary to recovery.

DROUTH IN KENTUCKY ENDED, WEATHER BUREAU
REPORTS SAY

Save for dry spots in southwestern counties, where corn and tobacco are making but fair progress, all semblance of the drouth in Kentucky was removed during the past week, according to the weekly report of the weather bureau at Louisville.

Moderate to heavy rains occurred over the northern and eastern parts of the state. Excessive rains in a few northeastern counties caused extensive damage, by flooding along the streams and by washing of hillside fields.

Above normal temperatures favored rapid development of late crops in sections that have received adequate moisture, with corn, tobacco, pastures and forage crops showing continued improvement. Daily showers in the northern sections made the week unfavorable for haymaking and the humid condition, together with high temperature, was also unsuitable for recently housed tobacco.

Tobacco rust is spreading, the weather bureau reported, in the northern and eastern sections that have had too much rain and tomatoes are being damaged because of splitting and rotting.

Early tobacco is maturing rapidly but owing to the local character of previous rains ripening is uneven, especially in the Burley area. Some cutting occurred and much more will be cut this week.

Late crops and pastures in the extreme western counties need rain rather seriously, especially in the uplands. Lowland crops are not said to be suffering. Rains would benefit the crops in all the Purchase area and in some localities immediately east of the Cumberland—Green-ville Leader.

BARRELS, HOPS AND OPIUM BOUGHT FOR YUGOSLAVIA

The trade of Yugoslavia with the United States registered substantial expansion during 1933, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. The increased exports resulted chiefly from larger shipments of crude copper, hides and skins, pyrethrum flowers, barrels, hops and opium. The outstanding gain in Yugoslavia's import trade with the United States was in raw cotton, while the principal decreases were accounted for by mineral oils and electric machinery.

In response to advice of County Agent J. L. Miller, Madison county has a large number of new flocks of sheep. Most of them are small, but composed of well-bred animals, including purebred rams. The county agent advocates small flocks, given good care.

YES, THEY'RE PUSHING A LOT OVER HERE, TOO

The growing popularity of bicycling in England is revealed in a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. It appears as if the current year would be an all time peak as regards the number of bicycles on the road in that district. It is estimated by local dealers that the number of bicycles sold in the last five years has increased by about 75 per cent each year as compared with the preceding year until the opening of 1934. Tandems are proving very popular.

16TH ANNUAL CONVENTION

Ashland, Ky., Aug. 20—Detailed plans and final arrangements for the Sixteenth Annual Convention of the American Legion Department of Kentucky, were worked out Friday night in a joint meeting of the executive committees from the local post and Legion Auxiliary. General Chairman, "Tobe" Caldwell presided and talks were made by Department Commander, Junior Lackey and State Adjutant Tom Hayden.

This promises to be the largest convention the Department has ever enjoyed and every effort is being exerted to the end that it will also be the most successful in the history of the Legion in Kentucky. Hotel reservations are coming in rapidly and are being handled effectively by R. O. Orndorff, Chairman of the Housing Committee. It is requested that all visiting Legionnaires make their reservations as quickly as possible and take care of their registration immediately in order to be assured every courtesy and convenience to which they are entitled.

Among the outstanding features of the Convention will be a gigantic parade augmented by floats, mechanized field artillery and cavalry units from Camp Knox. The city is being beautifully decorated for this colorful occasion and red white and blue lights will illuminate the principal streets over which the parade will move. The Kentucky American Legion band will act as the official band of the Convention. Approximately fifteen drum and bugle corps will compete for the honor of representing Kentucky at the National Convention in Miami this fall. Several out-of-the-state bands will also compete for prizes. These contests will be held at Armco Field, Monday night, August 27. Flood lights are being erected and seats prepared to handle the large crowd expected. A beauty contest will be staged to choose the young lady who will represent the Department as Miss Kentucky for 1934 in the National Convention. It is expected that all the principal business establishments will close for the big parade, Monday, August 27th from twelve to four o'clock. Featured in this parade will be the newly organized but snappily uniformed Legion Junior Band from Barbourville, Kentucky. These boys, averaging in age about twelve, promise to be one of the most popular units of the convention. Each of them is the son of a Legionnaire.

A beautiful sixty-four page souvenir program is being mailed at this time to all posts and Auxiliary units throughout the state; to the delegates and alternates who will be present, and to other influential Legionnaires in this and adjoining states. It will carry all the necessary history, names and pictures of Legion officials, descriptive material and interesting photographs of and concerning Ashland and vicinity. Following are some "high spots" on the official program, tentative and subject to change without notice.

Saturday, August 25—Registration begins at the two principal hotels of the city.

Sunday, August 26—40 and 8 Grand Voiture of Kentucky parade and "Grand Wreck."

Monday morning, August 27—Business session open at Paramount Theatre. Afternoon: Annual Parade (route to be announced later). Night: Drum and Bugle Corps contest (Armco Field). Dance (Clydeside Casino) open to Legionnaires and the public.

Tuesday morning, August 28—Business session. Afternoon: Business session. Beauty contest. Annual State Golf Tournament, Bellefonte Country Club. Night: Department Commander's ball, Legionnaires, Auxiliary members and their escorts only, Clydeside Casino.

Wednesday morning, August 29—Business session and adjournment. V. L. Sturgill, Pres. Com.

COLLEGE'S STATE FAIR EXHIBIT TO SHOW LOWER COST
Economic production will be featured in the exhibits of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, at the Kentucky State Fair this year.

The dairy part of the exhibit, for instance, will show that one good cow is better than two poor producing cows. This exhibit will be based on the actual records of two Kentucky herds, one of which had twice as many cows as the other. The smaller herd, however, made more profit than the larger one.

Other parts of the college's exhibit will include the control of the Mexican bean beetle, the construction of modern ventilating systems for tobacco barns, the curing of meats, and the encouragement of pasture production.

The exhibit will be in the Grand stand building, and will be in charge of L. C. Brewer.

The demonstration orchard of Dr. E. M. Howard of Harlan county has 300 high-producing fruit trees, 1,000 strawberry plants and 2,200 grape vines.

NEW FARM MORTGAGE LAW

Farmers who are finding it difficult to meet the terms of mortgages may obtain a measure of relief by applying to the Federal Court, in accordance with provisions of the Frazier-Lemke bill enacted by the last Congress, according to C. J. Bradley of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Unless the creditors object when a farmer makes such a request, the farmer's holding are appraised and a plan is initiated whereby over a period of five years the farmer remains in possession of the farm and pays the payment of 15 percent of the appraised value of the farm plus 1 percent interest annually. The farmer also pays the taxes. At the end of the sixth year he may repurchase the farm by paying the remaining 85 percent of the appraised value.

If a creditor objects to this procedure, then the court must stay proceedings for five years, and the farmer, under the control of the court, retains possession of all or any part of the farm, for which he pays an annual rental. At the end of five years the farmer has the privilege of repurchasing the land.

In either procedure, Mr. Bradley points out that the rights of creditors are further protected by the fact that the court as trustee may order the sale of the property at any time upon the failure of the debtor to comply with the requirements of the law.

The major purpose of the new law is to give farmers further time to adjust their debts. Banks, insurance companies and other mortgage holders are relieved of the necessity of foreclosing in order to protect their rights, for, although the farmer is granted more time, the mortgage holder is fully assured that during this time his rights will be adequately looked after.

THE FARM AND HOME
(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Limber neck in chickens is caused by eating decayed flesh or vegetables or poison of any kind. The first symptom is paralysis of the neck muscles. Four or five drops of turpentine given in a tablespoonful of castor oil to each sick bird will cure most cases if treated in time.

Cottage cheese is a rather perishable product, and, therefore, should be made often and eaten fresh. If it is desired to keep it for a short while, place it in a clean sealed glass or earthenware vessel, cover, and keep in as cool a place as possible without freezing.

In buying garments, women should consider the cost of upkeep. Will the material launder? Are the style and trimmings such that it will not be a problem to launder? If it must be dry cleaned, will it soil quickly, and are there pleats that will add to the cost? Will it respond to sponging and pressing at home, or must it be dry cleaned often?

In canning, select only firm, tender vegetables and fruits that are in their prime. Well-matured vegetables are often hard and stringy, while small, immature ones lack flavor and shrink in the jar. Can vegetables immediately after they are gathered.

Many farmers protect the bright parts of implements against rust by oiling or greasing them after using. Oil drained from the crank case of an automobile or tractor is good for this purpose. Wood parts should be painted where machinery is outdoors.

Overloading the washing machine is false economy. Keep the size of the load within the capacity recommended for the machine. Better work is done where the proper amount of clothes are placed in the machine.

BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER

MAY GET TO GO TO NEW YORK
Since the National American Beauty Pageant, Madison Square Garden, New York has requested the Kentucky State Fair to enter the winners in its State-wide Beauty Contest, week of September 10-15 for the handsome prizes in this national event, the State-wide Beauty Contest Committee has decided to give the winners a choice of the honor of entering the Great National Pageant, or a trip to the Century of Progress Exposition. The winner will have the choice of accompanying the first winner to the New York beauty pageant, or to the Century of Progress Exposition.

All persons, clubs or associations desiring to enter a candidate from their respective counties, should get in touch at once with the State Wide Beauty Contest Committee of the Kentucky State Fair, Louisville, Kentucky.

SAYS CHICKENPOX MAY BE PREVENTED

Chickenpox may be prevented to a large degree through clean, sanitary surroundings and use of chickenpox vaccine, says Dr. F. E. Hull of the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Poultry houses should be dry, well ventilated and lighted, and the birds should not be crowded. New birds should be kept apart from the flock for two weeks. Shipping crates should be cleaned and disinfected. Healthy, vigorous flocks kept in sanitary surroundings are apt to have chickenpox as an unthrifty flock is, but once the disease is contracted healthy birds resist the disease better and respond more quickly to treatment.

Birds that are in good condition, free from coccidiosis and worms and less than 14 weeks old are most likely to be immediately benefited by vaccination. Persons handling the vaccine should not handle the poultry as the infection may be generalized by contact. Poultry should be on range for 30 days afterwards. The entire flock should be treated at the same time. A veterinarian will be able to supply the vaccine.

Further information regarding chickenpox and poultry parasites may be obtained from Circulars 244 and 265, obtained by writing to the Kentucky Experiment Station at Lexington.

R. E. Nute, commercial fruit grower of Jefferson county, is raising 5,000 turkeys in his apple and peach orchards. The turkeys are corralled among the trees for several days, and then moved to new quarters. Insects injurious to trees are cleaned up, and manure is deposited. "The turkeys are the biggest help I have found for the success of the orchards," says Mr. Nute.

COLLEGE COSTS ARE REDUCED

Arrangements are being made whereby 4-H club girls may live cooperatively in order to reduce their expenses at the University of Kentucky. A house to accommodate 20 girls has been leased at a low cost per person, and the girls will obtain much of their food from home, do their own cooking, house work and laundering, and even buy their college supplies cooperatively.

The committee arranging the cooperative living plan points out that the girls not only will save materially in their cash outlay for a college education, but also will obtain valuable training in housekeeping and home management. Household duties will be so divided that each girl will do an equal amount of work. Credit at retail prices will be given for food sent from home. This each girl's expenses for board will be the difference between the value of the food she furnishes and the cash rate.

Many club girls have been canning fruits, vegetables and meats in their club projects and will draw on these supplies to help provide for the cooperative table while in college. The girls also will make their own clothes, since many of them have had clothing making work in their 4-H club. It also is expected that the girls will obtain from their homes their bedding and much of the furnishings for the cooperative house.

This is said to be the first 4-H club girls' cooperative project of its kind in the United States and those sponsoring it believe it will provide a way whereby many worthy girls may obtain a college education.

BABE SLEEPS WITH BIG SNAKE BY SIDE
12-Foot-Long Bedfellow Doesn't Turb 12-Months-Old Son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Byrd

Mrs. Willard H. Byrd, of Oak Hill, this county, is afraid of the big, bad snake, and does not deny it. She has had several experiences this summer with various kinds of reptiles around her home and it has made her a little shaky.

Sunday morning she had an experience that made her blood run cold. While she was busy in the kitchen preparing breakfast, she heard a peculiar hissing sound in the bedroom. When she made an investigation she found her twelve months old son peacefully sleeping while at the same time sharing his tiny crib and pillow was a big black snake. Mrs. Byrd quickly removed her baby from the crib and summoned her husband, who was at the barn milking. He came to the house and dispatched the unwelcome visitor. However, no harm was found to be done by the snake.

It is a mystery how this intruder entered the house, as it is a new home and seems impossible for a snake of any size to gain entrance. As this is the seventh reptile to be killed near this home, Mrs. Byrd finds herself earnestly hoping that it is the last of the family. At any rate, Mrs. Byrd does not care to share house room and bed with snakes.—Falmouth Outlook.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES AGAINST INFANTILE PARALYSIS

As a precautionary measure, the State Department of Health is seeking to provide an adequate supply of infantile paralysis convalescent serum and normal adult serum for use in the possible event of an epidemic outbreak of the disease in Kentucky.

At present, infantile paralysis is not sufficiently prevalent anywhere in the State to furnish occasion for serious alarm. Scattered cases, however, are being reported from different sections. This, coupled with the fact that infantile paralysis usually reaches its highest incidence in Kentucky during August, September and October, and with the additional fact that the Pacific Coast is now experiencing an outbreak of epidemic proportions, makes it of first importance that no practicable precaution be neglected.

"Control of infantile paralysis," says Dr. M. H. Jensen, State epidemiologist, "would seem to lie in early diagnosis and early administration of convalescent serum. It is only in the early or preparalytic stages of the disease that convalescent serum appears to be of value. The secret of making a diagnosis is in the acute or early stages of the disease lies, in turn, in thinking of the possibility of infantile paralysis in any ill child, whose trouble is not immediately and definitely diagnosed as some other condition. The symptoms of particular diagnostic importance are: Extreme irritability and resistance on the part of the child to handling, even by its mother—something altogether unusual in childhood disease; stiffness of the back and neck upon the shoulder and prostration, pulse and respiration out of proportion to temperature, which is ordinarily under 102 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Convalescent serum must be given promptly. While the value of this serum is still controversial, the patient should always be given the benefit of the doubt. Even though a suspected case should subsequently prove to be not one of infantile paralysis, no harm would have been done by giving of the serum."

Because of the extreme difficulty of providing convalescent serum in quantities sufficient to take care of all preparalytic cases, or suspected cases, of infantile paralysis, normal adult serum is being collected from healthy adults. Several recent reports indicate that adult serum is as efficacious as the convalescent serum.

The manner in which infantile paralysis occurs would seem, in Dr. Jensen's opinion, to indicate that, while the virus is probably distributed by means of human carriers, a case of the disease offers little danger of contagion to immediate contacts. Few families develop more than one case of infantile paralysis. Immediate development of the disease in contacts outside of the family is also rare. It is recommended, therefore, that to conserve the supply of serum, contacts be given adult whole blood intramuscularly or merely be watched closely and given serum in the event of development of symptoms of infantile paralysis. In any event the active case of the disease should be isolated and no children (and no adults outside the family) should be allowed to come in contact with it for at least three weeks after the acute onset.

Arrangements have been made by the Bureau of Bacteriology to supply convalescent serum, free of charge to the indigent. The request is made that patients able to pay be charged $1.00 for each dose of convalescent or adult serum and that this sum be remitted to the Bureau.

To facilitate distribution, a number of county health departments, located in the eastern and central portions of the State, have been designated as depositories. These departments are as follows:

Perry County Health Department Hazard.
Boyd County Health Department, Hazard.
Boyd County Health Department, Ahland.
Madison County Health Department, Richmond.
Warren County Health Department, Bowling Green.
Knox County Health Department, Hazard.

ment, Barbourville.

Orders for convalescent serum or normal adult serum should be telephoned or telegraphed to the Bureau of Bacteriology, State Department of Health, Louisville, Kentucky, or to any one of the county health departments enumerated above. To secure prompt service, orders should be sent to the nearest station.

Should conditions so warrant, similar depositories will be established in western Kentucky.

COLLEGE NEWS

Morehead, Ky., August 25.—Registration for the fall term at Morehead State Teachers College has been set for Monday, September 17 according to announcement made by Acting-dean Chiles Van Antwerp today. Freshmen, however, will be required to enter Friday, September 14, for special orientation exercises for new students.

Following the lead of larger colleges, Morehead plans to inaugurate a special program this fall for new students. It is hoped that this method will facilitate the process of adaptation and that the students will be able to follow the school routine immediately upon opening day. On Friday, new students will register and rooms will be assigned them. Continuing through Sunday, various types of social functions will be held for the freshmen, as well as physical examinations and aptitude. Faculty advisors will be assigned to outline the curricula for the new students and to aid them in filling out their schedules for the fall term.

The college enrollment for the fall term is expected to be appreciably increased over the same period last year due to the change in qualifications made by the recodification of the Kentucky State School Code, which requires sixty-four hours of college work for eligibility to teach in the Kentucky school system. An amendment to the Act, passed by the last regular session of the General Assembly, permits teachers holding the Elementary Certificate to have them extended until September, 1935, and the administration of the college expects many of those persons who will be unqualified after next year to complete their college work for the Standard Certificate here next fall.

Two thousand and more attended the 4-H and Utopia Free Fair held at Florence Fair Grounds last Saturday. The day was enjoyed by all attending and the fair was considered a success in every detail. L. Hemphill of Constance, with a 13-inch foot scored first for the man with the biggest foot. Mr. and Mrs. John Snelling, of Burlington, won the prize for the largest family with eight at the fair and several children absent. These bands were the "Kentucky Pioneers" of Hebron, "The Boone County Ramblers" of Florence, "The Gunpowder Ridge Runners" of Limaburg, "The Harmony Girls" of Constance, and the "Petit Brothers" of Petersburg. BELLEVIEW DEFEATS BOB & GENE IN LAST GAME OF SERIES

The Elsmere boys journeyed to the Bellevue ball park last Sunday to give the team at that place a sound trimming, but were defeated by the score of 7 to 4. This was the last game of a series of three games.

Bellevue obtained nine hits off Ellis' pitching, while 12 hits were chalked up for Bob & Gene off the hurling of Deck.

A SURPRISE

8 TO 9 WAS FINAL SCORE BETWEEN BURLINGTON AND BELLEVIEW WITH BELLEVIEW ON TOP--"JAY" RYLE PITCHED GOOD GAME.

Yes, the result of the game between Burlington and Bellevue proved to be very much of a surprise. The Burlington nine were surprised at even losing the game, while the Bellevue nine and both Burlington and Bellevue fans were surprised at the lop-sided score.

However, with the smooth pitching of "Jay" Ryle, and the credible support given him by his teammates, there just wasn't a chance for the Burlington team. Out of nine innings there were 6 in which only three of the Burlington men were sent to bat. In other words, there were three up and three down in six different innings.

Eight of the ten players that played in the Burlington line-up, left the field without a hit to their credit. Dudgeon was the only man on the team to give "Jay" any trouble, and it was he who poked three of the four hits allowed to Bellevue.

Bellevue hammered Afterkirk rather freely, getting fourteen hits during the game and scoring eight runs.

Those who did not witness this game might think that a game with such a score could not be very interesting, but that was not so with this game. Both teams played a very nice game in the field. Bellevue was more fortunate in hitting in the right place and in the right time, while it seemed that Burlington nearly always hit in the fielding territory.

The elimination now being played by the Boone county teams calls for three defeats before the team is eliminated. There hasn't been any teams eliminated yet, but Florence, because of the tragic death of Archie Cooper, one of their leading players has withdrawn from the elimination.

The players of the remaining teams join the Florence team in their regret for this sad accident, and they also wish to extend their sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

The games scheduled for this week are Hebron at Bellevue. The score of the game played between these two teams when they last met was 3 to 2, Bellevue. They have each lost one game and they will both try to make one the total defeat to be counted again. Burlington and Petersburg look up but the place of the game has not yet been determined. The score of the last game between Petersburg and Burlington was 2 to 1, Burlington.

PROPERTY OWNERS

OF BOONE COUNTY WERE 3 PER CENT DELINQUENT IN PAYMENT OF 1932-33 TAXES--ASSESSED VALUATION AMOUNTS TO $16,796,509.

Boone county property owners were 3 per cent delinquent in payment of their 1932-33 taxes, as shown by a survey of tax delinquency of the state of Kentucky, just received by the Bureau of Commerce acting District Manager S. M. Sauley, announced. The survey gives this county's assessed property valuation as $16,796,509; the amount due for taxes as $825,18, of which $1571 had been uncollected when the survey was made, showing therefore a delinquency of 3 per cent.

These figures are included in a preliminary statement of property tax collections and delinquency for the state of Kentucky as announced by Director William L. Austin, of the Bureau of the Census. Similar surveys were made of all states and were requested by officials of state and governmental units, specialists in municipal finance, representatives of insurance companies and other investing interests as well as various federal relief agencies.

The purposes are to indicate areas that have suffered most from the depression as reflected in non-payment of taxes, the relation of such tax delinquency to municipal credit, the need for state and federal aid, and the results of recent tax legislation on the collection of taxes. The system of administration for tax collection and enforcement is also to be considered. This is one of three major projects financed by the Civil Work Administration as part of the national recovery program.

"Current tax delinquency as to levies under the general property tax in the whole State of Kentucky is estimated to average 11 per cent, this average being based upon reports of about 57 per cent of both the total assessments and total levies in the State," Director Austin said.

"The distribution of delinquency as between various counties appears to differ very widely, the reports indicating percentages of delinquency as low as 2 per cent, as high as 60 per cent. Any explanation of this variation seems to rest upon both efficiency of enforcement and severity of adverse economic conditions among the taxpayers."

There are approximately 928 levies of government in Kentucky levying general property taxes, viz., the State, 129 counties, 387 cities and towns, 2 villages (Union in Boone County, Worthington in Greer in Boone County), 365 school districts and 75 drainage districts.

Supt. D. H. Norris and family spent a very pleasant day recently at the home of Ralph Cason at Bellevue.

MILK MEETINGS

HELD IN BOONE COUNTY LAST WEEK BIG HELP IN LAUNCHING NEW MILK ORGANIZATION--ALL APRODUCERS ARE GIVEN OPPORTUNITY TO JOIN

Three milk meetings were held last week in Boone county and a big start was made in launching the new milk organization. About three hundred milk producers have become members within less than a week. They realize that such an organization is indispensable and inevitable.

The aim of the United Milk Producers Association is to unite all milk producers in the Cincinnati milk shed in one big association to locate and to restore the producer's share of the consumer's dollar, which has been lost or appropriated during the stress and storm of the past three years. It is only by united effort of the milk producers that their price, test, and base can be boosted.

Every milk producer in the county is to be given an opportunity to join within the next week, and everyone should join at once. The earlier that Boone county presents a solid, united front, the easier will be the task of securing members in other counties and in Ohio and Indiana. Do not delay joining.

Delay retards quick development, which is necessary to success. Boost the "United" and it will boost you. Do not wait to see what your neighbor is going to do, but join at once and your neighbor will follow.

Meetings will be held as follows: August 29--Petersburg, 7:30 p. m., slow time.

August 31--School house at Verona, 7:30 p. m. (slow time).

Sept. 1--Woodward's Garage, Devon Station, Dixie Highway, 7:30 p. m. (slow time).

Sept. 5--School House at Piner, Kenton county, 7:30 p. m. (slow time).

The following persons are on committees to secure new members: Joel Gray, Burlington, Ky. Chairman.

Harold Crigler Hebron Ky. M. L. Aylor, Hebron Ky.

E. J. Aylor Hebron, Ky. E. L. Williams, Bullittsville, Ky.

Jonas Stephens Bullittsville, Ky. J. C. Bedinger, Walton, Ky.

V. P. Kerns, Walton, Ky. Lister Hemphill Constance, Ky.

Mike Dye, Burlington, Ky. J. C. Lane, Florence, Ky.

Mr. Woodward, Devon Station. W. J. Williams Union, Ky.

R. E. Barlow, Union, Ky. Russell Miller, Union, Ky.

Bernard Jones, Union, Ky. Ryle Bros., Union, Ky.

George Baker, Beaver Ky. J. T. Cleek, Walton, Ky. R. R.

Robert Robinson, Walton, Ky. R. T. J. Helle, Walton, Ky. R. R.

Don't forget to sign the petition with reference to calling a strike. It is the only way that the committee who has charge of fighting for a better price in the milk shed can determine the sentiment of the milk producers with reference to a strike. The Committee does not want to call a strike if it is necessary, without finding that the great majority of milk producers in the milk shed is in favor of it. Don't delay signing the application for membership in the U. M. P. A. We need it now. We need it in our fight before the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission for a better price this summer.

PASSES AWAY AT AGE OF NINETY--ONE YEARS AT HIS HOME IN CINCINNATI--BORN AND REARED IN BURLINGTON--WAS BUSINESS MAN

More than 91 years of vigorous health and rare adventure have come to an end for one of Cincinnati's most colorful patriarchs.

Milton L. Campbell, farmer, Morgan raider and for 22 years a member of the Cincinnati Fire Department until his retirement as Assistant Chief in 1909.

Mr. Campbell died Saturday night at his home 1029 Locust St., Walnut Hills. He became ill shortly after returning from a month's fishing trip in Michigan, three weeks ago up to that time his only illness had been three months of camp fever in 1863, although in late years he used a cane frequently because of injuries received in fire fighting.

Firemen's Protective Association services for Mr. Campbell was held at W. Mack Johnson's Funeral Home at Upland Place. Marshall William will be in charge.

Pallbearers representing the Firemen's Protective Association will be retired firemen. Mr. Campbell was the founder of the association and was its first president.

Mr. Campbell was a member of Watlier Lodge of Masons and a life member of the Scottish Rite.

Heart disease was the primary factor among the complications that caused Mr. Campbell's death.

His daughter Miss Helen Campbell said he appeared to be in good health after returning from his fishing trip.

Mr. Campbell was a native of Burlington and rode with Morgan's raiders, mounted infantry. He was one of approximately 150 men who escaped when most of the raiders were caught on Buffington Island in the Ohio River in July, 1863. A few days later he and the others all were captured. The 19 year old boy from Burlington was sent to a prison in Columbus, Ohio, transferred to Chicago then returned to the South in exchange of prisoners early in 1865. He was active in a futile attempt to organize the raiders, conducting a recruiting drive in West Virginia.

After Lee's surrender Mr. Campbell was one of the surviving raiders who was fled to the Carolinas and guarded Jeff Davis, President of the Confederacy in his flight.

Attempting to divert pursuit, they took a different course, traveling thru Georgia and burning bridges behind them until General Basil W. Duke, their leader, surrendered at Augusta, Ga.

Mr. Campbell went to Cincinnati in 1868, where he worked for the Merchants Union Express Co., and became a volunteer in the Cincinnati Fire Department, receiving $2 a month, being allowed to drive his lightning rod wagon to the fire.

He became a real driver in 1873 after serving in an important fire. In 1874 he was made Captain of the Thirteen on Bank Street. In the same year he married Miss Sophia B. Hanberger.

Next Mr. Campbell was transferred to Glits Station, 6th near Vine street, where he was in charge of Cincinnati's first hook and ladder wagon and where he introduced the first fireman's pole (quicker) than quarters. He became assistant Chief in 1895, serving in that capacity until his retirement.

After retirement from the Fire Department Mr. Campbell worked in the harness and real estate interests of his brother, Braxton Campbell. In 1928 he retired and went to California for a vacation. Since his return he occupied much of his time in wood carving, making smoking stands and other small articles for his friends.

Surviving Mr. Campbell are five children--Miss Helen Campbell, teacher of physical education at the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. W. W. Shaw, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. L. D. Sargent, Hollywood, California; Milton L. Campbell, Jr., Canton, Ohio, Assistant State Auditor and Samuel W. Campbell, Canadian World War veteran now living in Canada, three granddaughters Mrs. Leroy Michael, Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Betty Lee Sargent now on a student mission in Japan, and Miss Stella Campbell, Canton, one grandson Jas. E. Sargent and one great grandson Leroy Michael, Jr., Milton D. Campbell, widely known in Cincinnati politics as former National Vice Commander of the American Legion, Wendell D. Campbell, President and Treasurer of the Perkins-Campbell Company, and Braxton W. Campbell Co., Borgan and Robert Campbell, all of Cincinnati, are nephews.

ACCIDENT VICTIM

SUCCUMBS AT COVINGTON HOSPITAL FROM SKULL FRACTURE--WAS RIDING IN CAR OF W. H. KIRKLEY, FLORENCE, CHIROPRACTOR.

A verdict of accidental death due to skull fracture was returned Sunday by Coroner James P. Riffe in the death of Archie Cooper, 26, Florence, injured fatally Saturday.

Cooper and W. H. Kirkley, chiropractor of Florence were returning from Covington, where they had purchased some parts for Cooper's car. As they neared the Erlanger city limit, Cooper said, "Look Doc."

Dr. Kirkley turned his head to see what Cooper was calling his attention, and before he could swerve the car, smashed into the truck which was parked on the highway. Dr. Kirkley stated that he thought the truck was moving in the same direction he was going.

The body was removed from St. Elizabeth Hospital where Cooper died at 2:30 a. m. Sunday.

Services for Cooper were conducted Monday at the residence at 9:30 Tuesday morning. His widow, Mrs. Ruth Carpenter Cooper, and one son, Wendell Cooper, survive him.

LIMABURG MAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE SATURDAY

Leon Aylor, of Limaburg, narrowly escaped being seriously injured last Saturday when he attempted to drive the tail of O. R. Russ back into the lot. The animal had managed to get out of the regular pasture, and was moving in the lot adjoining the residence. Mrs. Russ called Mr. Aylor and asked him to wire the gate to the highway. Mr. Aylor entered the lot to place the animal back in the pasture. Just as he picked the chain up which was fastened to the animal's neck the bull butted him, knocking him down, then stepped on him, breaking his ankle. Lloyd Kelly and Robert King, who were nearby loading cream cans rushed to Aylor's rescue. Kelly beat the bull with a club driving it back from Aylor. The timely appearance of this help probably saved Mr. Aylor's life.

He was taken to Christ hospital for treatment, and returned home where he is recuperating nicely.

ERLANGER BLACK SOX TO MEET BELLEVIEW MONDAY--LABOR DAY

The Erlanger Black Sox have the reputation of being a very strong team and have been playing a fair brand of base ball during this season. Fans will miss a real treat if they miss these games.

No game has been scheduled for Sunday due to the double header scheduled for Monday.

CLIP IS SOLD

BOONE COUNTY WOOL POOL SELLS CLIP AT WALTON LAST MONDAY TO SABEL & SONS OF LOUISVILLE--DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED THIS YEAR.

The Boone County Wool Pool sold the county clip of approximately 10,500 fleeces on last Monday at Walton to Mr. Sael & Sons of Louisville.

The pool has encountered severe difficulty in selling this year. The price is reported not to be as good as members expected but still a considerable advance above the present market. The clip would not have been sold at this time, except at the request of a large number of growers who need their money and would rather sell now for less than hold until after the present strike difficulty is settled. Strike clouds have hung over the market since early July and the mills have bought hardly a clip of wool all so far.

The wool will be delivered at Walton on next Tuesday, September 4th, Burlington on Wednesday the 5th, and Petersburg on Thursday the 6th.

DEATH STRIKES GAVEL
FROM RAINEY'S HANDS

Death has stricken the gavel from the hands of Speaker Rainey. The unexpected demise of a speaker of the house of representatives terminates the career of an able and conscientious statesman. There is very genuine regret that fate has intervened to remove from the scene of statecraft the venerable Illinois congressman who has contributed so signally to work out of the legislative program under which recovery processes have been placed in motion.

As presiding officer of the house it was his privilege and responsibility to fill the role of one of the most influential positions in the national government. This duty devolved upon him in a period of unprecedented difficulty. The accumulated wisdom and season judgment which Speaker Rainey acquired through years of service in congress made him especially qualified for the important task. The nation is saddened by his death.

There is no occasion for apprehension over loss of the distinguished leader because of fear that

WASHINGTON SNAP-SHOTS

Maybe groundless, but the whisper is passing around the Capital that something "new and big" is to be announced by the Administration with President Roosevelt back at his desk. The whippersnays it is to be as startling as the AAA, the PWA and, perhaps, the NRA.

There seems some reason to give credence to the report. The adventures of the "Brain Trust" into planned economy has not brought the expected recovery. Estimates of unemployment still range from 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 and the Relief Administration has 16,000 persons on its rolls. Huge disbursements by the Public Works Administration has not stimulated industry because while the funds were being handed out by one agency, others were curbing the flow of private capital and creating uncertainties to prevent business from moving forward.

Accepting that something new is coming, the question is whether on the verge of the November elections Mr. Roosevelt will try new experiments in regimentation through planned economy or accept the advice of the industrialists that they will lead the way to recovery if given leeway, with sufficient governmental supervision to protect the public interest. These two schools of thought—planned economy versus traditional American initiative—have been battling for the President's ear, with the first having had its inning. Industry contends that through the early years of the depression the anti-trust laws prevented them from sitting down together and attempting to devise means of restoring business. They had all threats hanging over them. Then, with the NRA relaxing the anti-trust laws, every move of the Administration has been toward Washington regulation and discrediting of business through investigations and statements.

Incidentally, still listening to the whisperers, it is said that Messrs. Wallace, Tugwell and Miss Perkins do not know exactly what is coming but that Professor Moley, General Johnson and Donald Rich do. That trio sprung the NRA. And don't listen to the common reports that Professor Moley, the original ace of the "Brain Trust" is no longer a power behind the throne although he is out of his official job.

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma is unlimbering the trench mortars of his campaign for further inflation, but apparently has failed to recruit additional aid from the White House. He is determined to "go to the people" with the issue. It will be worth watching to see, if he does, whether the people want the value of their money tampered with further in view of experiences abroad with inflation.

The United States Information Service, operating under the National Emergency Council is rapidly becoming one of the most popular and most active units of the current Federal agencies, but it has yet to adopt an alphabetical listing of the 49 agencies' reflect real efficiency. For the benefit of readers of this newspaper who may have occasion to seek information in Washington, the office of the United States Information Service is 500 Commercial National Bank Building, Washington.

There was no indication upon the President's political swing across the continent that his popularity had lessened any and his promises to the sorely stricken drought areas were quickly translated into votes by the political observers who accompanied Mr. Roosevelt. The intensive manner in which he went about his rear-platform speech is sufficient indication of how important the Administration rates the coming elections for Congress.

FRENCH FACE TRADEWITH
U. S. SINKS TO NEW LOW LEVELS

Calais, France's lace exporters see little possibility of a revival in their former lively trade until such time as this product obtains a better competitive position in American market, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. Exports to the United States during the month of May decreased to the lowest level on record, being valued at only $59,171, compared with $86,056 for the preceding month of April and $198,620 for May, 1933.

A Leslie county 4-H club boy earned his Junior Week expenses working in a garden, and obtained vegetables and supplies for a club camp.

REVOLT IN TRADE UNION
RANKS STIRS WASHINGTON

Washington—Close observers of political weather vane expressed the conviction that the revolt within the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, resulting in an outright loss of 7,000 members in the Detroit automotive manufacturing district and prospects of additional heavy losses, gives conclusive evidence that the trend of collective bargaining is away from the A. F. of L. and toward employee representation units in which spokesmen for workers are chosen from their own ranks.

An Associated Press dispatch from Detroit quoted Arthur E. Greer, president of a company local of the United Automobile Workers Federal Union, as saying:

"We want to do the fair thing by the management, and we expect the management to do the fair thing by us. That could not, we felt, if the management felt it was doing business with persons who no connection with the business."

Reports from Lansing said employees of one of the largest motor companies in that city "had taken similar action" and would withdraw from the A. F. of L. in favor of "an independent association exclusively for auto workers."

Officials of the federation, meeting in Atlantic City, declared that "prompt steps will be taken to reorganize the union so that it may again be affiliated with the federation."

But Washington watchers of trends see in the Detroit union revolt a definite indication that the federation is losing what grip it had on the major trades. That does not mean the demand for collective bargaining is declining, but that the wane of trade unionism leaves employee representation in the ascendency.

Such developments are of great political consequence, and the next Congress is not likely to jump so readily every time A. F. of L. heads crack the whip in behalf of pet bills that would give trade union organizers additional Government support in recruiting new members.

Twenty-eight Boyd county home-makers received home canning instructions, besides regular and relief demonstrations.

IMPORTANT MESSAGE

From State Commissioner Of Agriculture
To The People Of The State

LOUISVILLE, KY., (Special).—State Commissioner of Agriculture, Eugene Flowers, is so enthusiastic over the prospects for the greatest State Fair in the 32 years' history of the institution, that he has issued the following letter to the people of the entire state:

To the People of Kentucky:

As your Commissioner of Agriculture, and Chairman of your State Fair Board, I wish to say in all sincerity, that your State Fair promises to be the greatest in the way of exhibits and other interesting attractions for you, in years, if not in all its history.

EUGENE FLOWERS

This has been made possible as the result of our being able to start in this year without a dollar of indebtedness to anybody, and with ample resources to offer more attractive prizes to exhibitors, as well as to secure more and better entertainment features for the Fair's visitors.

As to the live-stock, horticultural and other products of the farm and home, they, alone, will be well worth your going to see. But they are not all by any means; we have again arranged for the greatest horse show ever put together in America.

The agricultural-machinery and farm seed exhibits, will be the biggest in years. Then, we will have a State-Wide Beauty Contest in which the loveliest of our Kentucky beauties from all over the state, will compete for handsome prizes. There will also be other beauty contests for "redheaded" girls, blondes and other beauties; also, for babies; children's games, daily athletic performances in our new $25,000 athletic field, and some forty big shows on the "Midway"—something for every member of the family to see and enjoy.

We will also have a very impressive array of exhibits in the Fair's "million-dollar", mammoth Merchants and Manufacturers Building which every body will want to see this year.

It is your fair, and as your Commissioner of Agriculture, I want to see you, there, if one and have a good, big, time taking in the many things of interest we have provided for your entertainment, your pleasure and education. Come, mix and mingle with your old friends from the different parts of the state, as well as for forming new acquaintances. It will do you good.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) EUGENE FLOWERS,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

COUNTIES ADOPT BUDGET SYSTEM

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 27.—County budget systems have been adopted in 82 counties at a cost of approximately $55 to the county and county officials are co-operating enthusiastically in the installation of the uniform budget made mandatory by legislation enacted at the 1934 session of the General Assembly, according to State Inspector and Examiner Nat. B. Sewell, under whose supervision the county budget act is being administered.

"I anticipate that net savings of not less than a million dollars will be made in the various counties the first fiscal year as result of the budgeting of expenditures," Mr. Sewell said, adding, "a still greater saving should result in the next fiscal year."

The county budget system is being accepted with enthusiasm by county officials, who report that they find the uniform system a simple, inexpensive but effective plan for handling financial affairs of a county, it is revealed by communications received at the State Inspector and Examiner's office.

The budget act requires creation of a county budget commission composed of the county judge, county attorney and a third commissioner selected by the fiscal court who holds no elective office, and are gratified that they realize the county budget commission is its possibilities as an instrument required to estimate probable income of the county and set up a budget in which specified sums are allotted for various items of governmental expense. Money can not be spent unless it is budgeted and the treasurer is required to submit to the commission a monthly statement on expenditures of all budget units, it was explained by Mr. Sewell.

Funds may be transferred from one fund to another if the budget commission and fiscal court approve. In installations of the budget systems there have been revealed abuses of various natures, especially in the fee system, it was said, as belief was expressed that the disclosures would be sufficient to correct the condition.

The budget system requires that provision be made for taking care of all bonded indebtedness. The money budgeted for this purpose constitutes an inviolate fund and can be spent for no other purpose than payment of interest and retirement of bonds.

"I regard this as the most constructive and far-reaching piece of legislation since adoption of the present constitution," Mr. Sewell said as he paid tribute to county officials for their helpful cooperation and the readiness with which they have recognized in the budget system a plan designed to provide for more orderly and economical expenditures of county funds. "We appreciate the co-operation which has been given by county officials in inaugurating the system and are gratified that they realize the county budget commission is its possibilities as an instrument of genuine financial reform in county government," Mr. Sewell concluded.

LARGE INCREASE IN UNITED STATES TRADE WITH EGYPT

The trade turnover between the United States and Egypt during the first quarter of 1934 showed a considerable increase over the corresponding period of 1933, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. Exports to Egypt totaled $1,383,000 against $688,000 in the first quarter of 1933, while exports into the United States amounted to $2,464,700 and $1,076,000 respectively. The principal American exports to Egypt include automobiles, iron and steel, lubricating oil, wireless apparatus, synthetic sodium nitrate, wheat flour, apples, leaf tobacco, tires and tubes, and machinery while the trading United States imports from Egypt are cotton, wool, onions, goat and sheep skins, and beeswax.

LARGE DEMAND IN ARGENTINA FOR NON-ASSEMBLED RADIO SETS

Pointing out that there is little demand in Argentina for complete foreign radio sets, a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department states that the demand for foreign-made chassis, non-assembled and partially manufactured apparatus, tubes and parts is now at its highest point. This will be interesting to manufacturers in this section like the extensive Ken-Rad plant at Owensboro, Ky. The assembling of parts and sets by local firms and branches of American firms has become sufficient to more than supply the demand for radio in Argentina. All chassis, whether imported or assembled locally, are supplied with locally-made cabinets. Exports of radio materials from the United States to the Argentine market during 1933 are valued at $1,835,753.

Stanley Reed, of Maysville, is slated to succeed the late Judge A. M. J. Cochran as judge of the eastern district of Kentucky. There are hundreds of susceptible applicants for this $10,000 political plum.

DEPOSITS INCREASE

Frankfort, Ky.—Deposits in the state banks of Kentucky increased $12,352,420 within the last year, advancing from a total of $144,328,272 on June 30, 1933 to $156,681,74 as of last June it is revealed in a composite statement reflecting condition of the state banking system, compiled by the State Banking Department, and given out by State Banking Commissioner Jas. R. Dorman.

While deposits were showing an increase banks reduced their loans $15,034,930.53 is shown by the fact that loans and discounts of all state banks totaled $120,138,798.90 at end of the fiscal year, June 30, as contrasted with $135,173,729.43 one year ago.

Yet another indication of improved conditions of state banks is reflected in the fact that they now include among their assets United States government bonds worth $23,882,196.43 as compared with government securities, worth $13,536,941.55 one year ago.

Bills payable or rediscounts, which represents money borrowed from larger banks, decreased within the year $5,993,410.35 ending reduced banks paid off their obligations which last year totaled $6,551,935.98, until this year it amounted to only $758,525.13.

The capital structure of state banks has been strengthened as is shown by a total capital stock of $26,389,600 this year as against $21,548,345.96 last year. Overdrafts totaled $56,047.88 less this year than last, having been reduced from $137,630.89 to $81,583.01.

Condition of the state banking system is much improved over that of a year ago, said Banking Commissioner James R. Dorman. This is construed by the Banking Commissioner as reflecting great improvement in general business conditions as well as the restoration of confidence among the people. Much hoarded money has been returned to the banks, is his opinion.

"In addition to the considerable increase in bank deposits it will be noted that the people who have borrowed money from state banks have reduced their indebtedness to the banks by a sum greater than the increase in deposits," Mr. Dorman pointed out. "The effect of that is to increase liquidity of the banks, which together with the strengthening in capital structure that has taken place in the year, has brought about a highly stable and secure banking condition. The improvement that has taken place within the year has been remarkable and is very gratifying," the Banking Commissioner said.

Total resources of banks under supervision of the state department have increased $7,634,565.18, rising to $239,412,470.67 this year as compared with $231,777,905.49 last year. The condensed statement was compiled from statement of 346 banks submitted as of June 30.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS

The salaries named are subject to a deduction of not to exceed 5 per cent during fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, as a measure of economy, and also to a deduction of 3 1/2 per cent toward a retirement annuity.

All states except Iowa, Vermont, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia have received less than their quota of appointments in the apportioned departmental service in Washington, D. C.

Full information may be obtained from the Secretary of the U. S. Civil Service Board of Examiners at the post office or court house in any city which has a post office of the first or second class, or from the United Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

FAMOUS SCIENTIST WARNS OF "STATISM" DANGERS

Washington.—The capital city's coterie of Brain Trusters who are accustomed to hearing their views lauded by some so-called intellectuals were called sharply to task when Dr. Robert A. Millikan, president of the California Institute of Technology, declared in a radio address that the nation's worst enemies are the "political philosophers and sociologists, some of them in high places," who are promoting a system of what he called "Statism."

"Some of them call it communism, some socialism, some something else, but I will use the broader term Statism to include this whole tendency toward the government's ownership and operation of everything," said the internationally known scientist. He added that "this whole movement weakens self-reliance, discourages private initiative, diminishes opportunity, stimulates bonus marches, veterans' rackets, even teachers' Federal lobbies (I admit it with shame)."

Dr. Millikan said the present efforts of political philosophers in high places are directed toward pushing men back "into the sort of bosom of the State," and asserted that "this decay of men is far and away the most insidious menace to realization of the American dream." He described the "American dream" as the hope that this country may always remain a land of freedom and opportunity.

"Freedom of speech and of the press are our most priceless heritage, to be most sacredly guarded," said the distinguished scientist-educator. "In many parts of the world today the tendency to return to bullet government is so strong that there is real danger that we are being infected by it." He struck hard at Government competition with private industry, saying:

"I regard the man who urges the extension of the powers of the State into the operative fields, which private initiative can and will handle equally well or better, as the enemy of free government, the most pernicious influence in American life today."

VENTILATORS DESCRIBED

The importance of ventilation in curing tobacco and the construction of the ridge ventilator on barns are discussed in a circular which the extension division of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has distributed to more than 6,000 farmers.

In addition to general information about curing, the circular gives plans and specifications for the ridge ventilator, which has been found of material help in curing on many farms. A plan of ventilation is described which provides for horizontal bottom doors and vertical side ventilators for intakes and for a ridge roof ventilator as the outlet.

The principle involved is that the drier, heavier air enters at the ground or side of the barn, passes through the tobacco where it accumulates moisture and leaves the barn at the opening in the ridge. This opening provides a means of removing the water that is evaporated from the leaves of the curing tobacco. The effectiveness of the ridge ventilator is based on the fact that it provides complete circulation of air throughout the barn.

The circular, which was written by Russell A. Hunt, extension field agent in agronomy, is called "The Ridge Ventilator in Tobacco Barns and the Importance of Ventilation in Tobacco Curing." Copies may be obtained from county agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

County Agent M. H. Sasser, of Casey county reports that there is more interest in raising horses and mules than at any time during the past 10 years. A committee has been formed to purchase breeding mares of good stock. Some farmers are investing in brood mares.

Many purebred rams are being bought in Jessamine county to head flocks of newly purchased ewes.

HOTEL TO BE REMODELED

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 27—Contracts have been let by the Board of Directors of the Farm Credit Administration of Louisville for remodeling the interior of the former Fort Nelson Hotel and for building additions to constitute a modern office structure capable of housing all the units of the Administration at present quartered in seven different buildings in Louisville last spring for use of the Farm Credit Administration. Demolition of the interior preparatory to re-completed last month and final building for office purposes was completed last month and final plans approved for the reconstruction. Original tentative plans which provided for a personnel of 1,000 have been altered to provide space for 1,350 people, officials of the Farm Credit Administration announced recently.

Contracts for the general construction work and for heating and ventilating, plumbing, electrical installation, elevators and floor coverings have been awarded and all hands are pushing the work along, looking to its conclusion by mid-winter. The general scheme of re-arrangements is in charge of Victor W. Bennett and Wm. B. Klee of the Planning section of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C.

Plans include one main entrance located in the middle front of the building. The corridors are to be raised 15 feet and the former columns replaced with fluted pilasters extending two full stories high. The main doors will be aluminum covered with ornamental iron grills work, and opening into a lobby extending the full depth of the building, with entrances on each side to the working space. The main floor and the next three are devoted chiefly to open desk space, while the fifth, sixth and seventh floors contain executive offices of the several units of the Farm Credit Administration.

The main lobby extends to an elevator lobby in the rear which is to be built eight stories high, 65 feet wide and 35 feet deep. In it is space for two elevators to be installed immediately, and two later, with adequate cloak room and other facilities on each floor. The elevators will have a speed of 500 feet per minute, and will be equipped with floor levellers and all safety devices. Automatic dumb waiters provide for the routing of mail and for general inter-departmental communication and the transfer of files to and from the large filing room in the basement.

Farm Credit Administration officials believe that the approved plans combine the practical with the beautiful, and that the completed building will be not only the most up-to-date office structure in the city of Louisville but one of the finest in appearance. This building fronts on Broadway, and the real estate acquired in connection with it extends 320 feet on that thoroughfare, with a depth of about 200 feet.

WOODEN SHOES USED A LOT IN THIS COUNTRY, TOO

A lot of folks associate wooden shoes solely with Holland. But the fact is that about a million pairs of wooden and wood-soled shoes are manufactured and consumed annually in the United States, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. These shoes have a wide range of uses, and are in good demand among workers in damp fields in certain parts of the country, as well as by people employed in factories where they must frequently stand on wet concrete floors. A large number of such shoes are also used by theatrical people both in the movies and on the stage. More than 10 firms are engaged in the manufacture of wooden and wooden sole shoes in the United States.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE HAS FIVE GRADUATES AT AUG. COMMENCEMENT

Home economics students, who were graduated from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky at the end of the summer term were Anna Sue Ammerman, Cynthia; Fannie Mildred Brummett, Harrodsburg; Patricia Ruth Johnson, Lexington, and Winnie Flora Sinclair, Campbellsville. Hamil A. Travis, of Little Cypress, was graduated in agriculture.

Shoes for ordinary use should be large enough for comfort. A straight inner line and broad, low heel are characteristics that add to the serviceableness of the shoe. Dark leather oxfords of black or brown are satisfactory for sports wear. Shoes should be shaped so as to fit the contour of the foot.

MARINE ENLISTMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER

Macon, Ga.—High school graduates interested in serving in the U. S. Marine Corps and capable of passing the physical examination can be accepted during September at the Marine Recruiting Headquarters, Municipal Auditorium, Macon, Ga.

The Marine Corps is the only branch of American military service having educational standard of graduation from high school or superior education. Having an authorized strength of only 16,000 this organization selects its applicants with care, requiring all who are admitted to present evidence of educational qualifications and of good character before they are accepted.

Their duties are performed at Marine Barracks and Navy Yards in many sections of the U. S. and in several foreign countries, and aboard battleships, cruisers, and airplane carriers, both in home and foreign waters.

GERMANY STUDYING SOY BEAN CULTIVATION

Cultivation of the soybean in Germany is a subject being given intensive study by leading chemists of that country, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. A Berlin authority says that it would be more advantageous to the country to bring about a surplus production of plant oils and fats rather than of animal oils and fats. Experiments have shown that the soybean contains more fat and albumen than most of the other beans and seeds and that it is one of the cheapest sources of oil for margarine production.

JAPS DEPENDENT ON U. S. SILK MARKET

The almost complete dependence of Japan's silk industry on the American market is beginning to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. Prices offered for cocoons have declined to a point where there is little profit for the grower. The cause for the present silk slump, the report states, is attributed to reduced sales in the United States.

EXPANSION IS CHECKED

AAA and Lower Prices Stop Upward Trend, but Supply Still Plentiful

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 27.—In a review of the 1934 acreage and probable production, Prof. Deja G. Card of the markets department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, says that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and lower prices last year apparently have checked the upward trend in burley tobacco production, but that there probably will be a plentiful supply of tobacco for next year.

Burley acreage this year is estimated at 30 percent under that of 1933 and 25 percent under the average of the last five years. However, production in each of those years was more than consumption, and a decline of 30 percent in acreage promises to leave enough land to produce about 280,000,000 lbs., which Prof. Card says is about equal to the annual disappearance in recent years.

Prof. Card also points out that stocks of burley in the hands of dealers and manufacturers on April 1 this year were the largest on record and were nearly 40 percent larger than the average of the last five years. He says that total supplies of burley tobacco this fall will be no smaller than those of last year, even though the current crop is about 100,000,000 pounds smaller. If a smaller crop than is now anticipated should result, an opportunity would be afforded to use up a part of the existing heavy stocks, he adds.

Stocks of flue-cured tobacco, which is a competitor of burley, are higher than last year and slightly higher than the five-year average, but production this year promises to be 200,000,000 pounds less than in 1933 and 40,000,000 pounds less than the disappearance last year, as well as below the average disappearance of the last five years. Total supplies of this type are about 100,000,000 pounds less than they were at this time a year ago.

According to Prof. Card's figures, the estimated decrease of One-Sucker tobacco is nearly 21 percent less than last year and about 40 percent less than the average of the last five years.

The Green River acreage is about 7 percent below that of a year ago and 50 percent below the five-year average. Both these dark air-cured types seem to be in a good position to meet market demands this fall, he believes.

The average of eastern fire-cured tobacco is 15 percent under last year, and that of western fire-cured is 19 percent down.

Henderson Stemming tobacco is the only type in Kentucky that does not show a decline in both acreage and production, according to Prof. Card.

"On the whole," says Prof. Card's review, "it appears that the economic position of our tobacco is much improved from that of a year ago, and it is to be hoped that greater permanency in adjustments between production and consumption may become a reality."

Fifty tons of lime were hauled to Elliott county farmers reports County Agent Edgar Rice.

THE GARDEN

FALL GREENS AND SALADS, II

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last week, fall salads were discussed, because arrangements for having them had to be made beforehand. The starting time for greens, on the other hand, extends quite far into the fall, but begins now.

Greens are leaf crops, and as such need ground rich in nitrogen. This may be provided through a coat of manure, or if the soil has been highly fertilized for the crop that occupied it in the early part of the season, it may be rich enough. Too, greens need moisture in plenty; this is usually supplied by the moist fall season that Kentucky almost always enjoys.

Soil preparation for the fall greens is simple, all that is needed being a shallow stirring of the soil. In fact, hoeing out the weeds and crab grass, as should always be done for the sake of next year's garden, will break the surface quite enough for seed to be sown. A light rain will cover it adequately, deeper covering than that may be too deep. Thus is indicated a secondary use for fall-green plantings, that of replacing unsightly weed patches with certainly better looking green growth. Which, if it is not needed for that purpose, furnishes vegetable matter to turn under. Besides the root system operates to prevent soil washing through the winter.

The greens are kale and turnips, besides, though they are not strictly greens, fall turnips and winter radishes may be included in the program of winter-cropping just described, for their soil requirements are the same; so is the manner of their sowing. Rape may also be included. An excellent plan is to combine seed of all five and sow the mixture broadcast in any space that offers, from now on until Oct. 1. The proportions should be approximately be: Dwarf Siberian Kale, one part; Seven Top turnips, two parts; Purple Top turnips, one part; Rose Chinese radishes, one part; Dwarf Essex rape, two parts. An ounce of this mixture should cover a space of two feet wide and 100 feet long.

Another fall green is spinach. It falls into a category different from the others just named in that it is better sown in drills rather than broadcast. Spinach seed is larger than the others and should accordingly be sown somewhat deeper; one-half inch is about right. If King of Denmark is used, sowing made as late as October 15 may mature, for spinach requires but six weeks and is quite cold-resistant enough to survive the weather we usually have up to Thanksgiving. It may, in fact, persist all the winter, thus furnishing early spinach in the spring to follow.

In as much as the normal fall season is unfriendly to insects, the greens are not much troubled, though sometimes just as the seedlings emerge, the weather being hot, fleabeetles may prove annoying. To guard against them a spraying with Bordeaux mixture, 4-4-50, is recommended just as the seedlings are in their seed-leaf stage and, sometimes a second when the first true leaves appear.

If exceptionally warm weather continues, the plant lice may come. To control them, spraying with tobacco, using either the commercial preparation or home-made "tobacco tea" is suggested. Presence of the plant lice is indicated by the curling downward of the leaves. If control is given as soon as the first signs are seen, much trouble may be avoided later, for the plant lice are exceedingly prolific.

NEXT YEAR'S GARDEN

Next year's garden may seem so far off that it may appear waste of energy even to think about it now. There are, however, preparations that should be begun now, which made will save energy all during the gardening season of 1935.

As all gardeners know, the fertility of vegetables depend on soil rapid growth. It is common knowledge that to insure it fertility must be provided in plenty, and the nature of the soil should be such that moisture is held in the degree and quantity best suited to the various vegetables' needs. Those gardeners who have access to adequate amounts of stable manure have no problem in either regard because, reinforced with phosphorus, manure is an almost perfect fertilizer and, besides, it furnishes humus or broken-down vegetable matter, which makes soil moisture-retentive and prevents it from baking.

Manure is becoming increasingly scarce; for some persons it is quite unobtainable. These get along after a fashion for a few years by using commercial fertilizer, to find their soil becoming more and more difficult to work because of its "running together," and in spite of all the work they do their yields dwindle and the quality of their vegetables suffer. Such gardeners should turn to stable-manure substitutes, crops of green matter, turn under. In these columns, the use of greens for this purpose has been discussed, but valuable greens are for this purpose, there are better means. To use them a start needs to be made now:

The best plan of all is to have a double garden, half of it resting each year in lespedeza, soy beans or cowpeas, but not many persons can afford to have double gardens. The next best, and quite practicable plan is to use crops that can be grown all winter. Examples are rye, wheat, vetch and, in the southern portions of the state, barley. To this list, turf oats may be added. Turning under any of these should take place in late February or early March.

Other possibilities are spring oats sown now, and any of the millets sowed about August 1; by frost time there would be quite an amount of killed vegetation to turn under. To use any of these it is obvious that special arrangement of the garden planting is needed, as for example, making part of it the early garden so as to become vacant in time. This is not difficult.

Another possibility is growing crops of "green manure" in the spring in that part of the garden the late vegetables, such as sweet corn, tomatoes and beans are to occupy. Examples are spring oats, Canada field peas and arpe, singly or together. In the crowded garden a combination of fall-sowed and spring-sowed manure crops is indicated; a gardener with imagination would have little difficulty in improvising a plan to fit any particular set of conditions.

Apart from furnishing his soil with the humus it often so sorely needs, the gardener who uses manure crops finds his weed control labor materially cut down. He finds too, less trouble with the various diseases with which garden soils become infected introduced in large measure manure from animals that have been fed diseased vegetable litter. He escapes charging his soil with toxic substances, side-products from the breaking down of animal manures. In short, a system of growing one's own manure has much to recommend it and if it were more generally adopted, improvement in home gardens all over the state would follow.

RETURNS SILVER

DOLLAR BECAUSE IT HAS "E PLURIBUS UNUM"

Memphis, Tenn. It was just a stunt advertising a movie picture, but it proved an old adage—"You can't sell a dollar for 90 cents." Anyway, silver dollars were offered on the streets of Memphis at 90 cents each. Only 20 sales were made in two hours of strenuous efforts. Not a single woman, out of almost a thousand people solicited, would buy and purchaser returned the silver dollar and got his money back because "E Pluribus Unum" appeared on it. —American Banker.

ROUGHAGE BEING SAVED

The demand for feed, as a result of drouth in several states has resulted in higher prices for hay, and should encourage the saving of as much roughage as possible in Kentucky, says a statement by Prof. E. J. Kinney of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. He suggests that farmers consider cutting and storing all hay possible, and that they will find it profitable to use extra care in preserving corn fodder and other feeds. His statement follows:

"The good rains that have fallen over much of Kentucky during the last few weeks have brought about a remarkable growth of late hay and forage crops, particularly lespedeza, soybeans, cowpeas, etc. In spite of the short crop of red clover and ordinary grass hays, it seems quite likely that these later-maturing hay crops will bring clover hay production up to almost normal in Kentucky, taking the State as a whole.

"In many sections of the United States, however, there is a very serious shortage of roughage, and in many areas practically none. In the latter cases it will be necessary to bring in large quantities of roughage in order that stock may be maintained during the winter. Undoubtedly hay prices will be good this year; in fact are good now. Hence it will pay Kentucky farmers to save as much roughage of all kinds as possible. When prices for good hay are at a high level it is often possible and profitable to use lower grade roughage for part of the home requirements and sell the better grades."

"Many classes of stock can be maintained in good condition on roughage or commonly used in Kentucky. For example, crabgrass and mixed weeds of various kinds will be eaten during the winter very freely if cut at the proper time and well cured. It is a good plan to salt these less palatable materials when storing. Usually the best way to store such hay is to stack it and allow animals to feed themselves from the stack."

"As is well known, clean, bright straw can be used as roughage in many cases, especially for feeding steers receiving a good grain ration and silage. Straw from threshing lespedeza seed and threshing soybeans is perhaps better than wheat straw in many instances. Most parts of Kentucky have good corn crops this year and even where the production of grain has been cut short, the growth of stover is good. As a rule, corn stover, or fodder as it is commonly called in Kentucky, is not utilized as fully as it might be; in fact, over much of the state crop is not cut at all. This year because of the high price of hay it will certainly be a good plan to save in the best manner all corn stover. To make the best stover, corn should be cut before dead ripe. This does not mean that it should be cut before the ears are mature, but before all the leaves have dried up. The fodder, after husking, should be carefully shocked in good size shocks, drawn up tightly with a rope, and firmly tied. If well shocked, the corn stover will shed rain quite satisfactorily and remain in good condition until well along in the winter time. Of course, a much better plan is to husk corn and shred the fodder. The fodder can be blown into a barn or loft and not only make very good feed but excellent bedding. If all the fodder in Kentucky is carefully saved and utilized, it will certainly permit the selling of a good deal of hay."

"Lespedeza fields that are too late to save for seed, should by all means be cut for hay. Lespedeza hay is not only palatable and nutritious, but easily cured. It should be remembered, however, that the demand for good lespedeza seed next year probably will be active and good fields should be saved and harvested for seed. Lespedeza makes the best hay when just past the blooming stage. This is particularly true of Korean, Kobe and common can be cut later, after some seed has ripened, so that they will reseed themselves.

"The greatest feeding value from soybeans is secured after the beans are rather mature. Hay from such bean, however, is not satisfactory for dairy animals or for sheep. For such uses they should be cut while the beans in the pods are still small."

15TH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF KENTUCKY FIREMEN

Two different schools of fire fighting practice will be compared when Kentucky hose and engine evolutions are demonstrated by the Louisville Fire Department and the Ohio evolutions are exhibited by the Cincinnati Fire Department at the 15th Annual Convention and Fire College of the Kentucky Firemen's Association which will open at Newport on August 28th.

Firemen from all parts of the state will journey to Newport for the three day event. They will be the guests of the City of Newport. The Northern Kentucky Firemen's Association, comprised of the departments of Newport, Covington, Southgate, Clifton, Ft. Thomas, Bellevue, Dayton, Ludlow, Bromley, S. Ft. Mitchell Erlanger and Elsmere is collaborating with the Newport officials in preparing an elaborate program of entertainment and instruction for the visitors.

In addition to the engine and ladder company evolutions the Cincinnati Salvage Corps and the Cincinnati Life Squad will also demonstrate their respective tactics.

A mammoth street parade will feature the first evening of the convention. Cups will be awarded for various types of apparatus and turn-outs. A dance for visiting firemen and their ladies will be held the second evening and the Convention will wind up with a picnic at beautiful Tacoma Park.

The visiting ladies will be treated to a tour of various points of interest in Cincinnati and a boat ride on the Steamer Island Queen. Mrs. Robert Shearwood, wife of Assistant Chief Shearwood, of Cincinnati, is collaborating with the Kentucky ladies committee.

Officers of the Kentucky Firemen's Association are Chief Russell Dyche, of London, Chief Frank Northcutt, of Covington, Chief Burris Hensley, of Ashland, Chief R. K. Phillips of Harrodsburg and W. Lipscomb who is secretary.

Buyers often pay premium prices for clean, well-shaped eggs. In order to have clean eggs, hens should be kept in the laying house until 1 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the ground outside is muddy.

WORLD-WIDE TOBACCO NEWS

Large quantities of new crop burley tobacco are being sold in Belgium. Considerable was shipped through Antwerp to Switzerland. South African tobacco is being sold in Belgium at about 5 cents a pound.

Of 540 hogsheads of American tobacco which arrived at the Free Port of Hamburg, Germany, in June 350 were Kentucky and Virginia leaf.

Second quarter trade prospects for American tobacco do not appear much better on the Shanghai, China, market than first quarter. Many factories are using a larger proportion of China grown leaf as it is much cheaper. Two large foreign cigarette factories are closed down because of labor troubles.

France's import of American tobacco increased 50 per cent the first four months of 1934 as compared with same period in 1933.

France is increasing her imports of tobacco from 14 colonies, notably, Algeria and Madagascar.

About 2,500 persons are engaged in the manufacture of tobacco in Scotland.

American made shoe polish is meeting with growing popularity abroad.

Far Eastern countries are a constantly expanding market for American soft drinks.

Christian county homemakers sold $194 worth of produce last month, ringing total sales to $476.

FIVE INJURED

SERIOUSLY IN TWO AUTO MIS- HAPS—FOUR IN CRITICAL CON- DITION FOLLOWING HEADON COLLISION ON DIXIE HIGH- WAY

Auto accidents in Kenton and Boone counties Thursday night resulted in five persons being held at St. Elizabeth Hospital, four of them critically injured, and the fifth in a serious condition.

The injured are: George Hahn, 19, of 105 Third-st., Corbin, Ky., fractured arm, shoulder, rib and skull, condition critical; W. A. Sutherland, Evansville, Ind., lacerated face and head, condition critical; Mrs. W. A. Sutherland, shock, condition critical; Mrs. Della Weiss, 60, of 6207 Madison-rd., Cincinnati, lacerated forehead and fractured leg, condition critical, and Paul Inman, 24, Walton, Ky., broken left arm and shoulder, condition serious.

The four reported critical were injured when two autos crashed headon at the intersection of the Dixie Highway and Idaho-av, South Ft. Mitchell.

Patrolman Harry Nuxoll and Otto Froelicher, Kenton-co. police, were chasing the auto in which they say Hahn was riding alone. They said he was speeding south on the highway and they feared he would injure someone.

They had scarcely started the chase when the crash occurred. Hahn was thrown from the auto by the impact. He told police he was hitchhiking and that a man unknown to him was driving the auto.

Police said they saw no one flee after the wreck and that they saw only one person in the car while they chased it. Reckless driving and speeding will be charged against Hahn, they said. Patrolman Nuxoll said he believes the auto may have been stolen.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland and Mrs. Weiss were riding in a northbound auto driven by Mrs. Sutherland. Mr. Sutherland is engaged in the racing business, police said they were informed. He said the party was going to Coney Island from Dade Park, Ky.

The auto believed to have been driven by Hahn burst into flames after the crash. It was extinguished by the patrolmen.

Paul Inman was injured when an auto he was driving struck a pole on the Dixie Highway near the Highland Stock Farm, Boone county. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital by Ted Bishop, Third and Greenup streets, Covington.

TWO TRACTS OF LAND SELLS AT PUBLIC AUCTION

The Gaines Robinson homestead consisting of 107 acres sold at auction last Thursday, August 30, for $75.00 per acre. This was considered as a fair price for this tract of land. This property was located on the Dixie Highway, 14 miles south of Covington, near Richmond. The Tri-County Realty Co., had charge of the sale, with R. G. Kinman and Check Tanner as auctioneers.

The Shields property located on the Walton and Nicholson pike sold at auction last week for $1630.00. This was a very small tract of land and was reported as bringing a fair figure. R. G. Kinman had charge of the sale.

EXTENSIVE VACATION IN FLORIDA PLANNED

Mrs. Robert Eads left (today) Thursday for an extended visit in Miami, Florida. She is the popular wife of Robert Eads, who operates the Bob & Gene Sandwich Shop. Her many friends wish her a pleasant journey. She plans to spend two months in the South.

NEW BRIDGE TO SPAN LICKING RIVER

Among a number of contracts awarded by the State Highway Commission, was that for a new vehicular bridge, to be toll free, across the Licking river between Newport and Covington, the work to start within 10 days.

The Temple Foundation Co., of Cincinnati received the contract on its bid of $210,038.27. This bid includes the sub-structure and concrete approaches.

EXCUSE OUR ERRORS

This week we were forced to set our type at the Grant County News office due to a breakage on our Linotype machine. Therefore we were unable to read our proof and ask all our readers to excuse us this week. It is impossible to compose such a large amount of reading matter without making errors, and we are satisfied you will find plenty in this issue.

We are hoping to have our machine in running order again next week and will be able to give more attention to the news items of our county.

BURLINGTON ELIMINATED

Last Saturday the Petersburg baseball nine defeated the Burlington team by a score of 5 to 2. This game was the third defeat for the Burlington boys in the elimination series, thus eliminating them.

At Bellevue the Bellevue boys defeated Hebron by a score of 12 to 2. J. Ryle was on the mound for the Bellevue boys and allowed the Hebron boys only 6 hits, while Ellis as twirler for the Hebron nine allowed 12 hits.

Next Saturday Hebron will meet Petersburg with Bellevue drawing the bye.

WELCH SHOW PULLS STAKES

Jim Welch pulled stakes Monday morning, after a very profitable week's showing in Burlington. Mr. Welch is making his 40th annual tour of different states, and left here for Corinth, Grant county, where he will show this week, and from there to Sadienville, and into the South.

Mr. Welch has a splendid troop with him this season and gives the people a good show for their money—which he always did, and is always a welcome visitor to Boone county. He will be back with us again next season, and we hope he will stay with us at least two weeks. Good luck to you Jimmie, and may you never grow old.

BOONE COUNTY SCHOOLS

WILL OPEN NEXT MONDAY

The schools of Boone county will open next Monday, and the work of cleaning and putting the buildings in shape has been completed by this time. It is said there will be quite an increase in attendance at all schools, and it is the earnest desire of the Board of Education to provide the best from the point of physical plant and instructional staff, that it can secure with the revenues available. We urge these parents and pupils to approach the coming session of school with the determination to do all they can to make the very best use of the school buildings.

GAINES APPOINTED

RECEIVER IN WAREHOUSING CASE—ATTORNEYS TRIED TO ARGUE—ANOTHER SUIT FILED TUESDAY IN FEDERAL COURT IN COVINGTON

Carrollton, Ky., Aug. 30.—The case of a minority of the directors of the Northern District Warehousing Corporation, a holding company for the former poolers, praying for a receiver in the Carroll Circuit Court, was decided in favor of the defendants. P. B. Gaines, master commissioner, was appointed by the court after attorneys failed to agree. His bond was fixed at $50,000.

The assets of the corporation consist of $29,000 in the Carrollton National Bank, of which about $14,500 will be available; 15,000 in the First National; 645,00 pounds of tobacco purchased and six large sales houses in Carrollton.

Another suit was filed Tuesday in the Federal Court at Covington by H. T. Miller, a director representing a majority of the directors, but this judgment probably will cause a withdrawal of the case in the federal court.

PASTORS ASSIGNED BY BISHOP

One of the largest crowds that has ever been in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church South Conference, witnessed the close in Winchester, Ky., Sunday, Sept. 2, 1934.

Rev. Floyd Rose, of Ft. Thomas, who has been the presiding elder of the Covington District for the last three years, was appointed to that post again.

Following are the pastors that were assigned to serve in the Boone County M. E. churches for the coming year:

Burlington—Rev. G. E. Graden.

Hughes Chapel and Big Bone—Rev. C. G. Rayburn.

Walton—Rev. E. L. Ocherman.

CREDIT INCREASED

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 4.—The basis of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Louisville to serve the credit needs of farmers within these four states has been increased substantially within the past few weeks. Of the call for $25,000,000 which was made by Governor Wm. I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration upon the Federal Treasury to augment the capital structure of the twelve Intermediate Credit Banks, the Louisville Bank received $832,000, which was credited to its paid in surplus, increasing the total capital resources of the bank to $6,491,339.

The new funds thus added to the bank's surplus have been invested in Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds payment of both principal and interest of which are guaranteed by the Government of the United States. This constitutes an additional source of income for the bank.

The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Louisville has outstanding at this time collateral trust debentures in the sum of $3,200,000. During the past several months these debentures have been eagerly purchased by investors at rates which have made it possible for the bank to take rediscounts from Production Credit Associations, Agricultural Credit Corporations and other financing institutions which have access to this source of credit at an interest rate which is the lowest ever known to American farmers for short term loans. Recent reduction in interest rates charged by the bank will result in a substantial saving to the farmers whose paper is now being carried by the bank.

The credit requirements of farmers of our four states now being discounted by the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Louisville are seasonal in nature, states J. B. E. LaPlante, President, "Production Credit Associations whose paper we discount are making numerous general purpose loans many of which include the financing of seed and fertilizer for fall wheat seeding. An important part of our business, too, is in the financing of feeder cattle and lambs. Loans are being made also to finance establishment of a substantial number of flocks of breeding ewes.

EVEN BREAK

REGISTERED FOR BELLEVUE MONDAY WHEN THEY MET ER- LANGER BLACK SOX—GOOD GAMES OF BALL AND A VERY LARGE CROWD

The results of two good games of ball played at Bellevue ball park Monday between the Erlanger Black Sox and Bellevue was 7 to 5 in favor of Erlanger Black Sox for the first game and 6 to 1 in favor of Bellevue in the second. The first game was pitched by Will Rogers and the second by Deck for the Bellevue team.

The Bellevue boys were up to standard, the outfield defense being practically perfect. This was the second appearance for the Black Sox at Bellevue this season, defeating Bellevue in the previous game. These two games proved to be the most interesting played at Bellevue this season.

There was a large crowd present at both games, as is generally the rule at Bellevue park.

The Black Sox team is no easy mark, and as a whole performed in creditable fashion. However, their efforts on both offense and defense were nullified by the superior play in golf the home boys.

Lute Bradford and son, of Union, were business visitors in Burlington Tuesday. Mr. Bradford is one of our most popular auctioneers. While in town he called at the Recorder office and swapped a few yarns with the printers.

AURORA MAN

ESCAPES AFTER RUNNING HIS WIFE DOWN IN SHERIFFS CAR —SEVERAL CHARGES LACED AGAINST HIM—WOMAN IN A SERIOUS CONDITION

A widespread search for Raymond Hess, who late Saturday night ran down his wife, plunging her and his automobile from a bridge in Aurora, Ind., and then used the Dearborn County Sheriff's pistol to effect his escape when on the way to jail, failed Tuesday to reveal a clue as to his whereabouts.

His wife, Mrs. Nellie Hess, Monday night still was in a serious condition at Christ Hospital. She was suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg, cuts on the head, and possible internal injuries.

William Killy, Aurora Marshal, said Monday night that numerous places had been notified by telephone to be on the lookout for Hess. So far, he said, the call had yielded no information.

After a family quarrel in an Aurora resort Saturday night, Mrs. Hess started to walk home. Her husband saw her as she was crossing a bridge over Hogan Creek. He wheeled his roadster, drove it over a six-inch curb, and pinned her against the lattice work. The bridge railing broke, plunging all to the creek bank 10 feet below.

Hess was arrested at Dr. O. H. Stewart's office. He went to the doctor's office after his wife had been taken there for treatment. Officers said he admitted here that he ran down his wife deliberately with the intention of killing.

Kelly and Arch Boyd, a deputy, put Hess in the rear of Sheriff Jacob (Battle) Hulbert's automobile to take him to jail. They were seated in the front.

The Sheriff had left his pistol under a robe on the rear seat. When the trio arrived at the police station, Hess confronted the officers with the gun and escaped.

Charges of intent to murder, drawing a gun, and theft of a gun and automobile were to have been placed against Hess Monday. Due to the absence of city officials over Labor Day, the filing of the charge was postponed.

BELIEVES KENTUCKY NEEDS MORE GRASS

A plea to farmers to sow more grass this fall, as a combined feed producing and soil saving crop, is made by Dr. E. N. Fergus, of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

"Because of the economic and soil conserving qualities of good grass, its production of more of the farm acreage is a matter of concern to all people of Kentucky," she says. He believes grass is more profitable than most crops, especially if used for pasture, and is the most effective crop for controlling soil erosion and leaching.

That good grass can be produced in any part of the state has been demonstrated on the soil fields which the Agricultural Experiment Station maintains in various regions. In fact, it appears that sods equal to those in central Kentucky are possible in southern and western counties and in parts of the mountains.

It does not pay, however, to try to grow grass on poor soils. The use of lime and phosphate are necessary outside the Bluegrass region, and lime is often profitable even in Bluegrass counties. Two to four tons of limestone and 300 to 500 pounds of 20 per cent phosphate to the acre are recommended for most areas outside the Bluegrass, and one to two tons of limestone for Bluegrass counties.

Dr. Fergus believes seeding should be heavier than is ordinarily practiced. He recommends a minimum of 155 pounds of bluegrass, 8 pounds of timothy, and 25 pounds of orchard grass for pasture or 15 pounds for hay. These rates are for the sowing of one grass only; a mixture should be reduced in mixtures.

With the exception of orchard grass, these grasses may be sowed up to October 1 in most of the state.

A. L. Furnish, of Golden Pond, Trigg county, spent the past week with his daughter Miss Dorothy Nell, has been confined to her bed for several weeks at her grandmother's Mrs. Laura Martin.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS.

"Man proposes—God disposes," says the old proverb. It proves a fact that has the Department of Agriculture and high Government officials giddy and dismayed.

Main Administration program for the farmer has been crop and acreage reduction. Working on the theory that unless drastic action were taken, the American market would be glutted with agricultural surpluses for many years to come, thus keeping prices at bankrupt levels, steps were taken to kill pigs, plow under wheat and cotton, and otherwise attempt to adjust demand and supply. The government paid out checks totaling millions to farmers in order to recompense them for crops thus destroyed.

Everything went along well—until the power of God appeared, in the form of the worst drouth in generations. The wheat and cotton crops of whole states were literally burned to dust—cattle died of thirst and starvation—high winds whirled away seed and top-soil, making a desert of what had been the finest to be kept in mind is that labor has been made dissatisfied and forces are at work to keep trouble brewing in a campaign to unionize industry 100 percent. The appeal made to labor is that if it loses now, its cause will be set back a century. On the other hand, conservative leaders believe radicalism and strikes will shake public confidence in organized labor at this time—that mediation is better than force.

Of obvious interest to business are the state primaries, which should have demonstrated very little. Most Democratic nominees are enthusiastic New Deal men—most Republican candidates are equally enthusiastic in opposition. The President has let it be known that he will not give direct support to any candidate, and that came as a blow to many a political hopeful. Mr. Roosevelt is wisely refraining from following the example of the tragic Wilson who asked the country to return Democratic majorities to House and Senate, was refused by the electorate, and was completely discredited in his leadership. Many current Democratic candidates will insinuate that the President won't be able to sleep nights until they are safely elected—but that won't mean anything.

PROFITLESS PROSPERITY

Here are some facts for everybody to consider because they underlie the future earning power, and employment foundation of the United States:

Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, second largest store in the world, sold $45,000,000 worth of dry goods and commodities in the first six months of 1934. That was a $10,000,000 increase over the first half of 1933. But it lost nearly $2,000,000 on the turnover. The president of the company told his stockholders: "Our sales failed to increase to the extent necessary to cover the increased burden put on us by New York and other national and local government agencies. During the second quarter our payroll was $1,088,000 more than a year ago and our taxes were $226,000 more."

Consolidated Gas Company of New York, one of the outstanding public utilities in the world, had gross revenues of $53,000,000 in the second quarter, practically the same as for a year ago. But profits per share of common stock dropped from 83 cents to 41 cents. The drop was caused wholly by the rise in the cost of doing business. For the first half of this year taxes and operating expenses were up 10.9 per cent from last year. For the June quarter they were 14.4 per cent.

General Motors' quarterly report showed its three months' sales at $303,000,000, an increase of no less than $100,000,00 but wages and materials jumped even faster so that its three months' profit was actually $1,000,000 less than the same period in 1933.

Along with talk about new ways of taking industry, soaking the investor and cutting the rates of public service companies and railroads, it is well to bear in mind that the rank and file of United States citizens depend upon industries for their jobs and they also depend upon them to make earnings on savings which they have invested in them.

We simply cut our own throat when we cut the throat of industry with destructive legislation and taxation, and destroy its lifeblood of earnings.

THE ABC OF SAFETY

The cause of safety has a very simple and important A. B. C. The letters mean—Always Be Careful.

That motto should govern conduct in every home, in every place of business—and especially in every automobile. Because it is constantly violated, thousands of people die needlessly each year, 33,000 of them in motor accidents alone, and property damage runs into the billions. In no other nation do accidents take so great a toll.

There is nothing difficult about "playing safe." The main thing to remember is to never take a needless chance—never do anything unnecessarily that might lead to injury. An automobile driver, for example, can probably pass cars on curves nine hundred and ninety-nine times without anything happenings. On the thousandth time he may kill and maim and injure. The element of risk is always there—a little thought will reduce it to a minimum.

There is no greater and more absolute waste than that caused by accidents. No kind of waste possesses less justification—the unavoidable accident is so rare as to be almost non-existent. Nearly every accident is caused because someone was reckless, careless, ignorant. Remember A. B. C. of safety—and you will be doing your part to eliminate hazards that menace every citizen.

WHERE ALL BENEFIT

In a recent address the general manager of a large cooperative association said: "Our egg cooperatives are getting the eggs to the consumers in more nearly the degree of freshness they possess when laid in the nest. . . . Through cooperative efforts the poultrymen of Petaluma, California, or the Willamette Valley, of Oregon, or Western Washington are nearer the New York consumer than most farms in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Sound cooperation has done it—a job peculiarly possible only through cooperation."

Other cooperatives, dealing in milk, cotton and similar products, have made records of this kind. Important as the cooperative is in aiding the farmer, it is likewise of great importance in assuring the consumer a constant supply of first-quality farm products at a fair price. When cooperatives succeed, every person and concern involved—from farmer to distributor to processor to buyer—is benefited.

The thinking public is solidly behind business-like cooperative movements. It knows that cooperation is bringing stability out of agricultural chaos. It knows profitless agriculture makes general recovery impossible—and that better times for those who till the soil will be felt throughout the entire nation, in every industry and calling. And it realizes that cooperative management, through far-sightedness and fair-dealing, earn the faith that is placed in them by both farmers and the public at large.

UNDERMINING PRESENT EMPLOYMENT

Here are some actual facts concerning the Federal government's great "adventure" in the electric power field, published by National Job Saving and Investment Protection Bureau for the Coal Industry. Six major hydro-power projects are either under construction, or will be started in the near future. Initial expenditures will total more than $700,000,000 which must be paid, in one way or another, by the people.

Annual production capacity of these projects is 28,600,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric power. In practically every case, this power will simply duplicate existing capacity, which now for the country as a whole is 25 percent more than present demand.

Most of the private power which government must displace by seizing its market, comes from steam plants. Production of 28,600,000,000 kilowatt hours in steam plants requires 21,500,000 tons of coal.

It requires 22,000 miners to produce that much coal. Railroad and other labor involved in handling and moving it gives employment to 33,000 additional workmen.

As the government projects are completed, these men will gradually lose their jobs. Their families will be deprived of livelihood. The purchasing power they now have will disappear. And it must be remembered that these are permanent jobs—the jobs that building duplicate hydro plants create are of a purely temporary nature.

Even this isn't the worst of it. According to the coal bureau, if the projects are carried to their ultimate possibilities, 152,000 men dependent on the coal industry will be thrown out of employment, and the total cost of building the duplicating plants will be $2,000,000,000. That amounts to an assessment of $16 to every individual in this country—for something we don't need, and which will strike a deadly blow at employment, investment and private enterprise. Think it over now.

WHERE WILL THE ## MONEY COME FROM?

In a recent editorial the St. Louis Globe Democrat points out that if the railroads are to hold their place as great instruments of public service, inequitable and destructive competition from other, less necessary carriers must be stopped.

Recent statistics show the seriousness of the railroad problem. In 1932, the lines lacked $140,000,000 of earning revenue sufficient to pay fixed charges, irrespective of any operating profit. In 1933 the deficit was reduced to $13,000,000 and the outlook for better earnings in 1934 seemed good. Now, however, operating costs, occasioned by recent legislation, are rising more rapidly than is revenue. It is estimated that the increases in expenses will reach an annual figure of $359,000,000 and will cause total operating expense in 1934 to be 15 per cent above the 1933 level.

The railroads can earn the money to pay these costs—if they are treated fairly. They cannot earn it so long as subsidized carriers ply the waterways, and the highways, taking more and more of their business. In brief, they cannot continue to exist as the only regular common carrier, while other carriers are free to do as they wish.

The Globe Democrat believes that all carriers should be subjected to exactly the same type of regulation. That is certainly reasonable and logical, and it must be done if the country is to continue to have first-class, dependable transportation.

A PRACTICAL WAY TO CREATE EMPLOYMENT

A large number of prominent industrialists, along with an army of public officials and economists, are of the opinion that stimulated residential construction offers the best chance of accelerating the pace of recovery.

Construction is a local industry. The money that is spent goes first to local people—the workers, contractors, building supply houses. Every business in the community is benefited, from the corner grocery to the electric utility. Every pocket-book feels the fattening effect of construction dollars.

The great drive to boom construction is getting underway now. Private capital that has been tied up in non-productive channels is going to work. A vast need for housing exists, in both urban and rural localities—there has never been so great a potential demand for better and more modern homes.

So far as the individual citizen is concerned, he is now being offered an unprecedented opportunity to build on extremely favorable terms. Almost all the costs involved—from paint to interest charges—are well under previous levels. It is the part of wisdom to make the fullest possible use of that opportunity.

THE FIRE MICROBE

If fires were caused, as is disease, by a microbe, the entire resources of science would be given to finding a cure for them. The waste of life and materials resulting from fire would be regarded as intolerable, and the physician discovering the cure would go down in history with the great healers of all time.

As a matter of fact, fire is caused by a mental microbe—though it can't be imprisoned in a test-tube. The microbe's name is carelessness. It dwells in the human mind—and the fact that millions of people allow it free play, making no conscious attempt to control it, is reason for an utter, indefensible fire waste of 10,000 lives and $500,000,000 worth of property annually.

Fire can be prevented in a majority of cases. A little thought, a little knowledge—in other words ordinary care—will do the job. Any fire marshal will be glad to tell you about the common fire hazards and how to eliminate them. The fire insurance industry publishes booklets and carries on an unrelenting war against fire, and it too will give you the mental ammunition you need. Faulty furnaces—improper storage of inflammables—uncut grass—improper electric work—such little things as these are the friends of the fire-microbe, and his ally in his work of destruction.

Learn how to prevent fire—only by doing that can you discharge a definite duty you owe your community, your neighbors, our family.

Every fire starts because some individual was careless, and prevention of fire is largely an individual matter. If you and other citizens will take the little time that is necessary to learn the importance of care in relation to fire, a great problem will soon be solved.

HTE AMERICAN SPIRIT

Life insurance sales, which have been steadily rising during 1934 in the face of uncertainty in general business, are indicative of what might be called the most important American characteristic—self reliance—self help.

In spite of depression, in spite of legislative experiment, and in spite of social and economic upheavals, the average American citizen still wants to shoulder his own obligations. He wants no other agency to bear them for him. He wants to achieve security and independence for himself and his family through his own efforts and abilities. He does not want to become a recipient of a "dole" in any shape or form. In other words he wants to pay his own way.

That is the true American spirit, and he is a pessimist indeed who believes that it is changing in any fundamental manner. The American is still an individualist. Political movements come and go, economic conditions vary—but that characteristic remains. It is what made our country great in the past. It is essential if our greatness is to be maintained.

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

By R. M. Hofer

I was recently talking to an agent of one of the great life insurance companies. He lives in a town having a municipal electric plant. It pays no taxes and is furnished with office space and accounting service largely by the city. He favored municipal ownership because he could get his electricity cheaper.

I said: "I suppose you would favor the government writing insurance because it could save the commission now paid to you and eliminate the taxes and other expense for the support of government, which is now included in the premium I pay your company."

But that was a horse of a different color.

My friend should realize that if socialism can be applied to the production and sale of electricity, it can also be applied to insurance or any other business.

The penalty for cheapness is often greater than possible benefits secured.

TURN OUR EYES BACK

In a recent address celebrating the 151st anniversary of General Simon Bolivar, the great South American patriot, John L. Merrill, President of the Pan American Society, said:

"In this day of selfish men and selfish politicians . . . we are apt to become despondent and our simple American faith is apt to be shaken. It is fitting, therefore, that once in a while we turn our faces back to the glorious, matchless figure of our Washington and our Bolivar, for a new inspiration."

Never was it more important that we look backward for that inspiration than in these discordant times. Washington and Bolivar knew the true meaning of patriotism—patriotism that puts country above self and the interests of the great masses of people above personal ambition and vanity. They threw off the chains of tyranny, and established freedom—freedom of thought, of action, of belief. They took looked to the past—as we should look now—and from the lessons it produced they built for the present and the future. There can be no progress if the individual is suppressed—if he is made a vassal of an all-powerful state. Independence of thought, faith in our capabilities, inflexible character—to these things can we lay our past achievements. We must not lose them.

THE TEXTILE STRIKE

(John E. Edgerton, president of the Southern States Industrial Council issued the following statement relative to the textile strike called for September 1. His statement follows in full:)

"The textile strike which has been ordered by the Labor Aristocracy is the illegitimate offspring of Section 7-a of the National Recovery Act as its sire, and the very unfortunate official commitment, 'no one shall go hungry in this country,' as its mother."

"Without reference to previous harmonious relations between employers and employees in most instances, or of the fact that there has been no appreciable dissatisfaction in most of the plants involved, this unnecessary, uncalled for, and altogether vicious strike has been called merely to further the establishment of a complete dictatorship of American industry by a comparatively small group of American nabobs. Except for two things, this strike would have never been considered. One of these is the one-sided, wholly partisan, unjust Section 7-a of the National Industrial Recovery Act, which was written into it by the mailed hand of the American Federation of Labor. The other is the commonly accepted, blank assurances that nobody shall go hungry. Even God Almighty, infinite in love, mercy, and justice, the eternal Champion of all 'human relief' and the recognized Source in this country of everything good, never promised anybody that he should not suffer from hunger or any other physical or spiritual discomfort. He based every right given to man and the fulfillment of every promise, upon the performance of clear obligations, specifically laid down. He warned us that 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.' He did not say that 'ye shall reap everything sown except that which shall be plowed under or killed off.' He did not say that man can sow idleness, violence, distrust, and hatred and from this sowing, reap eternally higher wages, shorter hours, and the privilege of running the other fellow's business. Every guarantee of prosperity of any sort, and of every human happiness was made emphatically dependent upon the worthiness of the individual, to be established by the exhibition of a 'pure heart and clean hands.'"

"It seems to me, therefore, that the sooner the people of this so-called Christian nation recognize that the Congress of the U. S. can not repeal the laws of God, and that prosperity and human happiness can not be conferred upon men by executive decree, the sooner are we going to emerge from the unhappy state into which our follies have plunged us."

"In the instance of this textile strike, as well as of its predecessors during the past twelve or fourteen months, it is to be noted that it is not the six or ten millions of the unemployed who are disturbing the peace of the nation, nor is it the millions of others who are cooperating with their employers in trying to re-establish normal conditions. But it is a small, blind, and bullheaded group of labor leaders who represent in their authority less than ten per cent of the wage-earning masses yet we are endeavoring to force their unwelcome and selfish wills upon the peace-loving majorities in most all of the plants and establishments in this country. Certainly, they have a right to call a strike, and the voluntary members of their union have a right to quit work when they please. But when they undertake to destroy the right of other people to work and earn their bread, they forfeit their claim upon public tolerance or upon governmental sanction. These leaders know in advance that there will be violence and bloodshed, as there usually are on such occasions. The contest in the last analysis is not between employer and employee. It is between the government of the United States and its sub-divisions, and the American Federation of Labor."

"But the gloomiest aspect of the whole affair is the reliance that these strikers will put in the promise that regardless of their violence and voluntary abandonment of the opportunities to work at the highest wages and shortest hours they have ever known, none of them shall go hungry. They have indicated shamelessly that they expect the government to finance their errand of folly and enterprise of destruction. In that case, of course, every man and woman in this country who has anything or who is working will be contributing through taxes to the support of the strikers. It seems to me that it is time for all liberty-loving, law-abiding, God-fearing, and proud Americans to assert their right to some consideration in these contests which are precipitated by self-seeking interests. A group of so-called working men have no more natural right to set themselves up as a special interest entitled to special privilege, than has a group of Wall Street financiers, or Chicago gangsters. In its war upon special privileges, if the New Deal does not include the American Federation of Labor among its objects of hostility, then, it will show itself to be a house of cards built upon the sands of injustice. If the laws which are on the statute books of the cities, states, and the nation to protect the rights of all men and property are enforced in accordance with the various oaths of public officers, the textile strike will not last for two weeks. And if it should be authoritatively announced that the Government of the United States is not going to finance the strike by supplying sustenance to the strikers, it will probably not last for more than one week."

"WOVEN LEATHER" IS INVENTED IN GERMANY

A novel leather product is being produced in Germany under the trade name of "woven leather," according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. The process of manufacture is protected by patents in 15 countries. The raw material is light weight sheep skin, otherwise used only for linings. A loom weaves multicolored strips into a unique fabric in which the warp alone is leather, whereas the weft consists of strong yarn. The "woven leather" is to be used for shoes, ladies' handbags, upholstery, wall covering and for similar purposes. Numerous inquiries have been received in regard to the fabric from foreign countries.

Leonard Carpenter and Earl McQueen, Jackson county 4-H club co-operators, are raising poultry on a 50-50 basis with their parents. Culling methods and the proper feeding of laying hens are receiving special attention now. A new poultry house has been built, and another one started.

TRENCH SILO HELPS

TO CONSERVE FEED

The number of trench silos built in Kentucky has increased every year since 1930 when six were built, until last year twice as many silos were dug as were built above the ground, says Earl G. Welch of the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington. Practically no cash outlay is required to construct them, and only a day's labor of three men and a team is necessary to make one large enough for the average farm.

Trench silos should be located on slopes or near the top of a hill where drainage is good, and all surface water kept out by building up the ground around the silo so that water will drain away. Silage must be well packed for best results. An inexpensive power feed cutter or cutting box, without a blower, has been found satisfactory for filling the silo.

To prevent spoilage, the trench must be small enough in width and depth so that a foot of silage may be removed by feeding from the end of the exposed surface in five days. For a herd of 20 cows and a feeding period of 180 days, the trench should be 12 feet wide at the top, 8 feet deep, 8 feet wide at the bottom and 4 feet long. A silo of this size holds 54 tons. A herd of 8 cows may be fed from a silo 32 feet long and having a capacity of 22 tons.

The silo may be made permanent by lining the walls and bottom with rock or concrete, and placing a tile drain at the lower end to remove surface water that may enter while the silo is being emptied. Further information may be obtained by writing to the Kentucky Experiment Station.

CANADA BUYING MORE AMERICAN MINING MACHINERY

A substantial increase in Canadian imports of mining machinery from the United States, is shown since last summer, according to a report to the Louisville office of the Commerce Department. It has been chiefly due to intensified mining operations in Ontario and Quebec and to the radium-silver activity in the Great Bear region, a few miles south of the Arctic circle in the northwest Territories.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

SITUATION NOT ALARMING
State Department of Health Advises Against Closing Schools

Many inquiries are arriving at the offices of the State Department of Health in regard to precautions necessary to prevent spread of poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis.

For several years past there have been occasional cases of infantile paralysis in Kentucky at this season. The increase this year is so slight as to be practically negligible and would not warrant unusual attention, were it not for epidemics of the disease now prevailing on the Pacific Coast and in some of the Western States.

At present, it is the best medical opinion infantile paralysis spreads similarly to diphtheria, scarlet fever and other communicable diseases. Apparently, it is ordinarily spread by means of human carriers. Adults, carrying the virus or germs in their noses or throats, are carriers quite as frequently as children. Clinical evidence indicates that most people harbor the infection at some time during life and that a very small number of these develop the paralytic systems from which it derives its name. In other words, infantile paralysis is a complication of a very common infectious disease which is usually in such mild form that it is not recognized.

"Such a condition as now confronts the medical profession of Kentucky, including its health authorities, is," says Dr. A. T. McCormack, State Health Commissioner, "an occasion for careful thought and prompt action, but should not cause panic or alarm. Sporadic cases have occurred at a number of places in the eastern half of the State. Nowhere, however, has the disease assumed epidemic proportions."

"During any unusual prevalence of the communicable diseases of childhood, children are best off at home or at school. These are the only two places where they are under constant observation and discipline. Parents are, therefore, being advised not to travel with children, but to keep them at home or in school."

"Considering these facts, the State Department of Health advises that schools be kept open as usual, that teachers be on the lookout for any acute illness and that all cases of such illness be promptly brought under the care of family physicians. It is only during the first twenty-four or forty-eight hours of the illness that much can be done to minimize the seriousness of infantile paralysis. During this early period, the symptoms, as a rule, are mild and are the usual symptoms common to the infectious diseases of childhood. In addition to the slight head cold and fever, there is ordinarily a noticeable stiffening of the spine, with a dislocation on the part of the patient to bend forward. Teachers should be urged to notify the health officers promptly when children are absent from school without explanation, so that the cases may each be once investigated. Parents should be urged to have their children examined more promptly than usual, in order that the early symptoms of this and other diseases may be detected. It would be just as sensible to close the schools to stop common colds as it would be to close them to prevent the spread of other infectious diseases. The intelligently conducted modern school is the healthiest place in which children assemble. Where the educators of Kentucky cooperate intelligently and completely with the health authorities and other physicians it is recognized that epidemics, which threaten during the school term, are easier to control than in vacation."

"Those countries and cities having well organized health departments are particularly fortunate in times like this, in that they are always prepared to respond to emergency calls with a promptness which may mean the saving of much unnecessary sickness and loss of life. If the people of Kentucky will cooperate with its physicians during this threat, as they have increasingly cooperated during similar experiences in the past, they may rest assured that no stone will be left unturned to effect a continuous reduction in both the sick and death rates among our children. In this endeavor, the schools are a most important factor."

Louisville, Ky.—Benjamin W. Bilsland, Fountain County, Indiana farmer, is sleeping again 9 nights for the first time in some years, he states in a letter to The Federal Land Bank of Louisville. "I am happy again," he writes. "I can look my neighbor in the eye, and when he smiles at me I can smile back without cracking my face. Perhaps my story will help some other poor old gray-haired cuss to get over the financial itch. My first decent night's sleep in several years was on the date when the Secretary-Treasurer of the Fountain County National Farm Loan Association of Covington, Indiana, advised me that he had disbursed the proceeds of my Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans, paying every creditor that I had, and centering my entire obligation in one place—The Federal Land Bank of Louisville.

"Several years ago I owned a good farm and a home in town. Believing that I was in position to do so, I retired from active duty on the farm and moved my family into town. The depression hit me, and I began to get into debt—not thru any foolish action on my part, but through conditions over which I had no control. I soon realized that my 'dream of retirement' had not come true. I again moved to the farm. I worked as hard and longer hours than I had ever worked before, but a little sickness and hospital bills—fuel bills, interest, taxes, soon turned my old gray whiter than it was before, and I was having long sleepless nights.

"A new farm loan association was organized in my county, and I was one of the first applicants for a loan. I had very little confidence in being able to refinance my obligations, on a long term, easy payment plan, so it was very pleasing to me when I was advised that my loan had been granted. I was the first member of our Association to receive the benefits of the Emergency Farm Credit Law.

"My interest rate has been reduced more than one-third, and I have obtained a nice reduction in my taxes. I will be able, even with present prices to make my payments from the proceeds of a small portion of my land. At my age, I need never worry about a renewal of my mortgage. That has been fixed for me—thanks to the Farm Credit Administration."

Of the more than $135,000,000 of land mortgage loans of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee closed during the last fifteen months by The Federal Land Bank of Louisville and the Land Bank Commissioner, 90 per cent has been used for refinancing debts already existing. Farm Credit Administration officials state. This, in connection with the fact that ten land bank loans and eighteen commissioner's loans out of each one hundred involve a scale-down of debts of the borrower, indicates that little, if any, increase in the total farm debt load is being incurred in the great program of refinancing agriculture which was undertaken over a year ago by the Farm Credit Administration.

The standard requirement for refinancing indebtedness of any farmer is that the Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner's loans combined shall not exceed 75 per cent of the normal valuation of the farm and must pay all debts of the farmer, thus concentrating his indebtedness in the Farm Credit Administration.

Land Bank loans on first mortgage security are made for periods up to 36 years, with semi-annual payments sufficient to meet interest and to wipe out the principal by the end of the loan period. Land Bank Commissioner's loans run for 13 years, interest payments only maturing during the first three years and amortized payments thereafter sufficient to extinguish the loan at the end of the following ten years. Federal Land Bank loans bear 4 1-2 per cent until 1938 and 5 per cent thereafter; Commissioner's loans carry 5 per cent interest.

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced open competitive examinations as follows: United States game management agent, $2,300 to $2,900, and deputy United States game management agent, $1,800 a year, Bureau of Biological Survey, Department of Agriculture. A requirement for entrance is full-time experience of a kind and duration specified in the printed announcement. Closing date, September 21, 1934.

The salaries named are subject to a deduction of not to exceed five per cent during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, as a measure of economy, and also to a deduction of 3 1-2 per cent toward a retirement annuity.

Full information may be obtained from the Secretary of the United States Civil Service Board of Examiners at the post office or customhouse in any city which has a post office of the first or second class, or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Painting is the best preventive of decay of buildings, as rotting is due largely to lack of protection against weather and fungi growth. The wood becomes rough, small fissures appear and cupping, warping and twisting followings. Paint, whether bought ready-mixed or made at home, should be of good quality, and applied carefully for permanent results.

THE FARM AND HOME
(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Eggs should be preserved by the waterglass method while they are plentiful. Place 15 dozen in a five-gallon crock or jar. Boil an equal quart of water, adding one quart of waterglass. After eggs have been chilled over night, submerge them in the solution, and place the crock in a cold, dry place. Keep it covered, and add boiled water occasionally to offset evaporation. Use the solution only once.

School hats should be of simple design, in accord with fall fashion trends, and of substantial material. They should match or harmonize with the coat; if of the same material, an ensemble effect results. Sports hats are practically desirable.

In buying hosiery, shades that go well with school and street costumes should be selected, and two pairs of each kind bought. New hose should be washed before using, and also every time they are worn as soon after removing as possible. Thin plaies or holes should be mended as soon as they appear, with thread that exactly matches the shade of the hose.

Storage of fruits and vegetables requires careful attention to temperature, humidity, and ventilation. "Warm" vegetables, squashes, cucumbers and sweetpotatoes, need a temperature of 30 degrees, "cool" ones, turnips, beets, carrots, cabbage and potatoes, should be kept at 34 to 38 degrees. Storage space for all vegetables should be well ventilated to prevent sweating and rotting.

Drying use of home preservatives and canning are ways of preventing spoilage of food products. In drying, remove sufficient water so that bacteria, yeasts and molds cannot cause changes. Harmless home preservatives such as sugar, salt, vinegar or pickles check the spoilage process, while canning destroys harmful organisms by heat and prevents further entrance.

MORE U. S. GINSENG IS BEING SOLD IN CHINA

Increased American interest in the Chinese ginseng market was evident during the past year, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. It is a fallacious idea held in the United States, Vice Consul Cooke declares, that any genuine ginseng can be readily sold in China at a huge profit. As a matter of fact, he says, in order to yield even a small margin of gain requires far more skillful and delicate handling than trade in almost any other articles of commerce. For centuries in China, ginseng has been regarded as the most potent of all remedies—the last resort when all other curative devices had failed. It is the opinion of most American and European physicians that ginseng possesses no important medicinal properties. The ginseng plant grows wild in various parts of Eastern Asia, and to a lesser extent in other parts of the world. The supply of wild ginseng is rapidly nearing exhaustion and most of the roots now on the market were cultivated. A piece of the wild root, provided it fulfills the exacting specifications established by Chinese tradition, is regarded as possessing quasi magical virtues. The United States is by far the largest foreign supplier of ginseng to China. In the last thirteen years the total ginseng shipments from the United States to China amounted to 2,379,000 pounds, valued at approximately $25,000,000.

TO MAKE TIRES AND RUBBER SHOES IN AFRICA

A plant for the production of tires and general rubber goods is to be erected at Durban, South Africa, by the Dunlop Rubber Company, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. It is said that the chief output of the proposed plant will be rubber shoes, although it appears certain that tires will also be produced. Dealers in American tires feel that they can successfully compete with the locally-manufactured product.

TOBACCO NEWS NOTES FROM OVER THE WORLD

Java's low grade tobacco which competes with U. S. minor grades called krosscock. Java exported about 8,000,000 pounds the first three months this year. Much hope it is very inferior grade due to having been planted too early.

Canary Island tobacco consumers prefer types of strong nicotine content, and the market for Kentucky Virginia and Tennessee products is being satisfactorily maintained. The islanders produced only 67,000 lbs. of their patches the past year.

United States tobacco forms principal imports into Java and is used mainly in manufacture of cigarettes. Sumatra tobacco growers decreased production costs about 25 per cent the past year and profits from auction sales of their production in Holland show sharp increases. Decreasing demand for high priced cigars in America is held responsible for decrease in sales to American buyers.

Air conditioning of ships which transport tobacco is being suggested in order to maintain humidity necessary to prevent damaging drying out. In other words, to keep the crop "in case."

Sumatra growers are experimenting with "artificial rain" and results are said to have been quite successful.

Dominican growers are holding back crops in anticipation of higher prices.

The 1934 Cuban crop is moving to market and quality is said to be superior to that of 1933, a much greater amount of fine weed having been produced.

Production of Virginia type has been more than doubled in the Philippines. Business conditions there are reported greatly improved.

Greece is endeavoring to make a barter arrangement with coal organizations in South Wales, "swapping" tobacco for coal. It is proposed to develop a demand for Greek tobacco on the part of coal miners, the idea being that the more Grecian tobacco they use the larger number will be employed of coal for shipment to Greece.

American leaf tobacco is moving into consumption in China at a satisfactory rate and at fancy prices.

Portugal imported 5,932,579 lbs. of leaf tobacco in 1933, of which 4,032,213 were from the United States.

Beginning August 1st, Honduras will prohibit importation of cigarettes. This is done to protect the home manufacturing industry.

Bolivia has two new cigarette factories and is planning manufacture of a menthol-flavored cigarette.

POTENTIAL MARKET IN EGYPT FOR U. S. OIL

Pointing out that the Egyptian Government is buying increasing quantities of crude oil for its refinery at Suez, a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department says American producers might obtain a greater share of this business. The Egyptian Government is interested in buying its future crude oil requirements in the United States, Commercial Attache Dickerson declares, and he believes that this business deserves serious consideration by American producers. He suggests that interested American suppliers study the possibility of shipping crude oil to the government refinery at Suez thru the Pacific route in order to avoid the duties of the Suez Canal.

OF TROUT EGGS IN YELLOWSTONE PARK

The Yellowstone Park station of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries has reported a season's collection of 38,190,000 blackspotted trout eggs. This season's take is the largest on record and exceeds that of 1924, the previous high year, by about 6,000,000. The eggs are secured from trout trapped on their spawning migration and are hatched for restocking the water of Yellowstone Park, other national parks and national forest areas. Since the records show that the average yield of eggs per female trout is approximately 900, it is possible to estimate that approximately 42,000 females produced the total number of eggs. The normal proportion of males to females is approximately equal, so that there is indication of a total population of 75 to 80 thousand as an absolute minimum. The catch of fish by Park visitors up to August 15 of last season approximated 64,000.

U. S. AUTOMOTIVE EXPORTS
SHOW NOTABLE IMPROVEMENT

Improved economic conditions in a number of the world markets are indicated by the strengthened demand for American automotive products during the January-June period of the current year, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. The overseas purchases of American passenger cars, trucks and buses, and miscellaneous products in this half-year period show increases of 155 per cent and 124 per cent, respectively, over the corresponding months of 1933 and 1932. The Union of South Africa, Belgium, Sweden, Australia and Japan were the chief purchasers of American passenger cars during the 1934 period, while Japan, Belgium, British India, Spain, and the Union of South Africa occupied the same position with reference to trucks and buses.

Henderson county homemakers have been selling more than $300 worth of vegetables, fruits and other products at a curb market.

SOUTH AFRICA USES A LOT OF AMERICAN CARS

The prosperity now being enjoyed by South Africa as a result of the improved position of its chief industry—gold mining, has been notably reflected in increased purchases of automobiles, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. American makes completely dominated the Union's automobile trade in the current year. While during the several years of economic depression, the small British car, with low gasoline consumption and reduced upkeep costs, enjoyed a substantial popularity, the American car has recently returned to its former outstanding position. Fully 75 per cent of all cars sold in Johannesburg in the first half of this year were of American-Canadian origin.

15,000 BABY TROUT ARE PLANTED IN PISGAH FOREST

Approximately 15,000 four to six-inch trout were recently released in the waters of Pisgah National Forest in North Carolina by the Bureau of Fisheries, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. Large numbers of fish produced at Federal hatcheries are constantly being planted in all parts of the country. During March agents of the Bureau of Fisheries conducted a survey of all streams in that area of North Carolina and determined the most suitable species, and the number of trout which could be supported by each mile of stream. This survey was followed by a stream improvement program comprising the construction of small dams, current diverters, and other improvements intended to make the streams more favorable to trout. The third stage was the delivery and planting of the fish under a carefully worked out program intended to place the fish where they would mature with a minimum loss. After hours spent in gradually changing the water in the containers, the actual planting commenced by dropping a few fish in every suitable spot over miles of stream. This was done in order to avoid bunching the fish where they would be an attraction to their natural enemies, including larger trout already in the waters.

GERMAN SPARKLING WINE INDUSTRY REVIVING

The German sparkling wine industry appears to be again coming to life. It is now growing again in its own, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. The troubles of this industry were aggravated by the fiscal policy of the Government which treated sparkling wines as a luxury to be taxed to the utmost. At the beginning of last December, the sparkling wine tax was removed entirely, which resulted immediately in a material increase in sales—which if continued will soon pay for the losses of the whole depression period. During the first half of 1934, twice as much sparkling wine was sold in Germany as during the corresponding period of 1933.

NEW ZEALAND RAISES TARIFF ON TOBACCO

Effective August 23, the New Zealand import duties on unmanufactured cigarettes, cigars, and pipe tobacco were increased, with other duty changes affecting motor vehicles, radio sets and voice-recording apparatus for office use, both from Empire and non-Empire sources, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce.

U. S. RUBBER EXPORT TRADE IN BIG GAIN

The value of rubber products exported from the United States in the first seven months of the current year registered an increase of 46 per cent and 23 per cent over the corresponding periods of 1933 and 1932, respectively, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. July shipments of rubber products declined 16 per cent as compared with June, this loss being accounted for almost entirely by curtailed exports of tires. Increases were noted in the July export trade of rubber footwear, mechanical rubber goods, rubberized fabrics, rubber specialties, and hard rubber goods.

AMERICAN SAFETY RAZOR
BLADES GAIN IN ARGENTINA

American safety razor blades are gaining in popularity in Argentina, says a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. American blades which accounted for 23 per cent of total imports during 1933 represented 32 per cent in the 1934 period.

SEAWEED SADAD IS POPULAR IN PHILIPPINES

Scientific cultivation of seaweeds for food purposes is under consideration by Philippine Government authorities, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. Seaweeds, or edible algae, abound in the coastal regions of the archipelago, especially in the north. The people in these regions gather seaweeds from which they prepare salads, pickles and soup. Quantities of seaweed are also salted and dried in the sun for future use.

Nine Boyle county poultrymen raised 2,531 chicks, 92 percent of those started, by using clean chick program plans.

Two Breathitt county farmers sold 3,500 pounds of potatoes locally at prices above market quotations.

WINE AND VERMOUTH TRADE WITH ITALY ON INCREASE

Italy's imports from the United States in the first quarter of the current year were valued at approximately three times that of total Italian exports to the American market, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department.

As usual, American cotton contributed over 60 per cent of the value in the import column. Cheese ranked first in the list of Italy's export items to the United States.

The outstanding development, however, in the export list was the increased shipments of wines and vermouth. Hats and canned tomatoes, two other major articles in Italy's export trade with the United States suffered sharp declines.

The health and attitude of the family is better if mealtime is made pleasant. Only pleasant experiences should be discussed, and teasing, quarrelling, or mention of unpleasant incidents should never be allowed. ### COST OF JURY SERVICE DURING FISCAL YEAR

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 4.—The cost of jury service in the fiscal year which ended June 30 was $118,952.81 less than in 1931, a reduction of 18 per cent, it is disclosed in a report submitted to Governor Ruby Laffoon by State Inspector and Examiner Nat B. Sewell.

The cost of jury service decreased in Boone county 9 per cent dropping from 1,754.94 in 1931 to 1,528.08 in 1934. Cost of jury service in this the 15th judicial district was 11,980.55 in 1931, and was 7,554.02 in 1934.

This reduction taking the state as a whole, of 18 per cent in cost of jury service in the state courts, is seen as the result of a campaign inaugurated by the administration to reduce this item of expense. State Auditor Dan Talbot announced a policy of strict auditing of claims submitted for jury service and notified court officials that payment of jurors would be in strict accord with the statutes. State Inspector Sewell began a periodic audit of court costs and submitted critical reports which were given publicity resulting, it is believed in curtailment of expenditures for this item from $65,447.20 in 1931 to $545,854.39 in the last fiscal year.

In the past fiscal year 28 of the 37 judicial districts of the state cut jury costs from 3 to 44 per cent as compared with 1931. Fourteen districts made decreases of more than 20 per cent.

A total of 84 counties showed decreases in jury cost ranging from 1 per cent to 71 percent. Outstanding reductions by counties were reported for example in Lyon county which topped the list with 71 per cent; Gallatin 65 per cent; Estill 64 per cent; Clinton 56 per cent; Hardin 55 per cent; Ohio 53 per cent and Floyd 50 per cent. In Floyd county where abuses were criticized the reduction in jury costs in the last three years has totalled nearly $45,000.

The report listed the seven judicial districts having the highest per capita cost for jury service in the last fiscal year as follows: 27th, Laurel, Jackson and Clay counties; 54 cents; 31st Floyd and Knott counties, 51 cents; 36th, Breathitt Wolfe and Magoffin counties, 46 cents; 24th, Johnson and Martin counties, 45 cents; 34th, Whitley, Knox and McCreary counties, 38 cents; 23rd Estill, Lee and Owsley counties, 35 cents and 28th, Pulaski, Rockcastle, Wayne and Clinton counties, 30 cents.

The seven having the lowest per capita costs were the Sixth District Ohio, Daviess, Hancock and McLean counties 8 cents; Twelfth, Anderson, Henry, Shelby, Trimble, Oldham and Spencer 12 cents; Sixteenth Kenton 12 cents; Seventh Logan, Muhlenberg, Simpson and Todd, 13 cents; Tenth, Barren Hart Larue, Nelson, Metcalfe and Bullitt 13 cents; Twenty-second Fayette, 14 cents; Thirtieth, Jefferson, 14 cents.

BURLEY COMMITTEEMEN EXPRESS APPROVAL OF GOVERNMENT CONTROL

Two hundred burley tobacco committeemen from 66 counties, meeting at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington, told Dr. J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section of the AAA, that they believed burley growers generally are satisfied with government control of production and want the program continued. They would make no change in the provisions of the present contract or the benefit payments.

The growers expressed apprehension of any modification of the control program or any possibility of its discontinuance. Release of growers, they felt, might result in greatly increased acreages and demoralization of market.

Representatives of Missouri and Indiana growers at the meeting were of the same opinion as the Kentucky growers, and expressed their cooperation in the adjustment program.

The committeemen of the burley counties, who are charged with the local administration of the adjustment program, were called together to discuss compliance measures and other problems with Dr. Hutson.

Fayette county poultry demonstration flocks are being inspected for blood testing and certification.

STATE FAIR EXHIBIT TO TELL STORY OF ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

The story of the AAA program as it affects tobacco, cotton, corn, wheat and hogs, will be told graphically in the exhibit of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, at the Kentucky State Fair in Louisville, Sept. 10-15. The thousands of Kentucky farmers cooperating in this program of farm adjustment will want to visit this exhibit to get a picture of what the government is doing to help them place their industry back on a paying basis.

Another part of the College of Agriculture exhibit will show model buildings and equipment for tobacco production, including a curing barn equipped with the ridge ventilator and a stripping room with skylights.

The crops exhibit will stress the values of pastures. Kentucky's most important and greatest crop.

The home economics exhibit will show how many useful and beautiful articles can be made at home. These will include chair bottoms, made of corn shucks, rugs from grain sacks, dressing tables from orange crate and candle sconces from tin cans.

Other exhibits will have to do with the operation of subsistence homesteads and the decentralization of industry; the improvement of dairying and poultry raising; making sausage at home, the control of the Mexican bean beetle, and methods of storing fruits and vegetables.

The 4-H club department of the College will have its usual exhibits of canned and baked foods, clothing, room improvement, etc. Four-H club boys will camp on the fair grounds hold their annual livestock judging contest, and exhibit dairy cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry.

SPANIARDS LIKE U. S. MAKE OF RADIOS

The popularity of American radio receiving sets has increased steadily in Spain, says a report to the Louisville Office of the Commerce Department. In contrast to the situation in regard to receiving sets, the participation of the United States in Spain's import trade in radio tubes declined from 63 per cent in 1930 to 48 per cent in 1933. Spain has nine broadcasting stations of relatively long range, with about 55 others serving small areas.

SILVER LEADERS 4-H CLUB

Our club was well represented at the 4-H Club Fair. We won several ribbons and also had a fine time together. All of our work is maturing fine and we hope to finish one hundred per cent this year.

Lloyd K. Jones, Pub. Chmn.

PLANS MADE FOR ANNUAL ROBINSON HARVEST FESTIVAL

Judge Edward C. O'Rear, of Frankfort will be the principal speaker at the ninth annual Robinson Harvest Festival, to be held Sept. 27-28 under the auspices of the Robinson Agricultural Experiment Substation at Quicksand, in Breathitt county.

The exhibits will be open to all Eastern Kentucky, and will include field crops, vegetables, fruits, hogs, poultry, potatoes, flowers, baked foods, canned foods, clothing, house furnishings, school displays, home-made and miscellaneous articles and a complete 4-H club department.

The educational feature of the program has been enlarged this year, and will include inspections of the Experiment Substation crops and livestock, together with lectures on various phases of farm production.

Members of the staff at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington, Ben E. Niles, secretary of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, and Eastern Kentucky county agents will assist in the educational program.

Persons interested in making exhibits should see their county agricultural agent or county home demonstration agent.

TWO BREATHTAKING ENDURANCE RUNS LAST WEEK ON SAME TRACK—A DRAMATIC COMPARISON OF SAFETY! READ BOTH LETTERS!

Ab Jenkins praises Firestone tires in toughest endurance run he ever made.

Lake Bonneville, Utah
Aug. 18th, 1934

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Chairman,
Firestone Tire & Rubber Company,
Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

Under A.A.A. supervision, I have just completed a 3,000-mile run on the hot salt desert at Lake Bonneville, Utah, averaging 127.2 miles per hour, breaking 3 speed records—without any tire trouble. Firestone tires gave an almost unbelievable performance, with temperatures as high as 120 degrees.

Last year I made a similar run with a car of less power and speed using tires of another make whose national advertising featured blowout protection. Yet, I had a blowout and made a number of tire changes.

This year I also used Firestone Spark Plugs and a Firestone Extra Power Battery with your new All-Rubber Separator. No Spark Plug failed and the Battery required no service of any kind.

If every car owner knew what my Firestone tires went through they would appreciate what Gum-Dipping means in strength and heat protection that make Firestone tires safe from blowouts. This is the toughest run I have ever made in my 25 years of breaking speed records.

Sincerely yours,
Ab Jenkins

Louisville, Ky.—A total of $184,923,535.56 was collected from taxes on liquor in the seven months period between repeal of prohibition Dec. 1, 1932 and June 30, 1934, according to Seldon R. Glenn, Collector of internal revenue in Kentucky.

Distilled spirits and wines accounted for $81,007,884.11 in receipts collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, while fermented malt liquors furnished the government revenue of $103,915,651.45.

Acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue Wright Matthews, of Washington, points out, however, that the excise and ratification taxes on liquors are paid at the point of production or rectification, hence the receipts from these sources do not reflect the consumption of liquor in the various states. The receipts from special taxes paid by wholesale and retail dealers afford a better method of comparison.

In the following 29 states the sale of liquor has been legalized: California, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin. In 10 of these states operated by the states have been established, namely: Michigan, Iowa, Montana, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia and Washington.

SIMPLICITY, COLOR TO FEATURE STYLES

Featured fabrics this fall will be nubbed woolsens, colorful and warm looking, multicolored tweeds, velvours and hairy woolsens, according to Iris S. Davenport of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Styles will be characterized by simplicity, though colors will be rich and the silhouette moulded.

Skirts are straight, with fullness introduced by stitched panels that break into pleats below the knee. Quite often the fullness appears in the back and front, sides remaining slim and smooth. Skirts remain the same length as during the past season except for sports wear, which is one or two inches shorter. Necklines are high, some draped one side and others bateau, while still others have small upstanding collars. Square necklines are also shown. Color accent is given by use of bright grosgrain ribbon, yokes and upstanding bands of metallic cloth.

Sleeves are also simple, in accord with the fall style trend, and may be bracelet length or, if long, should fit the wrist snugly. Armholes may often be large and deep, made by cutting the armseye au raglan, by square lines or by the sleeves merging with the rest of the material.

Stiff silks, metallized materials and "cellophane shot" fabrics and velvets will be much in use. Velveteens and corduroys in very light weight appear in dresses, suits and blouses. On the whole, the color range is wide. The rich colors, deep reds, rusts, browns and blues are high style. Black is always good, and green is again desirable.

EXPENDITURES REDUCED

Frankfort, Ky.—Expenditures for operation of the state government of Kentucky, including the highway department, were $3,636,727.06 less in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1934 as compared with the preceding fiscal year, it is revealed by an audit submitted to Governor Ruby Laffoon by State Inspector and Examiner Nat B. Sewell.

Expenditures in the fiscal year which close June 30 totalled $31,803,207.46 as compared with expenditures in the fiscal period ending June 30, 1933 which totalled $35,439,934.52.

Summarized expenditures for the last fiscal year are as follows: State road fund $14,032,819; general expenditure fund $12,206,445.61, in which is included $1,778,114.84 in fees collected by the University of Kentucky and Teachers Colleges, which are paid into the general fund and returned to the school making the collection; common school fund $4,279,944.33; sinking fund $10,200; University of Kentucky millage tax $569,949.82; Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College, Richmond, millage tax $181,377.06; Western State Teachers College, Bowling Green, millage tax $242,639.26; Murray State Teachers College millage tax $139,915.91; Morehead State Teachers College millage tax $139,915.91.

Other funds including highway bridge bond funds and National Industrial Recovery Act funds for road construction, received by the state from the federal government, but and from bridge tolls are received and disbursed, yet are not included.

Net expenditures from the general fund, after fees collected by state educational institutions and returned to them are deducted, totalled $10,428,330.77 last fiscal year as compared with $9,066,631.12 in the fiscal period ending June, 30th, 1933. General fund expenditures in 1931 amounted to $12,273,346.32.

JEWISH IMMIGRATION

HELPS HOLY LAND BUSINESS

More leather is being consumed in Palestine, at present than ever before and indications are that consumption will continue to increase, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. American exporters are obtaining a fair share of this trade despite the keen competition from European sources. Immigration into Palestine of large numbers of Jews in recent years has very largely accounted for the increased purchasing power and improved standards of living in this territory.

Cuttings of alfalfa last month, Rockcastle county gave one ton per acre where lime, phosphate and inoculated seed were used. Only one-half ton per acre was yielded on other lands.

AMERICAN CARS MAINTAIN STRONG POSITION IN MOROCCO

Although French motor vehicles predominate in Algeria and Tunisia, American makes account for a sizable share of the Moroccan market, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce Department. One reason for this is the lower prices of American cars as compared with French and British makes and construction particularly adapted to the roads and trails of the country. Of total passenger cars registered in Morocco in 1933, 58 per cent were French and 36 per cent American, while the comparable figures for commercial vehicles were 36 and 54 per cent.

AMERICAN APPLES IN STRONG POSITION IN ARGENTINE MARKET

American apples will continue to maintain their present strong position in the Argentine market until such time as large quantities of domestically grown apples come into production, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. NUMBER 34

RECORD CLIP

DELIVERED IN BOONE COUNTY LAST TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, AND THURSDAY—58,443 LBS. DELIVERED—WAS SOLD TO SABLE & SON OF LOUISVILLE.

Boone county wool growers delivered at Walton, Burlington and Petersburg on last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday a record wool clip of 58,443 pounds for 10,600 fleeces according to H. E. White, president and Lillard Scott, secretary of the pool.

The clip was sold to M. Sable & Sons of Louisville for $25.25 per hundred net and brought Boone county wool growers a total of approximately $14,596.75. Mr. John Neumeier, a representative of the Louisville firm was in charge of taking up the wool. Mr. Neumeier is known to all Boone county wool growers for his honest way and fair dealings. All were well pleased with the method of grading and handling the wool.

The price received was a discouragement in the light of what was expected earlier in the season. The present woolen and textile strike has demoralized the market and has been a dark cloud on the price situation since early June. The sales committee had been waiting for strike problems to be settled but a large number of growers thought they could wait no longer and would rather take a smaller price now than wait from two to three months before prices would be expected to take a substantial rise. The price received was a substantial advance over the price offered for unpooled wool on the day sold.

The wool growers have shown a splendid spirit of cooperation and loyalty during the recent difficulty encountered in selling the clip. The sales committee did their very best under the conditions and greatly appreciated the spirit of loyalty shown by members. The total of the pounds delivered at each place were as follows: 24,621 pounds at Walton; 18,534 pounds at Burlington and 15,229 pounds at Petersburg.

NOTICE TO PARENTS

Children between the ages of six and sixteen must enroll in some school within the first two weeks of school.

All children in the census between the ages of seven and sixteen must enroll in some school in the county within the first two weeks of school. If they are not enrolled the parent or guardian will be subject to a fine not to exceed ten dollars and costs for the first offense, and not to exceed twenty dollars and costs for the second offense.

Even though a child has finished the eighth grade he must enroll in some school according to the compulsory attendance laws, until he has passed his sixteenth birthday.

Books will be furnished free to the children of the first four grades. In addition a small appropriation is made by the county for books for those who cannot afford their own books.

No appropriation is made by the county or the state to buy clothing yet, the school law does not exempt a child for the excuse that he has no suitable school clothing. However, if your child cannot attend school because of clothing, please report your case to the attendance officer and an investigation will be made and if those conditions do exist an effort will be made to secure clothing.

We are trying to work in cooperation with the missionary societies in the county, the red cross and the county relief office to provide clothing for those in need.

Anyone making an honest effort to get their children in school will receive all the help and consideration we can give them. On the other hand, those making no effort, will receive very little consideration.

A check-up will be made just as soon as the enrollment is sent in from each of the schools.

—Mrs. Sibbie Reimer, Attendance Officer.

FLORENCE P. T. A. TO MEET

The Florence P. T. A. will hold their first meeting of the season September 13 at 7:45 p. m. at the school house, with Mrs. LeLwis Sullivan, president in charge. All members requested to be present.

JESS FRED HAWKINS

Jess Fred Hawkins died suddenly last Sunday at his home in Walton at the age of 48 years. Mr. Hawkins had sat down and was reading his Bible when he dropped dead.

He was the father of eight children, seven boys and one girl, all being under the age of 15 years. He not only leaves the children to mourn his death, but a widow and three brothers and two sisters and a host of friends.

His funeral was held Monday of this week at the Walton Baptist Church before a large assemblage of friends, he was a member of this church. Rev. Wooten spoke the funeral discourse and was assisted by several other Baptist ministers.

His body was removed to Louisville, Ky., where interment was made in Crest Hill Cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by C. Scott Chambers and Grubbs of Walton.

BURLINGTON WINS OVER BELLEVUE "PICK-UPS"

The Burlington base ball club won its second straight ball game Sunday afternoon at Bellevue when they defeated a pick up team of that place by a one sided score of 17-7.

SCHOOL OPENED

MONDAY OF THIS WEEK IN BOONE COUNTY—TWO HUNDRED AND NINETEEN ENROLLED IN BURLINGTON SCHOOL.

Monday morning of this week school opened in Boone County for the first time since the close for the spring holidays and summer vacation.

At the local school there were 219 students enrolled on the first day and several others are expected to enroll in the next few days.

Two new teachers are included in the local faculty this year, taking the place of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Lamb, they are Miss Mary Lobush, of Florence who is teaching the 5th and 6th grades; and Mr. J. F. Moore who is one of the high school faculty and will be athletic director.

An unusually large crowd of citizens turned out for the opening day. Prof. E. E. Kirkwood in his talk indicated that he thought the community was back of the teachers in an effort to make this a great school year.

In the last session of legislature of Frankfort they passed a bill that provided for the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th grade pupils to be furnished with free text books. This will save several of the school patrons several dollars.

All children from 6 to 16 years of age are expected to be in school unless they have a work permit from the Truant Officer, according to Mrs. Reimer, Boone county's new truant officer.

Following is the number of children in the five consolidated high schools in the county:

Burlington	219
Hebron	317
Hamilton	161
New Haven	245
Florence	365
Total	1,307

EXHIBIT 4-H WORK AT STATE FAIR

Seven Boone county 4-H club members are exhibiting their sewing club work at the state fair at Louisville this week according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. They are Jane Elkins, Waneta Landrum, Margie Getker, Kathryn Goodridge, Helen Bradford and Lola Mae Walton of Hebron and Ella Ruth Black of Hamilton.

The above entries were awarded first or second place in the county contests which is a requirement to be eligible to enter the State Fair. The Constance "Corncracker" 4-H club is exhibiting the community club secretary's book at the State Fair again this year. Last year this club was awarded a high place in this exhibit.

MILK PRODUCERS

The primary purpose of the United Milk Producers Association is to unite the producers of all classes in the Cincinnati Milk Shed, in an effort to boost the price of milk. Unless the producers get a considerable increase in the price within the near future, many of them will be forced to sell out before next spring because of the rapidly increasing cost of production, which is now nearly twice as high as the price received by the average producer for milk.

It is only through the united action of the milk producers that the price can be raised. An organization is necessary and indispensable to obtain a hearing before any existing tribunal or commission created by law for the purpose of aiding producers of dairy products. It must be a regularly and legally organized cooperative body, with a name, a Constitution and By-Laws, and a full membership. The larger the membership the greater will be its prestige, power and influence before any Commission.

It is not the aim of this Association to destroy any existing milk organization, nor to interfere in any manner with its membership, management or policy. It is not aing any producer to quit the organization to which he belongs. It is not seeking to force any organization or dealer into bankruptcy court, as possible, by endeavoring to restore to them that which belongs to them—their share of the consumer's dollar, which means a considerable increase in price. This cannot be done in a few weeks or a few months.

It is impossible to get for the producer the cost of production of milk, which is now more than $3.00 per hundred, plus a reasonable profit within the near future, under existing economic conditions, without materially decreasing the consumption, which would be very harmful.

A number of meetings have been held in Boone and Kenon Counties within the last two weeks. More than 95 percent of the producers who attended these meetings have signed both the application for membership and the petition with reference to a strike, if it should become necessary and expedient. Committees have been appointed at each meeting to see the producers who did not attend, and to get them into the movement. It is important that each committeeman see each producer in his respective community, as soon as possible, get his signature and make his return to Mr. Joel Gray, Burlington, Harold Crigler, M. L. Aylor or E. J. Aylor, Hebron. There is nothing to be gained by delay.

The following meetings are to be held this week in Boone County:

Constance, Rucker Store Room, Wednesday night.
Florence, Farm Bureau, Thursday night.
Hamilton School House, Friday night. All meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m., slow time.

Every milk producer should attend and be prepared to join at once and push the organization to a successful end.

4-H MEMBERS COMPETE AT HARVEST HOME

Three hundred and seven Boone county 4-H club members from the community 4-H clubs will be eligible to exhibit their project work at the forty-ninth annual Harvest Home Fair this year according to county agent H. R. Forkner. The premium list has been enlarged and a splendid spirit of cooperation is being shown by the Fair Board.

Members will enter and exhibit their work next Saturday morning, September 15th. The premium list offers special prizes for exhibits of 4-H sewing, canning, poultry, rabbits, vegetables, corn, tobacco and community club posters. Points will be given to all members taking part and to their community clubs. The 4-H organization of the county is urged to give the fair all cooperation possible for a successful event.

FAMILY REUNION AND GOLDEN WEDDING

The descendants of Wm. J. and Elizabeth Meglason Penick will meet at the home of J. T. Penick to celebrate the annual reunion of the Penick family Sunday, Sept. 16. All descendants of the Penick family are invited. It will also be the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Penick.

COOPERATE

IN ERADICATION OF BANG DISEASE FREE HERDS—ONE OF MOST DREADED AND EXPENSIVE DISEASES IN DAIRY HERDS

A large number of Boone county dairymen have listed their herds to cooperate in the government Bang Disease or contagious abortion in dairy cattle eradication program according to county agent H. R. Forkner.

The Bang disease is one of the most dreaded and expensive diseases to the dairy herd. No dairymen can afford to keep a herd of cows infested with this disease when the loss of calves, decreased production of milk and diseased milk are considered. The government coming to the aid of the dairymen at this time brings the greatest aid to dairy improvement in recent years. More than fifty percent of the herds of Boone county will likely have reactors to this disease.

The program is purely a voluntary one in which as many as three hundred or more cows for testing are signed up, the government will do the testing free of charge and pay up to a certain amount for all reactors. The dairymen agrees to sell for slaughter all animals reacting. The farmer in addition to receiving the government payment receives the selling or salvage price of the animal. This program is similar in most respects to the T. B. testing with which most farmers are familiar.

ZIMMER CLUB HOUSE OPENS FOR THE FALL SEASON

Last Saturday night, September 9th, Zimmer's Club House at the end of the Fort Mitchell car line opened for the Fall Season with a record breaking crowd. Mr. Zimmer reported to us that he is now able to entertain his guests in the best of style and asks that you stop at his place and give it a trial. He has good music and one of the best dance floors in Greater Cincinnati.

Quite a large number of Boone County folk attended the opening Saturday night.

BASEBALL NEWS

The Erlanger A. C. ball team defeated the Midway nine Sunday. Ray Colston was on the mound for Midway and hurled a nice game. The game was called by Harold Aylor, one of Boone county's best umpires.

Sunday, September 16th, the strong Verona team will cross bats with the Midway team at Midway park. Come out and enjoy a good game. The game will be called at 2:30 (fast time.)

Mrs. H. W. Bentam returned to her home in Baltimore, Md., after having spent a month with her parents Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hempling.

NARROW ESCAPEE

WHEN CARS COLLIDE ON HIGHWAY NEAR FLORENCE—SLIPPERY ROAD BLAMED FOR ACCIDENT—NO INJURIES SUFFERED BY OCCUPANTS.

Friday morning when coming to work in Burlington, James Ransom, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Ransom of Verona, barely missed being crushed to death when the car he was driving slid on the wet road into another car driven by Wilford Rouse, of Burlington.

Mr. Rouse was going to town with his market produce which he takes in every week and had his wife and daughter with him. As he attempted to round a curve in the Burlington-Florence road near the home of Dr. Northcutt at Florence, young Ransom's car collided head-on into his automobile. The wet and slippery road, resulting from the light rain Friday morning was the cause of the accident.

However, none of the occupants of either car were hurt, but the automobiles were smashed up considerably. Mr. Rouse also suffered a substantial loss in milk, when the collision occurred, as he had several bottles of milk which were broken.

SMALL PAPER THIS WEEK

Due to a breakage on our Linotype we are unable to give our readers the full eight page paper they have been accustomed to receiving. We were compelled to set our type in another shop this week and therefore could not devote the time to the paper that we have in the past. It is quite an undertaking to compose even four pages in two nights time, and if we are unable to have necessary repairs made in time for next week's issue we will skip that issue until repairs are made. We hope that our readers will excuse us, and we will make every effort to have our own machine in operation for next week's issue.

AAA COMPLIANCE COMPLETED

The checking of AAA tobacco and Corn-Hog compliance in Boone county on 740 tobacco and 219 corn-hog contracts will be completed this week according to county agent H. R. Forkner. The work has been pushed rapidly by ten farm and one county supervisor and is being completed at a cost of approximately 95 cents per farm based on tobacco alone.

The first adjustment payment on tobacco based on the sale value of the 1933 crop will be paid soon after the compliance forms are completed and forwarded to Washington.

E. O. Rouse, of Florence was a welcome visitor in Burlington, Tuesday morning.

FINISHING TOUCH

PETERSBURG ELIMINATES ANOTHER TEAM BY DEFEATING HEBRON 5 TO 0—BILL BRADBURN ALLOWS HEBRON BUT TWO HITS.

Everyone now plainly sees that Petersburg has been a tough nut to crack in this elimination. They are the one team which composed the elimination that can really be proud of their success against the other teams because they are the only team that entered the elimination with home boys only and emerged with the same line-up.

Petersburg seemed to be the team that was picked to put the finishing touches to all teams that were eliminated. Of course they could not be said to have eliminated Florence officially, but they were booked to play Florence the day Florence dropped out. After Burlington had suffered two defeats, they were called on to meet Petersburg. The result being an end of Burlington so far the elimination was concerned.

The same story is true of Hebron, who played their last game of this elimination with already two defeats marked against them, when Petersburg again gave the finishing touches by giving Hebron their third defeat.

Bellevue, the only team other than Petersburg to pull through the elimination has the same standing as Petersburg in games won and lost. Both teams lost only one game each. However, Bellevue's defeat was given them by Petersburg by a score of 4 to 2. At the time this game was played, Bellevue too, had their home boys only. Later, however, because of the absences of Leon Ryle and "Whitey" Rogers from their line-up, Bellevue was forced to leave home to pick up a couple of ball players.

It has been rumored that Bellevue is going into the series against Petersburg with practically the same team line-up they began with. That would mean Petersburg home boys against Bellevue home boys. The injury suffered by "Whitey" Rogers a couple of weeks ago, Leon Ryle being drafted into the Coca-Cola team of Covington and the fact that Howell Hensley may be unable to play after starting to school makes this statement somewhat uncertain and it is doubtful if Bellevue will be able to complete a line-up without the aid of a foreigner or two.

The first game of this series which is to be the three best out of five games, is to be played at Petersburg Saturday, September 15th.

Both Bellevue and Petersburg can feel proud that they can still put up a fairly good ball team with home boys. Only because of misfortune in being able to hold her boys together has Bellevue been forced to seek other players.

RECEIVER

APPOINTED FOR NORTHERN DISTRICT WAREHOUSING CORPORATION—MANY NORTHERN KENTUCKY FARMERS INTERESTED.

Judge J. G. Vallandigham appointed P. B. Gaines receiver for Northern District Warehousing Corp., on the amended petition of C. O. Hempling and others against the corporation. Only the quick action of John L. Vest who represents the plaintiffs prevented P. O. Minor and six other directors, thru Attorney Steve Blakely from having the receiver appointed by the Federal court at Louisville.

This is a case in which many people in Northern Kentucky are interested, there being some 22,000 stockholders and this is the first time the plaintiffs have been able to get to a point when the affair of the corporation can be wound up and distributions can be made.

CONTRACTS SUBMITTED FOR SIGNATURE

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog allotment committee's figures for 14,133 hogs, 9,746 acres of corn and 2,512 hog litters were approved for final signatures by the State Board of Review at Louisville on last Friday. Plans were immediately made at the county office to clear the contracts to Washington for the first adjustment payments.

The contracts in triplicate form have been typed, will be signed by the allotment committee on Tuesday of this week and submitted for final signature by the growers beginning Wednesday morning. The securing of the final signatures on eighty percent of the the contracts is expected to be completed by Saturday of this week.

The contracts will be forwarded to Washington for payment in two batches. The first batch will be forwarded immediately after eighty percent of the final signatures are secured. The second batch will include those who are slow in submitting signatures. Payments will likely be received in a very short time for those who put their contracts in the first batch while the second batch the payments will be delayed until signatures on all the remaining contracts have been secured. The county Control Committee is setting meeting dates in the various communities for the final signatures. Each grower will be notified by postal card of the meeting date in his community.

The contracts will bring to Boone county farmers approximately $26,500 in hog payments and $10,684.20 in corn payments.

Governor Laffoon has announced that he is not satisfied with the way Thornton Wilcox is administering the relief work in Kentucky and has practically refused to kick in $200,000 a month as Kentucky's part of the relief fund. The Governor makes the statement that it is into his intention to get his clutches on the relief organization but he desires to have the funds sift through the hands of his friends. He says that he has received reports that the relief funds are being misapplied and he fears that this money is being used to build up a political machine against his desires. The Governor is angry because he has not been consulted in any of the county set-ups or the expenditure of any of the money that was allotted to Kentucky by the federal government. It was to be expected that in the distribution of such a vast sum of money that many unworthy men would get on the relief rolls, but so far as we are able to investigate the relief administration has functioned according to President Roosevelt's orders and desires. We do not believe that if the relief organization was turned over to Governor Laffoon and his political crowd it would be an improvement. We are not alone in our belief that there is any necessity for fifty per cent of the money being spent for relief. We have too many politicians hawking "wolf" and shaking a skeleton in the face of H. L. Hopkins. The whole matter of unemployment is exaggerated and it is a well-known fact that many men who never worked nor never will be taking advantage of present conditions. The substantial taxpayers are using a scrutinizing eye and some of our farmers who are sorely in need of extra help at this time are tabling those who refuse to assist them for fear it would hurt their standing in securing direct relief on public work at wages that the prohibitive on the farm. There is no one whose conscience is so seared who does not want to extend financial assistance to every worthy family that is out of employment or is infirm or unable to work. This class of worthy citizens should be well taken care of as long as the resources of this nation will permit.

—Falmouth Outlook.

ANOTHER RHEA BOOM

The residents of the district of Road Commissioner Tom Rhea seem to be pleased with his services as a road commissioner. Two weeks ago thousands gathered on a stated occasion in his home town to give public expression to their approval and appreciation. Last week an assembly in Monroe county in his district consisting of approximately 5,000 people met as a mark of respect and recognition. He was again presented on a probable candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor next year. In commending his work on the road commission one of the speakers in praising Mr. Rhea said in substance that in looking over the work that Tom Rhea had done in that district and what had been accomplished and comparing it with what other road commissioners had done in the same length of time he wondered what the other members had done with the money allocated to their districts. We are not advised as to what Commissioner Rhea has done with his money but he must be doing pretty well and evidently is spending more money on roads and less for jobs and paying political debts.

SPECIAL TERM

OF BOONE CIRCUIT COURT HELD MONDAY—JUDGE THOS. B. GREGOR APPOINTED AS SPECIAL JUDGE—WILL RENDER DECISION NEXT MONDAY.

A special term of the Boone Circuit court was held Monday, with the Hon. Thos. B. Gregor, Frankfort, Ky., special judge, presiding. Judge Gregor was designated as a special judge by Judge Rees of the Court of Appeals to hear the question of the liability of the sureties on the bond of R. E. Berkshire as Master Commissioner of the Boone Circuit Court.

The court had ordered that a rule be issued against the sureties on the bond of R. E. Berkshire as Master Commissioner to pay to the present Master, funds in his hands in pending cases in that court. All of the sureties on the several bonds were represented by Counsel and filed their responses to the rule issued by the court. This rule made it necessary for the sureties to reply, which they did by their separate answers.

The attorneys for the sureties were, Judge J. M. Lassing, B. H. Riley, John L. Vest, W. D. Vest, and N. E. Riddell. Other attorneys present were Judge Sidney Gaines, Thos. X. Dixon, Chas. W. Riley and Judge J. G. Vallandigham, John Crigler and O. M. Rogers, who represents R. E. Berkshire, the Master Commissioner.

The question of the liability of the sureties on the bonds of R. E. Berkshire was presented to Judge McGregor, who after hearing the arguments of the attorneys and the records of the court regarding the validity and execution of the bonds, requested the attorneys to present to him the citations of their authorities and stated that he would come to Burlington, and render his opinion and decision next Monday.

The hearing, occupied the entire day; the chief argument was made by Judge J. M. Lassing. Upon the judgment of the court will depend the liability, if any, of the sureties on the bonds of R. E. Berkshire while he was acting as Master Commissioner of the Boone Circuit Court.

All questions that were submitted to the court were based on the orders and records of the court and no evidence was, or could have been presented the legal liability was the paramount question for decision.

FOUR HUNDRED ACRES TO BE SOLD AT THE COURT HOUSE DOOR

Approximately four hundred and seven acres of land will be sold by the Master Commissioner of Boone county at the Court house door in Burlington Monday, October 1, at 1 p. m. Central Standard time.

This land will be sold on a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to execute bonds for the payment of the purchase price.

This land is located about one mile above Big Bone Springs, on Big Bone Creek; three quarters of a mile of creek bottom land on the west side of Big Bone Creek, consisting of about fifty acres of rich bottom land, which will raise good corn each year without fertilizing.

This is one of the best chances that any prospective buyer will get for many years to come, and will possibly sell at the lowest price for many years. Now is the time to invest in real estate—prices will not be so low in the future. Anyone interested in buying real estate should look this property over. There is no better place to invest money than in real estate.

In other columns of this issue will be found advertisements describing the property, and giving the boundaries.

ALFRED JONES, THE POPULAR MAIL CARRIER ON ROUTE NO. 2 HAS BEEN ON THE SICK LIST FOR THE PAST WEEK. HIS MAIL ROUTE HAS BEEN SERVED BY HIS EFFICIENT SUBSTITUTE CARRIER, ARTHUR JONES.

Heavy clouds and approaching dusk were the cause of the first game of the "Little World Series" of Boone county between Petersburg and Belleview ending without either team a winner or loser.

Eleven innings of hard fought baseball were played before the game was called by an unanimous vote of the umpires. This decision of the umpire was a sensible move to make because it was so dark it was almost impossible for the eye to follow the ball from its starting point to its stopping point.

Every witness of the game knows that it was a great game; that breaks if there were any were evenly matched; that either team had an inning or two in which they should have tied the game up; and that every player on either team were fighting to win.

If you are a baseball fan, you don't want to miss the game to be played this Saturday between Petersburg and Belleview at Belleview. You will see two of the best and most evenly matched teams that have played ball on Boone county ball parks for several years.

ORGANIZATION

OF MILK PRODUCERS BEING PUSHED THIS WEEK—HEARING IS HELD WEDNESDAY IN REGARD TO PRICE OF MILK BEFORE COMMISSION.

Three meetings were held in Boone county the past week, and a large number of milk producers have been enrolled as members of the Milk Producers Association.

Meetings will be held in Campbell county this week, as follows: Alexandria Thursday night.

Grant's Lick School House, Friday night.

Persimmon Grove School House, Saturday night.

A meeting will be held at the school house at Crittenden Monday, September 24, at 7:30 p. m. slow time.

The hearing before the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission, on an application for a price of $2.70 per 100 for No. 1 and No. 2 milk, is set for Wednesday, the 19th. What the outcome of this hearing will be no one knows. If the United Milk Producers Association had a large membership, there would be no question but what the Milk Commission at Columbus would grant a substantial part, if not all of the increase that organization and committee is asking for.

Every milk producer who has not joined the Association, should not delay the matter any longer. This is the time to organize and get the producers all in one price-fixing organization. The quicker it is done, the better it will be for everyone.

If any producer has not signed the application for membership or the petition with reference to a strike, kindly do so at once by seeing one of the following persons:

Terming liquor a "nonessential luxury," Senator Barkley said that any proposal to reduce federal liquor taxes must hinge on facts shown by experience with the new tax schedules now in effect.

Hope that elimination or reduction of the processing tax on tobacco would benefit the tobacco farmer was expressed by the senator.

"Tobacco is bearing an even higher tax than the old war tax," he said. "The tobacco tax is the last of the old war taxes that has not been removed, and should have been reduced long ago."

Since the manufacturers recompense themselves for paying the processing taxes by forcing lower prices on the farmer, Senator Barkley is hopeful that lowering of the processing tax will react favorably to the grower.

Senator Barkley shares the recently expressed hope of Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi that new taxes may be avoided in the next session of Congress.

Senator Barkley pointed out that $400,000,000 was provided by the last Congress by tightening existing tax laws to stop the leaks.

"If revenue continues satisfactory, it will go a long way toward filling our revenue needs," he said.

Regarding the informal talk now going on in Washington over the proposal to levy a tax on the "unearned increment" of mines profiting from government-pegged gold and silver prices, Senator Barkley said he doubted the propriety of such a tax.

He pointed out that, where mining companies show larger profits because of artificial price stimulation, the federal income tax will catch them. Some mines which could not be operated at old prices are now able to produce at a profit, he said, because the working of low grade ores did not yield enough under old prices.

He said the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member, probably will begin discussing revenue problems in December, while Congress awaits the Treasury's official estimate of fiscal needs, and the House's preparation of revenue proposals.

WEED TAX CUT

URGED AS AID FOR GROWERS—KENTUCKY SENATOR HOPES THAT COUNTRY CAN GET ALONG WITHOUT NEW TAXES—"LEAK" STOPPING CITED.

Louisville, Sept. 15—At what point will liquor taxes be high enough to yield the maximum revenue for government and low enough to discourage bootlegging?

This debatable question was asked by Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky in discussing the probable tax program of the next Congress, which will meet in December.

Terming liquor a "nonessential luxury," Senator Barkley said that any proposal to reduce federal liquor taxes must hinge on facts shown by experience with the new tax schedules now in effect.

ALL COSTS REDUCED

The upkeep on motor cars has been reduced. Both factors come down. Operating costs also have been achieved through improved construction and the use of better materials, in some instances materials developed especially for motor cars. These facts were brought out last night by C. W. Myers of Florence, local Ford dealer.

"When the cost of operating a motor car is considered," he said, "one of the most important factors is weight. The use of steel bodies and the wide use of aluminum in engines have achieved a good deal in the way of weight reduction. Obviously, the less dead-weight there is to move, the less power required.

"The use of aluminum cylinder heads and pistons has become more prevalent with the development of high compression engines. Last year there were only four makes of cars with aluminum cylinder heads. This year there are sixteen, and on three others they are optional at extra cost. Aluminum pistons are used on 22 makes of cars.

"The Ford V-8 has been heralded as the most economical Ford car ever built. It has all of the features just named, and in addition it has another weight advantage in the short crankshaft of the V-type engine. This year's Ford VV-8 crankshaft is made of cast alloy steel, a new material developed by the Ford Motor Company, designed to withstand twice as long as forged steel the alternating bending strains to which all crankshafts are subjected. This new alloy has particles of finely divided graphite distributed through it, which has a self lubricating effect that increases the life of bearings.

"In addition to light weight, an advantage of aluminum cylinder heads is that carbon accumulates much more slowly than with iron heads. But possibly the greatest reduction in upkeep has been achieved through the use of tungsten steel exhaust valve seats. With this type of valve seat, valve grinding is seldom necessary.

"In the case of Ford cars, upkeep can be greatly reduced by owners' availing themselves of the Ford parts exchange service. As a result of these parts being reconditioned on a volume basis at the factory, by the same men, machines and methods, that are used in making the original parts, it is possible to offer them to motorists at a considerable saving. A complete engine, for example, is available at a cost that is only about one-half of what the overhauling cost is when done without the facilities of precision machinery and factory mechanics."

FISH HATCHERIES DOING BIG WORK FOR ANGLERS

Approximately 4,335,608,000 fish fry, 2,302,119,840 fish eggs, and 96,025,000 fingerling fish, yearlings, and adults were produced in the hatcheries of the United States Bureau of Fisheries and released in the waters of every state in the Union and in Alaska during the fiscal year 1933, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. In addition to the output of the fish hatcheries 75,884,150 fish were salvaged from pools on the overflowed areas of the Mississippi River area during the year and returned to the waters of the Mississippi and its tributaries. The system of Federal hatcheries inaugurated with the establishment of the United States Fish Commission in 1872 reached its point of greatest expansion and development during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933. New hatcheries and auxiliaries placed in operation, together with enlargements and improvements of facilities at older stations, rendering possible an output exceeded only once previously, it was stated.

CORN-HOG CONTRACTS OFF TO WASHINGTON

Corn-hog adjustment contracts from a large number of Kentucky counties have been completed, approved by the state board of review and forwarded to Washington says an announcement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Among counties in which the corn-hog work has been completed are Carroll, Simpson, Robertson, Oldham, Spencer, Franklin, Clark, Bath, Nicholas, Bracken, Graves, Jessamine, Marion, Fayette, Henry and Campbell.

Other counties are expected to complete the work soon and all contracts probably will be in Washington by October 1.

Dean Thomas P. Cooper said that the big job of completing the tobacco sign-up had delayed the corn-hog adjustment program. The corn-hog contracts were complicated and required a large amount of work on the part of county agents and members of local committees. Dean Cooper praised the work of the committees and said that they have rendered a highly valuable public service to the state. Approximately $3,000,000 will be received in benefit payments by Kentucky farmers cooperating in the corn-hog adjustment program.

HARRISON FARMERS DEVELOP DAIRYING

Encouraged by the establishment of a modern creamery and cheese plant at Cynthiana, Harrison county farmers are improving and enlarging their herds and are finding dairying a dependable source of income.

Two Jersey herds owned by Frazier LeBus and Clarence LeBus, Jr. and a Guernsey herd owned by Dr. Paul Lail, located in Harrison county, are being tested for production in the Bluegrass Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

A list of suggestions about the production of clean milk and other dairying problems, prepared by J. C. Downing while he was assistant county agent in Harrison county, was distributed to 700 farmers.

CORN SHUCK BOTTOM FOR ANTIQUE CHAIR

A 100-year-old maple chair with a bottom of corn shucks was a part of the home demonstration exhibit of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, at the State Fair.

The chair was refinished by Mrs. Yoder Million of the Madison county homemakers' club, under the supervision of Miss Hazel Graves, home demonstration agent. It was taken from an old workshop, and several coats of paint were taken off with a lye starch paste. Two rungs were put in, and two coats of shellac applied. Inner parts of dry corn shucks were softened, twisted and woven to make the bottom, the work taking about one full day.

Work of this sort is a revival of an old household art. The exhibit at the State Fair consisted of articles made from discarded "odds and ends," such as pieces of cloth, wrapping paper, burlap, and boxes, made into hooked and braided rugs, quilts, a desk set, dressing table, and other things.

Most of the eggs will be laid by then and the flock will have ample time to range.

SKYLIGHTS IMPROVE TOBACCO STRIPPING

Proper light in a stripping room is an important factor in grading tobacco. Tobacco experts believe that skylights in the north slope of the roof of the stripping room provide better distributed light than do windows in side walls. Skylights never have been widely used because of the difficulty and expense of making them waterproof.

A system now has been perfected whereby the skylight glass is placed directly on the rafters without using window sash. Metal strips and putty are used to keep out water. This type of skylight may be put on an old stripping room or included in plans for a new one. Plans may be obtained by writing to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington.

ADJUSTMENT OBJECTIVE IS PRODUCTION BALANCE

Agricultural adjustment is passing out of its emergency phase of crop reduction into its second phase wherein the principal objective is to maintain a balance between production and effective marketing requirements, both domestic and export, it is pointed out by Chester C. Davis, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

"The farmers of America," he says, "partly because of their cooperative effort and partly because of the misfortunes of the drouth which is requiring the use of much of the burdensome surplus, are passing out of the emergency stage of this program, the stage when emphasis necessarily was placed on curtailing production in order to eliminate unsaleable surpluses.

"I do not conceive that the Agricultural Adjustment Act was merely an implement to reduce the depressing surpluses and then stop. Certainly there would be no permanent value in such a program. As I read the Act, we have a plain mandate not only to establish a proper balance between production and consumption of agricultural commodities, but to maintain that balance. Although that balance is not yet established in most of our major crops and the drouth has created some new maladjustments, we are already fashioning our future activity toward maintaining a level of production of farm products that will be ample for domestic requirements plus our probable export demands, that will be expected to return a fair price to the farmer.

"During the rest of 1934 and 1935 it will be up to the farmers who are marching in step in this great cooperative program to assist in developing a well-rounded general plan for the future. No agricultural program will be adopted or long continued unless it is a farmer's program, understood by them and carried forward by them."

THE GARDEN

TAKING STOCK ACCOUNT III By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

In the past two weeks stock account has been taken of this year's failures as well as of this year's particular garden successes. This week's discussion will deal with potatoes, both white and sweet.

White Potatoes—At the risk of becoming boresome, it must nevertheless be said that this year again those persons who used certified seed potatoes are glad that they did. Because of its superior vigor, certified seed started off quickly and thus developed before the spring rains stopped, this explaining their better yield.

Seed potato treatment paid, too, both in controlling the scurf disease somewhat more prevalent this year than usually, and also the common scab which the late spring drouth caused to be more troublesome than in other years. The treating of seed potatoes cannot be too strongly urged, for its cost is negligible and if the 5-minute dip is used, the time it takes is no item at all. Kentucky Extension Circular 202 gives complete details.

New Varieties. Tests with White Gold, Chippewa and Kathadin were more widely made than last year, but none of them were truly decisive. As for White Gold, it seemed to matter quite a bit where the seed was bought. Some strains were so badly infected with the running-out diseases as to make yields low; others seemed to include mixtures of strains and even of other varieties. Pure White Golds performed quite satisfactorily, but not in any sense superior to good Cobbles. The high price of assured good White Gold is not warranted by results in Kentucky so far.

Small lots of the new Chippewa show considerable promise for this variety, when enough seed has been produced to make the price more reasonable. Earlier than Cobbler, by a week, and immune to at least some of the running-out diseases, Chippewa should find its place both in commercial plantings and in home gardens.

Kathadin is again proved definitely not an early potato, nor, for that matter, a variety to be planted in the spring, in Kentucky. Planted about 10 days before second-crop Cobbles it has done nicely, except that it seems difficult to get good stands. Good seed is difficult to obtain in quantity; the future of Kathadin needs to be established.

The "French" potato, still growing, a late sort brought into the state 7 years ago, will apparently again justify the good opinion those hold who have been trying it. Last year's best record was a 40 to 1 return, but twenty-fold yields were common. The wider substitution of "French" for the July potatoes now in use is, in the opinion of the writer, justified.

Sweet Potato Seed Treatment—Growers all over the state are much concerned by the dying of their sweet potato hills, one by one, the cause being black rot. This is not all of the story, unfortunately, for many potatoes from crops in which this disease is observed, in the field, may rot later. In fact, unless storage conditions are of the best, the rot introduced by just a few infected potatoes may destroy the whole. Using only clean-looking seed and giving it treatment by seed, bedding the potatoes in new soil, and changing the location of the planting are recommended as insurance against trouble from black rot of sweet potatoes.

Fertilizers—Judging from correspondence, quite too many sweet potatoes have "gone to vines" this year. Doubtless the late summer rains have been partly responsible, but more so was the nature of the fertility of the soil where the potatoes are being grown. Sweet potatoes need but little nitrogen; where the potatoes are being grown, sweet potatoes need but little nitrogen; where manure is the fertilizer, vinegrowth cannot help but be excessive. Land manured the previous year is more nearly right, and in addition a complete fertilizer high in potash should be used. The result is to balance the fertility of the sweet potatoes' needs, and the ratio of tub to vine will be higher. In this connection, the removal of excessive vine-growth cannot in any sense help.

Four Ballard county farmers cooperated in buying a carload of limestone, thereby obtaining a low price rate.

THE FARM AND HOME (Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Mound storage is the simplest and least expensive method of storing vegetables where no permanent place has been prepared. Several small mounds 4 to 6 feet in diameter are preferable to a large one, as the entire contents should be removed when the mound is opened. By storing several kinds of vegetables, separating them by litter a variety may be obtained.

Raspberries should be confined to hills or to a narrow hedge row. Without such training the patch will become a thicket in a short time. Cutting out and burning the old canes reduces the chance of infecting the new growth with disease.

The steam pressure cooker gives an economical way of canning, and foods so processed are not likely to spoil. Be sure that the jar lid fits perfectly, as a dent or scratch may break the seal. The small metal ball in the safety valve should be wiped dry after using, and the spring over the ball should be released when not in use.

Dyeing garments that are faded but still of good material is easily done, if directions on the packages of dye are followed carefully. Rinsing a garment in its own color freshens it. A dark dye may be used, or the original color may be removed and a lighter one given it.

Good laying flocks will be profitable this fall, despite relatively high feed prices. Farmers who have a supply of home-grown grains should feed liberally and otherwise give their hens good care. Egg prices started up early this year, and production probably will be under normal.

PUBLIC INFORMED OF ## MILK SHED ASSOCIATION

It is high time that the public be informed of the exact truths of the milk situation in the Cincinnati Milk shed. They have read in a number of publications in the last few weeks a lot of untrue propaganda and mis-leading statements aimed of course at some organization.

The K. I. O. Milk Producers Association has been operating for eleven years and has received more money for its producers than have been paid to other producers in this market, also more money than they have received since the so-called Milk Producers' Union was organized.

This organization was organized without any market for their milk and at the present time there is a number of trucks of Union milk being sold in Hamilton, Ohio, on a butter fat basis and this is being thrown into the pool and money is deducted from every milk producer in this milk shed to take care of this milk that has no market. And, while R. B. Day made the statement that he would have the Executive Board of the Union go on record asking for $2.85, this same organization is being represented on the Control Board and has sanctioned what has been done by the representatives of the producers.

Statements have been made by different organizations taking the credit for a raise in price, this raise in price was brought about by the dealers raising the retail price from 9 cents to 12 cents a quart, the last raise being from 11 cents to 12 cents. But, still we are getting less money for our milk than we have in previous years.

The Burke law and the State Milk Commission appointed by Governor White which was intended to benefit the producers, has not worked out the way it was intended and the milk producers of the Cincinnati area were better off before the present set up, than they are at the present time, taking into consideration the change in the retail price.

The K. I. O. Milk Producers Association was a bargaining organization until this new set up. If this law is discontinued after July 1935, the length of time that it is supposed to run, there will be a great deal of milk without market.

A great deal of propaganda has been spread, by people trying to organize new organizations, saying the K. I. O. has been a dealers' organization, because we bartered with the dealers for price, but the fact is, if we were a dealers' organization the dealers would not have paid more to our producers for the past ten years than was paid by some of their competitors. The K. I. O. producers, before the present set up had nothing deducted from their milk checks to support any organization, and they were not assessed for organization purposes.

We realize the producers cannot produce milk at the price they are receiving and every effort is being put forth to convince the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission of this fact and to secure a higher price for the producer's milk.

Each producer should investigate before joining any new association is going to market this milk and how long this market is going to last.

K. I. O. Milk Producers Association
E. H. Sidwell, General Manager

Sale of whisky or other intoxicating liquor on Sunday or election days, is a violation of law in Kentucky, according to a ruling rendered Monday by Frank Stagman, field agent in Kenton and Campbell counties for the Alcohol Control Board of the State Tax Commission.

Stagman said he has notified liquor dispensers, proprietors of eating restaurants and other persons having permits to sell liquor of the ruling by the State Tax Commission.

Stagman said failure to comply with the law would result in prosecution and, in event of conviction, revocation of the offender's license. The ruling does not apply to 3.2 per cent beer he explained.

CONTRACT SIGNERS

TO GROW WHEAT FOR HOME CONSUMPTION

Farmers who signed tobacco contracts will be permitted to grow wheat for their own use next year, according to an announcement by O. M. Farrington, state compliance officer at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington.

This ruling will be of particular interest to farmers who grew no wheat in 1932 or 1933, as a former interpretation of the contracts kept them from growing any wheat whether for sale or for home consumption. Such farmers may now sow this fall acreages to provide flour for their families next year. As a rule they will not be permitted to grow more than two acres, although exceptions may be made upon recommendations of local control committees. It is distinctly understood, however, that no wheat grown under such circumstances be sold or otherwise allowed to enter into commercial channels.

Another ruling permits contract signers to grow wheat mixtures for livestock feed. Such mixtures must be at least half rye or barley, and are to be grown for home feeding only.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

About 400 persons attended the Graves county sixth annual Jersey breeders' field day and picnic and heard discussions of problems of breeding and feeding of cattle, and the handling of milk. The field agent of the Pet Milk Company spoke on the prevention of sour milk.

County Agent D. S. Greene of Leslie county is cooperating with relief workers in a drive to save hay for home use and sale. Soybeans, lespedeza and other good hay crops are to be saved as well as corn, stover, crab grass and similar roughage material. Mr. Greene believes that there will be a plentiful supply if care is exercised.

Mason county dairymen agreed upon a minimum price for milk, 11 cents per quart or 6 cents per pint retail. Each distributor put up $25 to make his agreement good. Testing of cows and other efforts are being made to improve the quality of milk produced.

County Agent H. H. Thompson, of Harrison county selected 30 purebred rams and 20 purebred ewes for Frank L. Duffy from flocks in Canada, as part of the sheep improvement program. Last year Mr. Duffy sold 50 purebred rams and 20 purebred ewes to farmers in Harrison and adjoining counties.

Knott county farmers have the largest crop of soybeans ever produced in the county, and the quality is better than in previous years. Six years ago, no soybeans were grown in the county. "Thorough preparation of the seed bed, proper inoculation, and a heavy rate of seeding brought the good crop," reports the county agent.

Negro farm leaders attended an agricultural conference at the Kentucky State Industrial College, of Frankfort, and heard discussions of extension work, the AAA program, and changing tobacco needs.

KENTUCKY COLLEGE MEN IN GOOD JOBS

E. L. Langford, graduated from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, in 1923, has been with the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, since 1931. He studied at Iowa State College and worked at the Virginia Experiment Station and with the Doane Agricultural Service before going to his present position.

Penrose T. Ecton has been in the employ of the Illinois Central railroad since his graduation from the Kentucky College of Agriculture in 1929. In addition to his railroad duties, he acts as superintendent of the livestock shows at the Louisville State Fair and the New Orleans livestock exposition. He also has charge of two 4-H clubs.

Marshall Harris, who was graduated from the Kentucky College of Agriculture in 1926, has a position with the tobacco section of the United States Department of Agriculture. He was an agricultural high school teacher for four years, and did work on his master's degree at the University of Illinois.

A recognized authority on seeds, D. P. Campbell is completing his fifth year as manager of the Northwestern Seed Company of Keokuk, Iowa. Since his graduation from the Kentucky College of Agriculture in 1915, Mr. Campbell has been in the employ of the Lewis Implement and Seed Company of Louisville and the Scott Seed Company of Indiana, in addition to his present position.

Forty-five members of the Grant County Dairy Herd Improvement Association attended the annual field day, and studied judging of milk and cattle.

WOMEN MAY MAKE DRESS BRING OUT BEST QUALITIES

Dressing to bring out the best qualities is only a matter of making clothes on simple lines and according to "type." By speaking lines, emphasis is given wherever it is wanted, and the kind of material used makes the figure appear smaller or larger, whichever is desired. The purpose should be to seem as near the average or normal in proportions as possible.

The person who is short and stout should use soft, stereos material and, if pattern material is preferred, the size of the pattern should be small. An all-over subdued effect will be given at a short distance, tending to make the person seem smaller. Skirts should be longer than the average. Vertical lines near the center of the figure are good, as they draw attraction from the sides and make the figure appear more narrow.

The tall slender person should wear clothes that detract from the long lines of the figure. Rolling collars, ruffles, large cuffs and wide soft belts are full skirts aid in this. Crisp, lustrous materials increase size and softens angles.

Even though deep, rich colors will be worn this fall, they should be becoming to the buyer, seen in the right way and at the correct time. Because a color is in style is no reason for selecting it if it is not becoming to the wearer, declares Iris S. Davenport of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

A one color outfit is simplified and economical, and variety may be given by a touch of contrasting or harmonizing shade in trimmings or accessories. White, or any tint, increases size. Black decreases size, and is poor colorless skins. Intense colors may be worn by persons with brilliant coloring and clear complexions.

THE FARM AND HOME

The last cutting of alfalfa should be early enough to permit a good growth before freezing weather. This growth not only tends to provide root reserves that may be needed in the spring but helps to prevent winter injury due to heaving of the roots from alternate freezing and thawing of the soil.

Despite an unfavorable season in some states, there will be an adequate food supply and prices to consumers should show no great increase, announces the Consumers' Council of Washington. By using products not touched by the drought, consumers may even be able to lower living costs.

Rough handling of hens costs many a farmer more than he thinks. Especially are pullets easily injured, and it pays to be careful in the moving and handling of pullets about the time they should begin laying. Rough handling is very bad for a pullet about ready to lay her first egg.

The fact that no blower is needed is one of the advantages of a trench silo. This reduces the machinery needed to a power cutter or cutting box, which can be had for $35. Farmers in many communities are economizing by digging trench silos and using home-made cutters.

Good potato, turnip and other fall food crops are reducing living costs. An abundance of fall grass and other forage, and corn for the cows and chickens are helping to solve pressing problems on many a farm this year.

COUNTY AGENT NOTES

Fayette county cattle breeders have asked that 500 cows be tested for abortion disease.

Premiums totaling $1,000 will be given at the Carroll county agricultural fair, as planned by farmers and business men.

E. V. Stearns of Green county built a 36 by 48 feet tobacco barn, equipped with a ventilator system. Seven Shelby county farmers received analysis last month of their farm account books.

Feds Creek community 4-H club boys, Pike county, gave half their potato crop to the high school, and sold the remainder for $1.65 to $2 per 100 pounds.

Elliott county 4-H club members are learning to mix a laying mash for poultry.

Harlan county 4-H club members who entered school this fall made their outfits at comparatively low costs.

A large number of Barren county homemakers have been given instructions in canning garden produce.

Howard Brewer, of Grant county, bought two purebred Guernsey cows from the Experiment Station herd.

Rockcastle county farmers used 200 tons of lime during the past month.

Laurel county farmers expect to sell hay this fall, instead of having to import it as in previous years.

Casey county farmers are obtaining six cuttings of alfalfa, a larger crop than that of the past year.

EASY TO PRESERVE

ELDERBERRY JUICE

Elderberries may be canned to add to the winter's food supply. They are especially good combined with an acid-flavored fruit such as sour apples, rhubarb or lemon. Blackberries and elderberries may also be used together.

Elderberry juice may be used as a beverage, in gelatin desserts and in pudding sauces. To make elderberry juice: wash and stem the ripe berries. Place in a kettle and crush. Add a few tablespoons of water and heat slowly to the simmering point of 10-185 degree. Strain through a double thickness of cheese cloth or a clean flour sack. Allow to stand a short time until sediment has settled. Pour the juice carefully into hot sterilized jars, add a fourth of a cup of sugar per quart, partially seal and process for 30 minutes in a hot water bath. Seal and store in a cool place. When served, combine with an acid fruit juice.

The fruit may be canned either by the open kettle or the cold pack method. Directions are given in Circular No. 220, obtainable by writing to the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington.

Gipsy Moth Travels in Air

Gipsy moth, which does so much damage to vegetation, will suddenly appear in new districts. It has been proved that the larvae is carried by air currents and dropped miles away. Aeroplane tests have shown that this larva is to be found in the air at a height of over 1,000 feet.

DEFINES BANKERS' PART IN RECOVERY

Head of American Bankers Association Assures the President of Confidence and Desire to Cooperate Among Bankers

WASHINGTON, D. C. — President Roosevelt in his address before the NRA conference here on March 5 announced that he had received the following telegram from Francis M. Law, President of the American Bankers Association:

"On this your first anniversary please allow me in behalf of the country's banks to express our full confidence and our sincere desire to cooperate in your courageous effort long since begun to bring about recovery. The banking structure of the country is sound and liquid and banks have never been in stronger position to function effectively. Conditions have improved to the point where it is no longer necessary for banks to be super-liquid. There is a definite call now for banks, not to extend loose credit, or to make improper loans, but for a most sympathetic attitude toward legitimate credit needs and for a recognition of responsibility for their proper and vital part in the program of recovery."

The Soundness of Banking

In an address before a recent trust conference of the association's Trust Division in New York, Mr. Law said:

"A depression cannot long survive sound banking structure if the banking structure is responsive to legitimate needs and functions in a way that is virile and alive. The most cheering fact of the present situation is the knowledge that banks are in strong position."

"Recovery, even to the most pessimistic, is no longer a myth or a rumor, nor is it merely psychological. Abundant evidence, and proof lie on every hand—tangible proof. With a return of confidence the wheels have begun to go round and a great many well managed businesses may look for a profit during this calendar year with fair assurance at least. For what has been achieved let us thank the President, who has labored with courage and patience and vision. Let us thank the Congress, whose members during the emergency have put the public welfare above partisanship. Let us thank one hundred twenty-five million of our own citizens who have refused to be stampeded, but rather who have kept alive the divine spark of faith and hope."

Cause for Confidence

"We may reasonably expect that the recent action of the government in stabilizing the dollar will have a marked tendency to encourage industrial and other business commitments. Business men need not be so exclusively engaged in taking counsel of their fears now that uncertainty does not haunt them."

"Much has been said about the loss of credit by banks. During the acute period of the depression banks for the most part have not been lending normally, nor should they be blamed. With public confidence shattered the banker was properly concerned in liquidity, having in mind his primary obligation to pay off deposits. The situation has improved to the point where super-liquidity no longer seems necessary. Conditions have materially changed. Banks will decline, for every reason, to return to a more normal lending policy. This means a sympathetic attitude and a recognition of responsibility for his proper part in the program of recovery by the banker as he passes upon and meets sound credit requirements of business as it swings into and continues on the upward turn."

Public Confidence Returns

Direct information indicates conclusively that the banking situation is showing definite and steady improvement. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, said in a recent address. He pointed out that the decided drop which has occurred in money in circulation shows the public has largely ceased hoarding.

On March 1, 1934, the Federal Reserve Board reported that the volume of money in circulation amounted to $5,355,000,000, which was a decline of $1,077,000,000 since March 1, 1933. It was a drop of $2,226,000,000, or over 29 per cent from the all-time peak of $7,581,000,000 reached on March 13, 1933. About one-half the decrease, it was pointed out, reflected the return of currency from the public.

Money in circulation declined rapidly after the reopening of the banks in March, 1933, and has continued since to decline from week to week, "notwithstanding the increase in the demand for currency arising from enlargement of pay rolls and increase in the volume of retail trade," the Comptroller said, which, he added, "indicates a continued return of money from hoards as banking facilities were reestablished."

About Bank Loans

"As for the charge that the banks will not extend credit, the first and obvious reply is that the banks themselves are made up of the very bone and sinew of the industrial, commercial and agricultural interests of the country. Bank directors, and, to a large extent, bank officers, are drawn from the business and farming population. If they do not feel at any given moment that it is wise to make a particular loan, it is more than probable that there are sound reasons for not making it," says an editorial in the Saturday Evening Post.

Rare Orchid Species
Most popular and beautiful of the orchid's prolific botanical family, which records more than 5,000 different original species, is the Cattleya species, named after William Cattley, English sea captain, who, early in the nineteenth century, brought back to London some of these first Cattleya species from Colombia, thereby tapping one of the richest wild orchid gardens in the world.

U. S. Action Against Pirates

In the early part of the last century, the United States government took prompt and energetic steps to avenge any outrages against American shipping. A case in point was the Malayan ports, infested with pirates. American warships made frequent visits there and the American political agent visited the native states to arrange for trade.

FIRST BLOOD

GOES TO BELLEVUE IN LITTLE WORLD SERIES BY DEFEATING PETERSBURG BY SCORE OF 9 TO 3—WAS SECOND GAME OF SERIES.

The second game of the Little World Series was quite a contrast to the first game of the same series. As you recall, the first game was discontinued in the eleventh inning with the score tied 4 to 4. The second game finished with a score of 9 to 3.

Bill Rogers displayed a very neat pitched game, and several times during the game put his teammates easy at mind by pitching himself out of holes.

However, you can never tell about a ball game until the last man is out. Even though Bellevue trimmed Petersburg by a rather large score it does not prove that one team is any better than the other. Who can tell what the result of next Saturday's game will be? It is to be played on the Petersburg diamond, so if you wish to see the result rather than hear about it, be at Petersburg Saturday, September 28th.

SPECIAL JUDGE

GIVES DECISION MONDAY—DECIDES THAT THE SURETIES ARE NOT LIABLE ON BONDS OF FORMER MASTER COMMISSIONER.

Special Judge, Hon. Thos. B. McGregory, completed the hearing at Burlington Monday, on the rule issued against the sureties on the bonds of R. E. Berkshire as Master Commissioner, and rendered his judgment holding that none of the sureties were liable on the bonds executed by R. E. Berkshire as Master Commissioner.

A rule was issued against all of the sureties on the bonds to show cause, why they should not pay certain funds collected by the former Master Commissioner, to the present Master Commissioner, A. D. Yelton, and which he had failed to pay under orders of Judge J. G. Vallandigham. The sureties filed their responses found that and after a hearing, the special judge on the responses found that a defense was set up therein and he discharged the rule against all of the sureties.

This judgment holds that the sureties on the bonds are not liable for any money received by the former Master Commissioner, and do not have to pay to the present Master Commissioner A. D. Yelton any sum of money.

AURORA FARMERS' FAIR

The twenty-sixth Aurora Farmers' Fair and Home Coming will be held Friday and Saturday, October 5th and 6th.

This fair has established itself as an annual event that is looked forward to as a time to meet old friends and acquaintances and enjoy good clean entertainment.

There is always a good exhibit of products which will be shown in the tobacco warehouse as usual. Aurora has always done a fine job in the paardes that have so well shown the business and enterprise of the community.

Take a day off and enjoy this fair. If you have anything to show enter it and help enlarge the exhibit.

NEW CARROLLTON BANK TO BE OPENED

Carrollton, Ky., Sept. 21—Stock has been oversubscribed for a state bank at Carrollton, to be known as the Kentucky State Bank, capitalized at a minimum of $15,000. It is expected to open next week, after complying with Kentucky laws.

It is probable that C. M. Dean will be elected president and Fred Dowd cashier. Mr. Dean and J. A. Dowd being the principal share owners.

The building belonging to the Carrollton National Bank which has been in the hands of a conservator and a receiver since March 1933, will be purchased and the liquid assets of that bank will be taken over.

ELSMERE MAN

ENDS LIFE WITH ROPE HE FASHIONED WITH OWN HANDS; BODY FOUND BY HIS WIFE HANGING FROM RAFTER IN GARAGE.

John W. Hughes, 53, gardener, 69 Garvey Avenue, Elsmere, died of strangulation from a braided whipcord he had fashioned himself and attached to a rafter in a garage in the rear of his home last Thursday.

A verdict of suicide was returned. Mr. Hughes' body was found by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Hughes. His feet were within reach of the garage floor. It seems probable that he climbed a partition close to the rafter and dropped himself.

He was a member of the Elsmere Christian church, Kenton county Chapter of Junior Order and Kenton county Chapter of Daughters of America.

Besides his widows, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Ella Rider and Mrs. Alice Hoard, Elsmere; Mrs. Lella Rust, Covington and Mrs. Anna Smith, East Bend, and two stepdaughters, Mrs. Anna Fisk, Fiskburg, and Mrs. Lula Dixon, Georgetown.

Mr. Hughes is believed to have been despondent, because he had been out of work for nearly five years.

Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the Talliaferro funeral home, Erlanger. Rev. C. J. Ribble, pastor of the Carrollton Christian church officiated.

Burial was in the Independence cemetery.

W. Lee Gaines, of Walton, was taken to a Cincinnati hospital Monday, where he was operated on for cancerous growth of the stomach. Last report he was doing nicely. His many friends hope for his speedy recovery.

WALTON MAN

CHOSEN TO HEAD TRI-STATE TOBACCO WAREHOUSE COMPANY—HAS BEEN IN TOBACCO BUSINESS FOR THIRTY-THREE YEARS.

Thursday of last week, at a meeting of the directors of the Tri-State Tobacco Warehouse Co., Inc. in Covington, W. P. Kerns, of Walton was unanimously elected president and general manager to this corporation.

As manager of the Tri-State Warehouse last year he fully demonstrated his fitness for this responsible position and in appreciation of his services the board of

HAVE PASSED ON

Above is a picture of the late Mr. Shinkle with his best friend, L. H. Voshell. Both of the men were born on the same day, August 13, 1843, and at the time this picture was taken they were eighty-seven years old. Mr. Voshell passed on several years ago.

Mr. Kerns is one of the large tobacco growers in this section and was one of the first signers of the reduction plan. He was prominently identified with the Burley Tobacco Pool and managed one of the Walton tobacco warehouses four years, and was one of the champions of the cooperating marketing plan and spoke throughout this district for two years advocating this plan. He has always been interested in every movement calculated to benefit the farmers. He has had thirty-three years' experience in the tobacco warehouse business, knows all the leading buyers and is held in the highest esteem by them because of his appreciative policy of conducting tobacco warehouses.

Under the management of Mr. Kerns the Tri-State Tobacco Warehouse did a nice business last year. He starts the sales of tobaccos when placed on the floor as he knows the value of every basket and growers may rest assured he will give every grower a "square deal." Every director in the Tri-State is a tobacco grower except one.

MILK PRODUCERS' ORGANIZATION

The manager of the K. I. O. has assumed the role of custodian of truth about the milk situation. Why he resorted to the public press to publish what he did, when there was no occasion for it, as no one had said or done anything detrimental to his organization, it is impossible to tell, unless he was peeved because of some imaginary grievance or living in fear that someone might tell the "exact truth" about whom he and his organization actually represent. He has opened the door to the truth, so he says. We are glad he has. We have been trying to locate the truth. We have been trying to find out who had the truth "locked up." We want to open the door a little further. We would like to ask a few questions because "it is high time that the public be informed of the exact truth."

First—Who connected with the organization of the U. M. P. A., has been circulating propaganda to the effect that the K. I. O. is a "dealers' organization"? Please state who did it, when and where it was done; whether written or oral, and who was present and the exact words that were spoken or written.

Second—Where, when and how "is every effort being put forth by the K. I. O., or its duly authorized representatives, to convince the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission that the producers cannot produce milk at the present price, and to secure a higher price for the producers' milk?" Doesn't the K. I. O. know that the only way an increase in price for milk can be obtained is by a written application to the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission, a public hearing, and a decision by the Commission? Doesn't this organization know that the records of the Commission are open to the public? When did the K. I. O. or its duly authorized representatives, file an application since the first of October, for an increase in price? When was the public hearing held, and what was the result? The milk producers haven't seen any result of anything they have done or claim to have done.

If the K. I. O. is putting forth every effort to increase the price to the producer, why wasn't there an increase from the first of October, 1933 to August 1, 1934 as a result of any effort made by the K. I. O. and why wasn't there someone representing the K. I. O. at the two public hearings that were initiated by the milk producers themselves, one of which hearings was on the 8th of August, and the other on the 19th of September? Why didn't someone representing the K. I. O. take some part in their effort to get a better price?

If any effort was made, no one saw or heard of it.

Third—Why the statement, "Each producer should investigate before joining any new association to be sure where this association is going to market his milk?" Who has represented that they are going to market milk for anybody? What is the purpose of this statement? Why intimidate?

The fundamental principle upon which the Burk Law, and the Cincinnati Milk Code is based is that the producers own the market, and no one else, and that this market should be divided equitably among them. They alone have the control, subject to the rules and regulations of the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission.

If the K. I. O. is an up to the minute, wide-awake, active producers' association, why try to discourage and discredit every movement started by the producers to boost the price? Why not join in the movement and help to boost the price? The invitation is open, and has always been open.

A strong, powerful, all-inclusive producers' organization will have tremendous power and prestige with the Milk Commission. If every milk producer could have attended the hearings before the Commission on the 19th of this month, and last August, they would have seen the imperative need of such an organization to boost the price, because the opposition to an increase in price to the producer was very strong and very active.

At the time this was written, the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission had not decided the application for an increase in price, beginning the first of September. The increase in price to the producers, which was a result of the movement started by the producers themselves, was 27c per hundred for all base milk, beginning the first of August. The gross price paid was $2.00 per hundred. If the increase had not been granted, according to the Control Committee, the price would have been $1.73 per hundred, for August.

Let us push the organization of the price-boosting movement that has resulted in the only increase that has been granted, and let us remember that it is only by the united action of the producers themselves that there is a possibility of increasing the producer's share of the consumer's dollar, and of getting for the producer a better price for his milk.

THE FARM AND HOME
(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Many farmers are planning to save liberal supplies of seeds, as there may be an active demand for next year's plantings. It would be well, under any conditions, to study the local supply and to have available sufficient quantities of adapted seed for all kinds of crops.

Poultry suggestions for September: Cull the laying flock; house and band the pullets; start keeping records, and remember that the egg standard for September is 10 eggs per bird. Prospects are for good egg prices during the fall and winter, which fact should stimulate preparation to give flocks good care.

As soon as kraut is as sour as desired it may be canned and kept indefinitely. Pack in sterilized glass jars, add enough of the kraut brine to fill, partly seal, and process an hour in hot water bath or 40 minutes in a pressure cooker at 10 pounds pressure. Seal and store in a cool place.

Dairy farmers now have the privilege of having their cattle tested free for contagious abortion. Men interested in ridding their herds of diseased animals should see their county agent or write to Dr. W. F. Biles, Postoffice Building, Frankfort, for further information.

When buying a washing machine consider washing ability, yearling effect on clothes, capacity, kind of wringer, safety, lubrication, repair costs, noise of operation, ease of moving, floor space simplicity of operation, upkeep and lasting qualities.

Permitting weeds to ripen and scatter seed means trouble next year. A few days' use of the mowing machine and scythe now may have many days work another season. Gardens, orchards, fence rows and the like should be cleaned before weeds go to seed.

THE GARDEN
TAKING STOCK ACCOUNT IIBy John S. Gardner, Kentucky
College of Agriculture

Last week were discussed several of the newer varieties that have been tried and found worthy. This week's column is to deal with cabbage.

Cabbage—Gardeners in all parts of the state keep writing in about a cabbage malady that strikes down their cabbage at about the time it should begin to head. The plants seem to "grow off" in good fashion, but soon take on a puny, yellow appearance and finally wither completely and dry up. Some gardeners attribute their failure to their use of the so-called frost-proof plants, but they find that home-grown plants behave in the same manner. The cause of the trouble is the Yellowing disease, the germs of which accumulate in the soil. The trouble is most striking in small gardens or in gardens where wide rotation of crops is not the rule. Treatment of the soil would be effective, but it is not practicable to use soil treatment consisting of baking the soil as deep as the roots go at a temperature of 130 degrees. For that matter, each plowing might bring up deeper untreated soil, anyhow.

The only way to combat the Yellowing disease is to use varieties that are resistant or immune. In the order of their season they are Resistant Jersey Wakefield, Marion Market, Resistant All-Seasons, and Wisconsin Hollander or Wisconsin No. 8, the last-named for making kraut and for winter storing. Although these varieties are not found in the customary seed packets, they can be procured by your seedsman if he is told in time to have them included.

When the Yellowing disease is not a factor, home gardeners should try Golden Acre for their early cabbage. The heads are round and less subject to bursting than Early Jersey or Charleston Wakefield. Worm injury is not so severe on round-headed varieties as it is on the pointed sorts. The size of head of Golden Acre recommends itself, too, in that the average is 1½ lbs. instead of 4 to 6 pounds' weight of Copenhagen Market, the standard early round-head. Gardeners who grow their plants themselves need only make sure of their seed supply, and this is easy if a start is made in time. Those persons who depend on others to produce the plants they use should make plain to their plantgrowers that Golden Acre is desired.

Another cabbage trouble of which many gardeners complain is Black Rot. Except in severe cases this disease does not entirely destroy the crop, as does Yellowing, but merely stunts the heads and makes them unshapely, and subject to untimely rotting. Similar to Yellowing, cabbage Black Rot persists in the soil but for only a short period, two or three years. This indicates that rotating the members of the cabbage family, for the rot affects all of them to some extent, is part of the control. The disease is introduced into the soil by the plants and to them from the seed. In order completely to avoid it, seed treatment for all vegetables akin to cabbage is recommended, in fact, strongly advised. The treatment consists in soaking the seed for 20 minutes in a solution made by dissolving one 7½ grain tablet of bichloride of mercury in a pint of water, washing the seed in running water for 3 minutes or in three changes of water, then drying it spread out at room temperature, but not in direct sunlight. Seed treatment does not remove the necessity for rotating the cabbage family vegetables; that is part of good gardening.

SOUTH AFRICA CHALLENGES
OUR NUT MONOPOLY

Cultivation of pecan trees on a large scale may be initiated in Southwest Africa if studies show the project to be feasible, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. A South African horticulturist has recently succeeded in growing 36 varieties of pecan nut-producing trees in his Natal nursery. From studies made at this nursery, the horticulturist believes that the arid lands of Southwest Africa might be suitable for the commercial cultivation of pecan trees, since these trees require no irrigation, are drought-resisting, win-win-pollinated and require a minimum of rainfall of only twenty inches a year to insure flowering. At the present time, cultivation of pecan trees is confined to North America, and the export of pecan nuts is virtually an American monopoly.

The plan of the Mason County Dairy Association for marking milk bottles will be used by all dairy-men due to its success this summer.

NO DANGER IN CURRENCY

Ashland, Ky., Sept. 25—"There is no danger in our currency because it is a controlled currency of a creditor nation," declared Congressman Fred Vinson in a recent address here, in which he discussed the monetary legislation enacted by the 73rd congress.

"The monetary machinery of the United States had been kept a mystery by the large bankers of this and other counties, and the ignorance of all the members of Congress in regard to this question was astounding," he said.

"Whispers and rumors resounded through closed committee sessions as it was learned that the United States was going off the gold standard, but this was accomplished without a ripple in the stream. The values of money in any nation" declared the speaker "is based on the credit of that nation." Whether the medium of exchange is gold, silver, paper, or tin, the value of money is only a question of the nation's credit.

"The 'devaluation of the dollar,'" said Mr. Vinson, "was to permit American goods to compete with other countries in the markets of the world. With our swollen dollar equal to several times the amount of dollars in other countries we were unable to enter into competition and our trade with foreign nations was negligible."

With regard to the silver legislation Mr. Vinson stated that 25 percent of our money stocks were in silver and that silver certificates were to be issued up to and including the market value of silver purchased. Laws were enacted to also curb any profiteering in silver, he pointed out.

TAXES ARE DUE

GOVERNMENT

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 25—Collection of back income taxes found to be due the government has resulted in turning into the federal treasury $6,689,944.62 and final notices of deficiency have been sent, demanding payment of $3,236,942.20 more, as result of the campaign launched a year ago to recover revenue which large taxpayers had withheld from the federal government, according to Seldon R. Glenn collector of Internal revenue for

Kentucky.

The campaign was started by Commissioner Guy T. Heeling, head of the Internal Revenue Bureau by procuring from brokers information to determine gains or losses on stock transactions, for 1929 an subsequent years. It was found that many securities sales were fictitious in character and made only to establish a loss for income tax computation.

Belief is expressed that the special effort to check income tax returns, started last October, will finally result in collections of close to 25 million dollars. In addition to $6,689,944.62 already collected and $3,236,942 found to be due, cases amounting to $8,670,557.16 are under consideration. Investigations in progress are estimated to involve about six million dollars. Of all cases investigated these closed without additional tax being assessed amounted to only $201,426.83.

ASKED TO GIVE CHARGE FOR CONSUMERS SERVICE

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 25—Public utilities companies in Kentucky are being asked how much they charge consumers for service. The Public Service Commission, organized on July 9, has set out to compile information that will reveal the full story of utilities rates now being charged and has directed all utility companies to file a schedule of rates.

"This information is necessary," it was pointed out by Wilbur K. Miller, chairman of the commission, "in order to proceed intelligently toward an equitable adjustment of utility rates."

Since organization of the Commission it has disposed of 27 formal complaints and applications, has granted certificates of convenience and necessity for construction of water distribution system in 18 towns.

Three informal rate complaints have been settled, one complaint is now being considered and there have been set for hearings five complaints in which reductions in water, gas or electric rates are sought. There are 13 applications for permits to erect utility plants on which certificates of convenience and necessity have been withheld because applicants failed to ## file all required data.

The Commission has employed E. V. Williamson as a consultant to aid in working out the best plan of uniform accounting, required of all utility companies.

Mr. Williamson was employed as chief accountant by the West Virginia Public Service Commission for 16 years and has been employed by privately operated utility companies. "He is one of the best qualified men in America for this type of work," chairman Miller said, and "one of the few available for this type of highly technical service."

The Kentucky act creating the Commission requires that the uniform classification of accounts issued by the National Association of Railroads and Utilities be followed in this state. Mr. Williamson is the author of the accounts system recommended by this national organization for gas utilities and adopted in 26 states.

Within the next few months the Commission will request from the utility companies a statement of their financial condition which will show both gross and net operating revenue, capitalization, various kinds of stock outstanding earnings and every other detail necessarily related to the financial stability of the company. This also will be inaugurated for the first time in this State.

Associated with Chairman Miller on the Commission are William D. Cochran and Lloyd Clark. Louis Cox is secretary of the Commission.

HOLLAND'S COLONIES SELL HER LOTS OF TOBACCO

The Netherlands, a great tobacco buying market, imported 4,000,000 more pounds of tobacco the first six months of this year than during the same period in 1933, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. But a great portion of these imports into the Holland bonded warehouses was East Indian leaf grown in her Far East colonies. Out of over 99,000,000 pounds imported, 7,000,000 were from this source. About 10,000,000 pounds were of American origin, divided up in types as follows: Kentucky, 1,122,141; Maryland, 1,051,594; Virginia type, 8,558,258; and Seedleaf, 85,000 lbs.

U. S. CIVIL LEGION
MEETS IN LOUISVILLE

"The Ninth National Convention of the United States Civil Legion will be held in Louisville, Kentucky Friday and Saturday, October 12 and 13. Headquarters and place of meeting will be at the Kentucky Hotel, Tom B. Meglemry, acting National President, said today.

The United States Civil Legion, Mr. Meglemry explained, is a national organization of patriotic citizens who, during the World War served the national cause as members of the Draft Boards, American Protective League, Four Minute Speakers, Liberty Bond Salesmen, the Food Administration, and similar civilian capacities. Among its purposes are recording the activities of all civilians who served in authorized capacity; to stand for adequate defense of the United States, thorough support of its armed forces on land, on sea and in the air; intelligent combating of Communism and other subversive organizations; to promote instruction in citizenship; to strengthen the Alien Criminal Deportation Laws; to secure a revision of the Immigration laws on a selective and more flexible basis; to favor amendment to the "Veteran Bureau Act, restricting hospitalization and all forms of compensation to strictly service connected disabilities.

Mr. Meglemry stated that the United Civil Legion was the first national organization to urge "taking the profit out of war" by advocating a continuation and expansion during peace times of the draft system that will make it possible to immediately, on the declaration of war, to mobilize under Government control the entire man power of the country to be accompanied by an effective supervision over all transportation and manufacturing industries.

Charles Edward Russell, noted journalist and author of such works as "The Greatest Trust in the World," "The Lawless World," "Chained Russia," "Bolshevism and the U. S.," "An Hour of American Poetry" and "Songs of Democracy" is president of the United States Civil Legion. He is the same Charles Edward Russell, whom Paul Maloin credits with the writing of Clarence Darrow's famous N. R. A. report, which brought

$15,168.00 IN

AAA PAYMENTS TO KENTUCKY FARMERS

Kentucky farmers have received a total of $2,421,131 for their co-operation in the agricultural adjustment program, and are to receive about $15,168,000, according to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Payments to August 1 included $2,176,293 to tobacco growers of the state, $183,641 to wheat farmers and $61,196 to cotton growers. Estimated totals to be received by Kentucky farmers include $11,571,000 in the tobacco adjustment program; $2,980,000 for the adjustment of the production of corn and hogs; $509,000 in wheat payments, and $108,000 for cotton.

Restrictions on the use of land rented to the government have been modified, so that feed and seed produced may be fed or sold. Drought cattle may be pastured on rented acres so long as the farmer provides enough stock of his own to utilize the pasture on contract acres when co-mingled with the drought cattle.

Seed from the following crops on rented land may be harvested and sold or fed: soybeans, cowpeas, forage sorghums, millet, sudan grass, alfalfa, lespedeza and clovers.

The use of rented or contracted land is now uniform for tobacco, corn, wheat and cotton farms.

Many Casey county farmers are sowing alfalfa due to large crops obtained this year.

MAY PLANT MORE WHEAT THIS YEAR

Wheat growers who signed adjustment contracts may sow 90 percent of their base acreage this year according to an announcement of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, made through the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, which is supervising the adjustment program in the state. Farmers were permitted to sow only 85 percent of their base acreage last year.

According to the Washington statement, relayed through the College, the drought and the adjustment program have reduced the wheat carry-over to approximately 290,000,000 bushels on July 1, this year, compared to 389,000,000 bushels on the same date a year ago.

"The normal carry-over for export and reserve in past years has averaged between 125,000,000 bushels," says the statement.

"It is possible to attain this normal carry-over this year, since the 1934 crop is estimated at 491,000,000 bushels and the normal requirements of the country are about 625,000,000 bushels.

"The approach to the normal carry-over of wheat this year made it possible for the adjustment administration to authorize cooperating farmers to plant this year for harvest next year, 90 percent of their base acreage instead of the 85 percent which was authorized last year. Favorable crop conditions probably would produce, on any greater acreage, a national crop so large that it would force prices down. Cooperating farmers are protected against lower prices by their benefit payments, but non-cooperating farmers do not have this protection.

FRANCE IMPORTING MORE

Imports of leaf tobacco into France during the first six months of the current year amounted to $5,486,000, compared with $4,046,350, during the corresponding period of the preceding year, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. Imports of leaf tobacco from the United States during the six-month period showed an increase of approximately 16 percent. Both cigars and cigarettes were imported into France in large quantities.

(1) Meet Thoteris, a strange goddess of the ancient Egyptians, whose face embodied the features of both a crocodile and a cow and who was said to be the companion of Osiris in the underworld!

(2) World-famous are these ancient Egyptian pyramids, built six thousand years ago by proud kings. And no picture of the pyramids would be complete without a camel standing by. The Egyptian Government recently took a census of farm livestock which showed that there are 162,000 camels, 821,000 buffaloes and 741,000 donkeys at work on Egyptian farms.

(3) Out of Egypt's 347,000 square miles, 335,000 are deserts. On the remainder, many crops are grown by small farmers holding up to five acres. This picture shows some maize grown in the village of Daba, far up the Nile. The owners of the farm used American Nitrate of Soda and wrote the distributors that it gave "A result never seen or imagined before this date" and added "This has impelled us to boast among our companions and has astonished us and upset our ideas." Southern farmers, who have also been won over by American Nitrate, can be proud that all the world asks for the nitrate soda produced in Dixie.

U. S. Action Against Pirates

In the early part of the last century, the United States government took prompt and energetic steps to avenge any outrages against American shipping. A case in point was the Malayan ports, infested with pirates. American warships made frequent visits there and the American political agent visited the native states to arrange for trade.

Serpentine Mother of Asbestos When the earth's crust first hardened into rock, millions and millions of years ago, some of the veins in the rock were filled with a stuff called serpentine. It is this serpentine which is the mother of asbestos. Mined from rock in Georgia and Canada, serpentine is ground up into soft white pulpy stuff which is very light and quite tough. The pulp is then broken up, cleaned and carded like wool for weaving into cloth.

Mr. Jones has harvested his crops and at present is employed in the city.

YOUNG KENTUCKIAN TAKES HAND IN INVESTIGATION OF HORRIBLE DISASTER

Kentuckians who have been reading of the investigation of the Morro Castle maritime disaster are interested in learning that a prominent son of this state is playing an important part in unraveling details of the disaster, according to a report to the Louisville District office of the Department of Commerce. He is South Trimble, Jr., Solicitor of the Department of Washington, who is a native of Franklin county, Kentucky, and a son of South Trimble, Sr., Clerk of the National House of Representatives and former Congressman from the old Seventh Kentucky district.

Secretary of Commerce Hoper announced that Mr. Trimble was in New York under his instructions for two important purposes connected with the burning of the steamship Morro Castle. He will render any necessary legal assistance which may be required by Dickerson Hoover, Assistant Director of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, who is conducting the investigation required by law to ascertain whether any of the licensed officers were in competent, guilty of misbehavior, negligence, or unskillfulness which endangered life, or have willfully violated any provision of the steamboat inspection laws. The investigation of the Commerce Department is limited by law to these factors, and the Department is empowered to suspend or revoke the licenses of officers found guilty. Secretary Hoper has also instructed Mr. Trimble to extend all co-operating and the Department's full facilities to the United States Attorney at New York. Mr. Trimble is said to be making an outstanding record as head of the Department's legal department, and his many friends back in his "home state" are expressing their pleasure over his accomplishments in unmeasured terms.

NRA TRUCKING CODE ENFORCEMENT STARTED

Over 1,000 truck owners in Kentucky who are using their vehicle in transportation of property for compensation directly or indirectly and who have not registered under the Trucking Code and do not display the NRA insignia on their vehicles have been notified by letter from the N. R. A. Compliance Director for the State of Kentucky that they are operating in violation of Article VI, Sections 3, 4, and 5 of the Trucking Code and are subject to penalties provided by the National Industrial Recovery Act.

2328 Trucks have been registered under the Trucking Code and their owners are the only ones who are entitled to receive contract hauling from any source where Federal money enters into the payment for the work. They have benefited by the hauling of Drouth Cattle, on Road Construction and on all other Federal Projects.

W. L. Stodghill, Chairman of the Kentucky State Code Authority for the Trucking Industry, returned from Washington, September 14 and stated that the "Cost Formula" for the fixing of minima rates will be released in a few days, that this information has been secured from the National Code Authority for the Trucking Industry.

CHEVROLET NEWS

First evidence of prospective improvement in the export of American cars to Great Britain, as a result of a marked reduction in the horsepower tax to become effective January 1, 1935, is to be seen in the announcement that a Chevrolet passenger car distributor has been appointed in England.

Now, for the first time in many years, active merchandising effort is to be put behind the Chevrolet in England as the result of the appointment of Messrs. Cass & Joyce Ltd., a firm which handles also the Talbot and Sunbeam cars, as Chevrolet distributor. The firm will market the American cars through a dealer organization which comprises 150 outlets in England, Scotland and Wales. In London, the Chevrolet showroom and main selling offices will be at 24-27 Orchard street, opposite Selfridge & Company, famous London department store.

"Because of Chevrolet's long absence from the British passenger car market," says General Motors World, "it is impossible to forecast next year's volume figure, but a substantial initial shipment has already gone forward and both the distributor and the general sales department are most optimistic about the future of the territory."

LONG SERVICE OF KENTUCKY COUNTY AGENT RECOGNIZED

Robert F. Spence recently completed 20 years of distinguished service as agricultural agent in Rockcastle county, Kentucky, making him one of the oldest county agents, from the standpoint of service, in the United States.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington recognized his accomplishments in an article in its official publication, the "Extension Service Review," and Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the Kentucky College of Agriculture congratulated the people of Rockcastle county on securing and retaining the service of Mr. Spence, whose unusual ability, sympathetic attitude and good sense have been invaluable in building up the county. His accomplishments, says Dean Cooper, are indicative of what a good county agent is worth in the development of an agricultural county.

"In the 20 years I have seen this county evolve from the ox-cart stage of agriculture to the automobile stage," the "Extension Service Review" quotes Mr. Spence.

"In 1914 I threaded the branches and creeks on the back of 'Kentucky Bird' to reach some humble cottage at the head of the hollow, to see a man who had never heard of crop rotation or legumes. In those days there was not a hard surfaced road in the county. Now there are more than 150 miles of concrete, tarred top and gravel roads."

"We did not think in terms of cash income in 1914, but only in terms of adequate supply for the household table. Now there are thousands of dollars of cash coming into the hands of Rockcastle farmers every year from tobacco, sheep, poultry, dairy products and cattle."

"In 1914 the dairy industry was unknown and only a few families had enough milk to supply their own tables. In 1929 the cream in Rockcastle county brought $221,000 in cash to owners of cream producing cows. During the same year, the income from eggs and chickens was $210,000."

"In those days there was but little grass of reputable quality and quantity. Today there are thousands of acres of red clover, alfalfa, lespedeza, cowpeas and soybeans. The production of soybeans, cowpeas, alfalfa and lespedeza was unknown. Today there are in the county 200 acres of alfalfa, 6,000 acres of lespedeza, 500 acres of sweet clover and 3,000 acres of soybeans."

"In 1914 we had four 4-H club members and no club, while now we have 700 members and 28 clubs. These clubs typify the growing spirit of America. The farmers themselves have caught the spirit of the 4-H club members. They think in terms of cooperation and community action. It is no trouble to get a group of farmers to do things cooperatively."

"In no place in America has progress been more pronounced and more certain than in Rockcastle county."

Plans have been made for building 100 trench silos in Graves county. Forage crops thereby may be utilized and help make up for grain limitation due to drought. The Pet Milk Company and the Illinois Central Railroad cooperated with the county agent in giving instructions in the building of silos.

GERMANY CLAMPS DOWN ON FOREIGN BUSINESS

A decree of the German Minister of Economics extends the present system of import regulations by adding ten new trade control offices to those already established within the last few months, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. The new control boards are organized for the following groups of products: Lumber and timber, vegetables and fruits, coal and salt, mineral oils, chemicals, silk and rayon, furs, paper, technical products, and miscellaneous goods. The new control system virtually precludes any shipments to Germany on consignment or on open account, and business with Germany can now only be conducted either on a cash or letter of credit basis, provided the German importer possesses a specific foreign exchange permit, which is now only issued for imports of materials considered indispensable or through barter arrangements between individual German and foreign firms or groups which, however, still remain subject to many restricting formalities.

GERMANS MAKE RAIN BY SPRINKLING DRY ICE ABOVE THE CLOUDS

The "Society for Dry Ice Research," recently established in Southern Germany is arranging to conduct experiments designed to produce rain artificially by scattering ground dry ice from aeroplanes above the clouds, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. It is alleged that copious rainfall was produced over the Zuckerssee by this method a year ago when two tons of dry ice were discharged over clouds, it was stated. Dry ice, or solid carbon dioxide, is one of the interesting developments, chemically of the past decade. The United States has led the world in developing this industry which disposes of the output very largely to the ice cream industry. Carbon dioxide gas used in producing dry ice occurs naturally bubbling up through springs, or is recovered as a by-product from fermentation and other industries. While approximately 90 percent of the production of dry ice is absorbed by the ice cream industry, some very interesting and novel uses are found for the product. When quicksand is encountered in building excavations, the sand can be quickly frozen with dry ice so that work may proceed, and it has been found useful in extinguishing fires in underground electrical conduits. Cores of golf balls are frozen with dry ice before being wrapped, oils are dewaxed, and it is finding use in the fumigation field, particularly in grain elevators, it was stated.

A large-scale sheep drenching program is being carried on in Boyd county, where the annual ram sale has resulted in good prices to purebred producers. Use of bluestone and nicotine sulfate has eradicated trouble from stomach worms.

POTASH FERTILIZER EXPORTS INCREASING

While the United States is one of the world's largest importers of fertilizers and fertilizer materials, it is able as a result of certain transportation advantages to export substantial quantities of potash fertilizer, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. This situation is particularly true as regards California where large deposits occur in natural brines. Japan, the largest foreign purchaser of American potash fertilizers took 80 percent of total shipments abroad. The bulk of potash fertilizer produced in the United States is obtained by chemical treatment of natural brines and by mining of bedded saline deposits, with smaller quantities being obtained from distillery waste, cement-kill dust, and elsewhere.

HEADQUARTERS OPENED IN LEXINGTON FOR KY.
RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Washington, D. C., Sept. 26.—Headquarters for the annual Red Cross Roll Call in Kentucky are being opened this week in Lexington, under the direction of Miss Dorothy G. Stewart, special Red Cross representative who will act as director for the Kentucky roll call. Frederick A. Wallis, of Paris, Ky., who served as state chairman last year, will serve in the same capacity this year. A state committee will be formed again this year, following the plan adopted in the last roll call.

Miss Stewart has had wide experience in Red Cross service, especially in Kentucky, and she is well known throughout the state. She will go from Lexington to be present at the various meetings called throughout the state in the Whirlwind Campaign which is set for the first two weeks in October.

An enrollment in excess of that in 1933 will be the goal of the State committee, according to a statement by Miss Stewart when she left Washington. "Last year the membership increased more than 20 per cent over that of the preceding year," she said. "For this reason we have to thank Mr. Wallis and the loyal Red Cross workers who helped in the fine campaign. Even with this increase in membership, however, Kentucky still falls far short of the average for the United States. The state's membership is only 2.30 percent of the population of the state, while the average throughout the United States is 3.5 percent. We hope this year Kentucky will enroll a membership of at least three per cent of the population."

The 80,000 pounds of Korean lespeza sowed in Laurel county last spring is showing such good results that farmers are planning to increase acreage, combining it with use of lime. Nathaniel Chadwick, 47, who for ten years has been affiliated with the republican county central committee, passed away at his home, 304 Broadway, last night at 8:30 o'clock. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

HALF-TON PUMPKINS

ON VOLUNTEER VINE

(Cynthiana Democrat)

T. D. Whitaker, of North Church Street, this city, is the proud possessor of a most remarkable group of pumpkins, growing from a volunteer vine in his garden. An astounding area has been taken by the vine bearing large yellow pumpkins, there being 226 of the big fruits. Sixteen of the twenty-six pumpkins weigh about sixty pounds each and the entire number averages in the neighborhood of forty pounds each. Thus the twenty-six pumpkins weigh forty pounds over a half-ton.

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF UNITED LUTHERAN CHURCH AT SAVANNAH, GEORGIA

Overtopping in importance the financial, educational and social welfare issues before the Lutheran Church today, in the opinion of the majority of members of that communion, is the question of closer relations between the various portions of that body in this country. Interest in the coming convention of the United Lutheran Church at Savannah, Ga., will focus largely upon what disposition is made of a series of memorials coming to the convention from various of its constituent synods urging action in the direction of the development of greater unity in the direction of fellowship and cooperative activity.

Brought to the fore at first by several local federations of Lutheran laymen's organizations, the evidence of the pressing character of this issue resulted in its recognition by several synods and the passing of the memorials. Such action has not been confined to synods of the United Lutheran Church but other general bodies have had memorials of similar nature presented to them. For this reason the disposition of the matter made by the American Lutheran Church convention in Waverly, Iowa, will be awaited with deepest interest throughout the entire church. Without doubt the steps proposed at the earlier convention will bear weight in the discussions and decisions at Savannah. It is urged that the economic waste through duplication of effort in many phases of Christian work, where cooperation is entirely possible, is inefficient and foolish in the face of present conditions. It is declared that the overwhelming drift toward paganism in modern civilization confronts the Church with a challenge which can be met alone through a united front. Even the most enthusiastic advocates are not pressing organic union, recognizing that racial and social, as well as other questions still complicate such development. But they do urge that the time is ripe for more efficient practical unity, especially in the fields of cooperative effort in missions, education and social service. There are three partial federations of Lutheran bodies at present: The National Lutheran Council, The American Lutheran Conference and the Synodical Conference, but they do not represent as full cooperation as is desirable.

The Kentucky-Tennessee Synod, of which congregations in this section are members, recognized the urgency of this problem and at its last convention took the following action, which appears in the bulletin of the Savannah convention and a memorial for consideration by the delegates:

"That we recognize all steps taken toward a merger with other Lutheran bodies and our U. L. C. an express our interest (Ky-Tennessee Synod's interest) and enthusiasm toward that end."

That we memorialize the U. L. C. in America in its coming convention to take the necessary steps toward a merger of the American Lutheran Church with our United Lutheran church in America."

The Kentucky-Tennessee Synod, is offering the following memorial on another matter:

"That the request for the merger of the Mississippi Synod with our Synod be referred to the Executive Committee for study and recommendation."

Rare Orchid Species

Most popular and beautiful of the orchid's prolific botanical family, which records more than 5,000 different original species, is the Cattleya species, named after William Cattley, English sea captain, who, early in the eighteenth century, brought back to London some of these first Cattleya species from Colombia, thereby tapping one of the richest wild orchid gardens in the world.

No Belgian Race

Actually, there is no Belgian race, the people of Belgium being composed of two distinct racial families. The northern Belgians belong to the Walloons of French extraction with the characteristics of the French, while the southern Belgians are Flemish with the characteristics of the Dutch or Low Germans.

Watch Used as Compass

A watch can be used as a compass if the sun can be seen, says Pathfinder Magazine. Point the hour hand directly toward the sun and the point halfway between the hour hand and the figure 12 will be due south. (It will be due north if you should happen to be in the southern hemisphere).

First Sport for Women

It was in 1833 that America first heard of croquet, which had just become a rage in England. This is the first sport that feminine America participated in to any extent. However, women were interested spectators at men's and their games in the purely settled sections could handle a gun expertly.

WALTON RESIDENT

PASSES AWAY SATURDAY AT AGE OF 84 YEARS—HAD BEEN RESIDENT OF BOONE COUNTY HER ENTIRE LIFE—SERVICES HELD MONDAY.

Mrs. Roxanna Aylor, South Main St., Walton, passed away Saturday morning, after a few days' illness. She had been in failing health for several years due to her age.

She was 84 years old and resided in Boone county her entire life. She was the widow of the late J. W. Aylor who was widely known throughout the county. They were married early in life and lived on a farm on Gunpowder Creek for many years. They reared a family of twelve children. Those surviving are seven sons, Ezra, James, Robert, Kenneth, William, Bluff, Paul; five daughters, Josie, Maud, Cora, Jennie, Roxie; 31 grandchildren and 37 great grandchildren; one brother, Geo. Rice.

Funeral services were conducted from the Big Bone Baptist church Monday at 2 p. m., by O. M. Huey, assisted by Revs. Roy Johnson, Raymond Smith, John Miller and Bro. Wooten, her pastor at Walton in the presence of a church filled with relatives and friends. Rev. Huey's subject was "Mother" and his comments on mother was very impressive and beautiful and should be, for a good mother is the most beautiful person in all the world. Burial was in Big Bone cemetery by the side of her husband, who preceded her to the grave fifteen years ago.

Chambers & Grubbs funeral directors, of Walton were in charge of funeral arrangements.

E. B. RANKIN

E. B. Rankin, of Nicholas, Kenton county, died Friday morning in his 81st year. He was a life-long resident of Nicholas, a farmer, president of Kenton County Fire Insurance Co for 35 years. He was one of Gov. Laffoon's Colonels. A good man and citizen, loved by all who knew him. He leaves a widow, 2 sons, Oscar F. Rankin and Vi-mont Rankin, of Nicholas, three daughters Mrs. John L. Hume, Mrs. Geo. J. White, of Nicholas, and Mrs. Howard Congdon, of Ypsilanti, Michigan, and six grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted from his late home by Bro. R. F. DeMolsey, of Walton, who delivered a very appropriate sermon for the occasion in the presence of a large assembly of neighbors and friends, after which the remains were conveyed to the Independence cemetery for burial.

The floral offerings were generous, gorgeous and beautiful.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

DROUTH BROKEN

IN BOONE COUNTY WHEN GOOD RAINS FALL FRIDAY AND SATURDAY—FIRST GOOD RAINS FOR FIVE MONTHS—STOCK WATER WAS SCARCE.

The drouth, which has extended over a period of five months was broken last Friday when a good rain fell in all sections of the county. Another good rain followed Saturday, which lasted practically all day, causing branches and creeks to fill and start running.

Corn and tobacco crops in Boone county are very short due to the dry weather, and hay crops will be cut over half. However, the rains which fell last week help pastures materially and will help other pasture crops.

Several farmers were complaining of a shortage in stock water and had hauled several tanks from distant places.

This is the first good rain this section of the county has had in the past five months and was greatly needed.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Myers' baby has been ill the past few days.

DECLAMATION

CONTEST TO BE HELD AT FLORENCE HIGH SCHOOL—WILL BE FIRST CHAPEL PROGRAM OF YEAR—SIX PUPILS HAVE ENTERED CONTEST.

For the first chapel program of the year the Florence school will sponsor the local declamation contest for both girls and boys Friday morning, Oct. 5th at 10:15 a. m.

The entire time will be devoted to this program. Competent judges have been selected in order to be sure the pupil best qualified in this particular line will have the privilege of representing the school in the county contest Oct. 12. The winner of the county contest will represent Boone county in the state tournament at Lexington, Oct. 19.

The Florence school made a very good showing last year in both the county and state contest, having won first place in both the county and state in the girls' division, and first place in the boys' division.

It is our sincere belief that 1934 is Boone county's time to win the state tournament, having finished second in the tournament last year and the Florence school has pledged everything in its power to contribute its part in this accomplishment. So tell your friends and come out to this program Friday morning. Let's continue with the fine cooperative spirit that we have had in the past and make 1934 a banner year. Six pupils have entered the Florence contest.

May Campbell—They had a lovely time.

Madelln Holden—Under the big top.

DRIVERS LICENSE LAW

NETS STATE $66,571.60

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 27—The state has received $66,571.60 from the automobile drivers' license law passed by the special 1934 session of the general assembly, according to the records of the automobile department of the state tax Commission.

Of the total receipts, $19,022.50 will go to the credit of the state tax commission and $47,549.10 to the state police fund. The money received by the commission will be used for the enforcement of the law, while the state police fund will be used for the establishment of a patrol for the state highways.

BUCK PASSED

BY GOVERNOR — STATE GIVES $250,000 TOWARD OCTOBER. NEEDY—BUT OVERHEAD MUST BE CUT DOWN—STATE AUDIT ANNOUNCED

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 1.—A $250,000 state relief contribution with strings attached was offered the Federal Emergency Relief Administration today by Gov. Laffoon on behalf of the state of Kentucky.

Whether the money will be accepted on the terms laid down by the governor was doubtful, Dr. Charles W. Welch, chairman of the Kentucky Relief Commission, said from his home at Louisville. The governor's terms further complicated the whole dispute he added.

Dr. Welch announced yesterday while preaching to the congregation in his church in Louisville, that he is resigning as chairman of the Relief Commission.

Believes Conditions Impossible

"In view of the temper and attitude on relief they have shown in the past, I do not believe the governor's conditions can be met," he said the governor's "heart is right."

"You talk with him in his office, he makes up his mind, and you leave. But as soon as you leave by the front door someone else comes in through the back door and the governor changes his mind before you get out of the building."

Dr. Welch said a meeting of the Relief Commission would be held Monday to discuss the governor's $250,000 offer. In his letter to Thornton Wilcox the governor enclosed a copy of an order directing State Auditor J. Dan Talbott to draw a warrant for $250,000 subject to the following conditions:

Must Reduce Overhead

"That the State relief headquarters reduce its overhead to a 'reasonable' amount, and that county and area headquarters' overhead expense be 'substantially' reduced from the sum spent for the month of August."

"That the funds contributed for relief by the state be used for relief of the needy" and not for excessive overhead."

Coincidental with the conditional gift by the state was the announcement that State Inspector and Examiner Nat. B. Sewell would go to Louisville Tuesday to audit the affairs of the Relief Commission to determine how the state's previous total contribution of $1,035,000 had been spent.

While the state put up slightly more than $1,000,000 toward bearing the relief burden, the federal government has spent more than $3,000,000 in Kentucky. It was revealed by state relief headquarters at Louisville.

The governor wrote Thornton Wilcox relief administrator, that there were more people employed in the central office of the Relief Commission than were "working" in the state Capitol. He charged that the cost of relief administration in the state had reached "alarming and astounding" heights.

More Resignations Expected

Informed of Dr. Welch's resignation, Governor Laffoon said he was not surprised. "I expect many more resignations before this investigation is over," he said.

The Relief Commission defends its high cost of administration by saying that relief has become "more complicated."

"I don't know anything about that," said the governor, "what I'm after is this overhead percentage."

"He's running true to form," Mr. Wilcox cracked back. "He says he doesn't know anything about the increase in complexity of relief. That's absolutely right. He doesn't."

RELIEF WORKERS TO MEET AT COVINGTON

On October 4 at 1:30 Eastern Standard time at Covington, there will be a meeting of all relief workers, which includes the Covington area of Boone, Campbell and Kenton counties; the Carrollton area of Carroll, Gallatin, Owen, Henry, Oldham and Trimble and of Frankfort, Franklin, Shelby, Anderson, Woodford, Scott, and the Paris area, Bourbon, Nicholas, Harrison, Grant, Pendleton, and the Maysville area, Mason, Lewis, Fleming, Robertson and Bracken.

It is expected that county officials, city officials and all relief workers will be in attendance to have plans of this work explained by representatives of State relief work.

HIGHER RATE

REFUSED MILK PRODUCERS OF THE CINCINNATI MILK SHED UNTIL FUTHER INVESTIGATIONS ARE MADE BY MILK COMMISSION.

The Ohio Milk Marketing Commission declined to grant the producers in the Cincinnati Milk Shed an increase in price for September over the increase granted in August. The Commission refused to grant the increase until it had time to determine, from the figures of the cost of distribution, whether or not an increase could be granted without increasing the price to the consumer.

The committee of fifteen producers, which has been making the fight for an increase in price before the Commission, has contended that the producers are entitled to a much higher price, without any increase in price to the consumer. At the hearing at Columbus, the dealers were able, by their own figures, to show that they have been losing money during July and August. According to the information that the committee has, nearly all of them have made money since the first of last October, and some of them have made considerable money, and are well able to pay the increase.

The great difficulty is due to the fact that the Ohio Milk Marketing Commission has no inquisitorial power. That is, it has not the valid right to audit the books of the various dealers to find out whether or not they have been making or losing money. This is one of the weaknesses of the Burd Law.

The committee of fifteen will meet (today) Thursday afternoon to prepare for another hearing before the Commission, for an increase beginning with October or November. There never was a time in the history of the production of milk in the Cincinnati Milk Shed when the producers were in greater need of a price boosting organization, to include all producers than there is today. Such an organization could force a much higher price for milk during the fall and winter months.

Meetings were held last week at Crittenden, in Grant county, and at Mt. Auburn Community House, in Pendleton county. A meeting is scheduled for Wednesday night at Gardnersville, in Pendleton county.

COMMUNITY SALES TO BE HELD TWICE MONTHLY

The Florence Community Sales will be held twice each month, on the second and fourth Saturday. This schedule will be maintained during the winter months, according to Mr. Tanner, who has charge of the sales.

Robert Kirtley, of Portsmouth, O., spent Sunday with relatives in Petersburg and Burlington. Sunday night he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cropper and family.

CHECKS DUE

A-A-A TOBACCO SIGNERS AFTER COMPLIANCE SHEETS ARE SUBMITTED TO STATE OFFICE—REPORTS SHOULD BE IN BY SATURDAY

Boone county farmers will receive their first adjustment checks for their 1934 tobacco reduction soon after compliance sheets are submitted to the State Office according to County Agent H. R. Forkner.

The county Control Committee met at Burlington on Monday and Tuesday of this week to certify all forms where proper compliance had been met. No adjustment payments will be made any grower until the compliance forms are properly executed and certified to by the community and county control committee. These forms will be forwarded the State Office for payment as soon as 85 per cent are completed. Almost this number have already been completed and these are expected to be forwarded the State Office on next Tuesday.

A number of farmers for some reason or other when notified have failed to complete their compliance forms and mail them to the county office. The farmers have been notified and if they will get their re-

FISCAL COURT

MET TUESDAY WITH MANY ITEMS OF BUSINESS TO BE DISPOSED OF — CONTRACTS LET FOR BUILDING IMPROVEMENT.

The Fiscal Court met in regular session Tuesday. The grand jury in their report to the Circuit Court recommended that the county infirmery be painted and a new roof put on; that the jail and garage also be painted. The Fiscal Court, acting on that recommendation received bids for the work. Eight bids for painting the infirmary ranged from $181.70 to $251.40; the jail from $23.00 to $80.00 and the county garage from $35.00 to $70. The court awarded the contracts to the lowest bidder. The infirmary contract was given to Blackburn & Sons, the jail to F. K. Marksherry and the garage to Weaver and Beemon.

There was a wide range in the bids for roofing the infirmary, which included new gutters, valleys, ridge rolls and down spouts with cut-offs. The bids ranged from $1,288.85 to $798.00. The contract was awarded to the low bidder, W. R. Garnett.

Other improvements have been made at the infirmary consisting of new windows that were badly rotted and installing in the kitchen of needed shelving. The court also passed on and ordered paid the ordinary and statutory expense created in transacting county business.

Eight bids were received for the roofing and painting and the court believes that under present conditions contractors that are just and reasonable will be entered into for the work. Taking into consideration the reduction in the assessments, which means a reduction in the amount of money received from taxation, the court must use every economy to keep the county expenditures within the receipts from taxation.

The receipts from the truck tax this year are more than $1,000.00 less than last year, on account of the reduction of 25 per cent of truck licenses. This year the taxpayers will pay $25,000.00 less than last year on account of the reduction of the state tax on real estate. The sales tax will, if the estimates are as expected, pay to the treasurer of Boone county approximately $20,000, which will be used to pay the road bonds and interest.

RECEIVES BROKEN ANKLE

Harold Crigler, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Crigler, of near Hebron suffered a very painful injury last Sunday when a horse he was riding stumbled and fell, falling on his ankle and breaking it. He was removed to a Cincinnati Hospital where an X-Ray was taken, disclosing two bones broken.

FORMER CLERK

OF COUNTY COURT SUFFERS SERIOUS INJURIES WHILE DYNAMITING STUMPS FROM LAWN—REMOVED TO CINCINNATI HOSPITAL.

A. G. McMullen, former County Court Clerk of Boone county suffered serious injuries last Friday afternoon when a stick of dynamite exploded in his face.

Mr. McMullen, Elbert Clore and Jim Will Ryle were removing stumps from the yard of Mr. McMullen. He placed a stick of dynamite under the stump, touched the fuse off. Mr. McMullen, believing that the fuse had gone out was attempting to light it again. The dynamite exploded in his face, throwing him a distance of thirty feet.

Dr. M. A. Yelton was called, and removed several small pieces of rock from his face. One sliver of rock was taken from the side of his nose about the size of a grain of corn. He was later removed to the Good Samaritan Hospital in Cincinnati, where he is recuperating.

A report was circulated that he would be compelled to have his eyes removed, but was false. This news comes to us from a reliable source.

ports in by Saturday of this week they will go in the first batch and will receive their payment in the next two or three weeks. If they do not turn their reports in by that time they will be classified in the delayed group and the next payment will be delayed.

Our farmers are showing a splendid spirit in the AAA program. The major interest is not in the payments received but in the satisfaction of working together for improving not only ones own position but that of his fellow farmer.

LEXINGTON EDITOR

IS IMPROVING

New York, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Desha Breckinridge, of Lexington, Ky., stated Wednesday that a definite improvement had taken place in the condition of her husband, Desha Breckinridge, publisher of The Lexington Herald. She said that her husband suffered a paralytic stroke while speaking over the telephone last Friday.

The stroke occurred shortly after he and Mrs. Breckinridge arrived in this city from Nantucket, Mass.

It was stated, from his room in a hotel here, that the doctor attending him will not be able to determine the exact condition of the patient for several days.

His sister, Dr. Sophonisba Breckinridge, of the University of Chicago, also is with him.

Harry Berge, county agent of Gallatin county was calling on friends in Burlington last Sunday afternoon.

REFERENDUM

MEETINGS WILL BE HELD IN BOONE COUNTY THIS WEEK —ALL CORN-HOG FARMERS URGED TO BE ON HAND AT THESE MEETINGS

The dates and places for voting at local meetings are listed below:

October 4th—Thursday

Beaver and Union precincts will meet at New Haven school at 9:30 a. m.

Walton and Verona precincts will meet at the Walton Equitable Bank, Walton, at 1:15 p. m.

Florence and Constance precincts will meet at Check Tanner's Feed Store in Florence at 7:15 p. m.

October 5th—Friday

Burlington and Hebron precincts will meet at the Court House in Burlington at 7:15 p. m.

October 6th—Saturday

Hamilton and Carlton precincts will meet at Hamilton school at 9:30 a. m.

Petersburg and Bellevue precincts will meet at the school house in Petersburg at 1:00 p. m.

Farmers are urged to be on hand promptly at the meetings in their communities. A short discussion on the voting will be given following which each farmer present will vote by ballot. The two questions that will be voted on are as follows:

1. "Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with Corn and Hogs in 1935."

2. "Do you favor a one-contract per farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936."

The above two questions at the present time are vital to every farmer in that they are straws that will likely point toward the destiny of our farmers and the future of our agriculture.

PASTOR CALLED FOR LOCAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. R. L. James, of Erlanger was called by the members of the local Baptist church to be their pastor for the next three months.

Rev. James was for five years the pastor of the Dayton, Ky., Baptist church and the last five years has been the pastor of the Paintsville Baptist church.

Rev. James stated that if he was called to the Burlington Baptist church after the first of the year, he would move his family here. He preached his first sermon as pastor Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Arvin and Mrs. Lloyd Kelly and daughter, spent the week-end with relatives in Louisville.

ARE YOUR CHILDREN SAFE?

T. Alfred Fleming, Supervisor of the Conservation Department of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, tells of a conference he had with the president of the Board of Education of a large city on the subject of fire hazards in schools. The president emphatically stated that all the schools under his jurisdiction attained the maximum of fire safety, and to prove his point invited Mr. Fleming to accompany him on a tour of inspection. He selected a school having over 2,800 students, which had been in service only two years, and was supposedly a model structure of its kind.

The inspection disclosed innumerable fire hazards, and resulted in an expert survey of all schools in the city. This completed, a bond issue to the tune of $1,800,000 had to be issued to eliminate the unnecessary dangers in supposedly "perfect" schools.

As Mr. Fleming says, "The trouble is so few people know just what are hazards in public building construction and what is necessary in proper maintenance of these buildings so as to avoid the danger of a catastrophe." Thousands of existing schools which are believed safe, if officials in charge, are the worst kind of fire traps. Only a person experienced in fire prevention can point to hazards and show how they may be eliminated.

Every American school, whether it houses five pupils or five thousand, should have proper inspections to safeguard the nation's invaluable young lives—thousands of which have been needlessly destroyed by fires in the past.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters is more than anxious to give expert advice to any community as to how to remove fire hazards from schools.

YOUR GREATEST PROTECTOR

The nation has just observed "Constitution Week." It was sponsored by the American Legion, which carries on continuous work in the interest of better Americanism.

In these trying times, it will benefit every citizen if he looks backward into the nation's past. One hundred and fifty-eight years ago the Revolution came to an end. A handful of patriots, who had suffered great privations for long years of war to break the bonds of governmental oppression, marched home. Shortly afterwards they established the United States of America—and for the first time in world history liberty and equality became the fundamental governmental principles of a great nation.

There is danger that, in our effort to obtain temporary benefits and favors, in order to meet a periodic depression ("casual embarrassment" in the life of a nation, as Thomas Jefferson described it) we as a people will lose sight of the great heritage that was handed down to us by our forefathers. Today the Constitution is under attack—critics would have us believe that it has outlived its usefulness, and is only a scrap of paper. If the Constitution is outmoded, so is liberty, so is the right to the pursuit of happiness, so is the right to ownership of property, and the privilege and duty of working and saving for one's self. The Constitution deals with the basic principles of liberty, equality and freedom from oppression which are as timeless as the seas.

Every American citizen should resolve to do all in his power to maintain constitutional liberty—liberty which was won with blood at Yorktown.

WATCH OUT FOR PEDESTRIANS

Here is something that every automobile driver should keep constantly in mind: The pedestrian must always be given the right of way. He is, by comparison with the motorist, in a precarious position—when a crisis occurs, his only chance to escape unharmed often depends upon the driver of the car which is in danger of running him down.

The pedestrian accident toll constitutes one of the worst phases of our disgraceful automobile accident record. In 1913, 37.14 per cent of all motor accidents involved pedestrians. These accounted for 30.83 per cent of all injuries, and 44.95 per cent of all deaths—showing that when a pedestrian is in an accident, the chance of his being killed is greater than in any other type of automobile mishap.

This year the automobile fatality record is rising over the 1933 level, and if the present trend continues the death toll will reach a new high. And, as usual, the pedestrian continues to get the worst of it. There is a legion of motorists who believe that as soon as the "go" light flares they are entitled to dash across an intersection, whether or not people on foot are still in it. It is an interesting commentary on this that the courts have held that once a pedestrian has stepped into a street under traffic light protection, he is entitled to a safe passage across, whether or not the light changes.

Every automobile driver should regard pedestrians as being his personal responsibility. You may save a fraction of a second by dashing across intersections thronged with pedestrians—but is it worth it in view of the fact that that "saving" may cost a life?

THE GARDEN Fall Salvage, II

(By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture)

A discussion was begun last week of the relatively easy methods of saving garden left-overs to be used through the winter. Simple methods are stressed, but mawshits should be used only when it is impossible to do better.

SWEET POTATOES—Altho this vegetable is a critical one to store, many of its requirements may be met in a manner much more simple than as professional storage houses meet them. Requirements for successful storage of sweetpotatoes are complete ventilation and maintenance of proper temperature. To assure the former, an intake for fresh dry air and an exhaust for moistened, warmed air to escape, are provided. In order that the temperature will not fall below what is safe, the building must be warmly constructed, and means for occasionally heating it installed. In short, properly to store the sweetpotatoes a specialized structure is best, but that need not discourage persons with limited facilities from trying.

The first step is curing, that is, driving off excess moisture. Sweetpotatoes are cured when milky sap no longer exudes when their ends are broken off. Curing may be accomplished by pre-storing the potatoes in an airy place, or even outside in the sun, keeping in mind that a temperature below 50 degrees is dangerous. Curing takes from two to four weeks, after which the potatoes may be permanently stored. This may be any location in which a temperature of 50 degrees is assured. If there is fluctuation, as in a house room where fires are kept only during the day, provision must be made to bridge over the night, and even as simple a way as that of wrapping the tubers each in newspaper, is effective. A further precaution is to cover the pile of containers with sacking, tarpaulin, carpets or blankets. Closets adjacent to stove chimneys may be used, or the crates or boxes containing the wrapped potatoes may be grouped about a chimney passing through the attic. The masonry must be sound, however, so as not to cause a fire hazard.

Persons who have house cellars and heating systems are indeed fortunate, for all they need do is hang the baskets of sweetpotatoes to the first-floor joists, over or above the cellar furnace, after the tubers are cured. If the house cellar is flooded in concrete and is consequently dry, curing may be dispensed with, and the baskets hung immediately the potatoes are dug.

No matter which storing means is used, the potatoes should have been so handled that no bruising or breaking of the skins has taken place, for a mutilated potato cannot be expected to keep properly.

CUSHAWS, WINTER SQUASH AND PUMPKINS—These, too, are warm crops, in that a sustained temperature much below 50 degrees destroys them. Dryness of atmosphere is essential too. In fact, all that has just been said of sweetpotatoes applies to cushaws and squashes, except that no preliminary curing is needed. High shelves in house closets should be used or shelves hung just below the first-floor joists in the house cellar, about or above the furnace.

PEPPERS AND EGGPLANTS—These are warm crops, and altho their requirements in general are the same as for the others, they will rapidly except there is some moisture present. A compromise is to keep them in the same storage as the squashes, but halfway to the floor. Their storage time is short, but as they are especially good after season the attempt should be made to keep them.

JAPS GIVING WORLD TRADE A BATTLE IN CHEMICALS

The expansion of Japan's domestic chemical industry is strikingly reflected in its foreign trade in chemicals and allied products during the first half of 1934, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. An increase of 44 per cent over the corresponding period of the preceding year, and 130 per cent over the first half of 1932 was shown.

As the nine Democratic nominees for congress in Kentucky are compared with their Republican opponents it is obvious that Kentuckians will get superior representation in congress by election of the Democrats.

FISHERIES BUREAU TO ISSUE PAMPHLETS OF RECIPES

While official records show that 160 edible varieties of fish are taken in the waters of the United States by commercial fishermen, about 80 per cent of the volume approximately 12 of these varieties of consumption, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. In an effort to acquaint the public with the heretofore little known varieties of edible fish and at the same time assist the fishery industry, the Fisheries Bureau will shortly make available at a nominal cost a small pamphlet on fish cookery which will contain recipes and instructions concerning the preparation and cooking of fish in the home. It was stated the issuance of the pamphlet is in accordance with a recently inaugurated program of fish cookery studies to acquaint the public with the nutritive value of fish and fishery products.

U. S. IRON AND STEEL SHIPMENTS INCREASE

United States' shipments of tons of iron and steel products to its non-contiguous territories during the first seven months of this year show a gain of 12,559 tons over the corresponding period of last year, and 12,381 tons in advance of the total for the corresponding period of 1932, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. Hawaii was the leading buyer, followed by Puerto Rico, while shipments to Alaska were next.

CANADIAN DEMAND FOR U. S. MACHINERY SHOWS BIG GAIN

Canadian demand for United States industrial machinery has shown notable improvement in recent months, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. While the mining branch has been the most active, with gold companies the chief buyers, other branches, notably the textile, automotive, metal working and printing industries, have installed new equipment. During the 12-month period ended June, 1934, Canada imported machinery valued at $15,985,518, of which $11,797,750 originated in the United States. It is apparent, the report states, that despite higher production costs in the United States, with resultant price increases, American machinery exporters are regaining their place in the Canadian market as a result of the superior quality of their products, proximity to buyers and ease of servicing.

GOOD CARE REDUCES CHICKENPOX LOSSES

While healthy birds kept in good houses will contract chickenpox, the disease will likely be in a lighter form and do less damage than in unthrifty flocks, says a statement by Dr. F. E. Hull of the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Poultry houses should be dry, properly ventilated and well lighted. Crowding of the birds should be avoided, and there should be ample room for roosting. Dampness, drafts, insanitary surroundings and parasites favor the spread and severity of chickenpox, but do not cause the disease.

Healthy, vigorous birds kept in clean, dry, well-ventilated houses are as likely to contract chickenpox as are birds in poor condition or infested with parasites. Once the disease is introduced into an unthrifty flock, however, the infection will spread more rapidly, the disease will appear in a more severe form and the mortality will be higher.

Show stock should be quarantined for two weeks before being placed in the flock, shipping crates should be cleaned and disinfected and care generally given to prevent the introduction of chickenpox into the flock.

Cautious vaccination is used for preventing chickenpox. Pulletts should not be housed for at least 30 days following vaccination, and heavy layers should not be vaccinated. Healthy birds, in good condition, free from coccidiosis and worms, and less than 14 weeks old, are the best subjects for vaccination. Veterinarians have supplies of the vaccine.

A Grant county poultry breeder, recently bought 300 turkeys, and will continue the purebred breeding program.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Alice Tanner Utz passed to her eternal reward September 18, 1934, at Florence, Ky. The funeral service at the house Thursday afternoon was conducted by her pastor Rev. Roy Johnson and attended by many friends of life long standing, who gathered to show their high esteem of this good woman and to add any last long service to her devoted family. Wonderful fortitude and patience was exhibited by Mrs. Utz during her illness. There was no complaining at her lot and when she knew the end must be she quietly rested in Him whom she loved and whose face she now beholds.

Although more than three score years and ten, she was never old—the changes the years wrought left her fresh in spirit.

She loved her home, her deacons, her greatest concern was the care of her children, her greatest delight was in training them for usefulness and service, and they rise up and call her blessed. Loyalty to friends was a notable trait in her character.

She is not dead, she just away, with a cheery smile and a wave of her hand she has wandered into an unknown land, and left us dreaming how very fair it needs must be since she lingers there.

CORN-HOG CONTRACT SIGNERS TO VOTE ON ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

Kentucky farmers who signed the corn-hog contracts are to have an opportunity to vote on agricultural adjustment plans to follow the 1934 program, the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky announces.

Local corn-hog committees will conduct the poll by community or county, or by mail where there are only a small number of contract signers. Following meetings where the program will be discussed these questions will be voted on: "Do you favor a one-contract-per-farm adjustment program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1935?"

A total of 23,500 Kentucky farmers signed corn-hog adjustment contracts. They produced an average of 775,000 hogs 782,000 acres of corn in 1932 and 1933.

These 23,500 farmers will receive approximately $3,500,000 in benefit payments for their cooperation in the adjustment of the production of corn and hogs.

FIELD NURSES FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Field nurses of the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission are watching carefully any possible spread of infantile paralysis in the state. The State Board of Health announces that the paralysis has not reached epidemic proportion in Kentucky although a number of cases have been reported in certain counties. Parents are warned to keep their children at home and in school, but to avoid large public gatherings. "Infantile paralysis may occur in any season, but there is usually a decided increase in the number of cases about the beginning of July and the peak is reached in mid-September or October, with a decided drop in November," according to Miss Marian Williamson, Louisville Director, Ky., Crippled Children Commission.

Dr. M. D. Jensen, connected with the Kentucky State Board of Health calls attention to the following symptoms of particularly great diagnostic importance in infantile paralysis: "Extreme irritability of the child; stiffness of the back and of the neck upon the shoulders; and the prostration, pulse and respiration out of proportion to the temperature which is usually under 102 degrees Fahrenheit." He further states "Whenever a case of poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) develops paralysis, the patient should have absolute rest until all pain and tenderness have disappeared from the affected members. It is urgently recommended that a period of at least from six to eight weeks be permitted to elapse before any massage, exercise, or re-educational measure be started." If paralysis occurs the affected limbs may be treated later by massage, the application of braces and possibly orthopedic surgery.

Free clinics are conducted by the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission to examine crippled children, offer advice concerning treatment and provide such treatment for indigent cases. 28 per cent of all cases examined in the Commission's clinics during the past two years owe their deformities to infantile paralysis. As a result of the recent occurrence of the paralysis in central and southeastern Kentucky the Commission has postponed until November, the holding of any clinics in these sections. In the western part of the state, clinics are scheduled for September 27th in Bowling Green, October 2nd in Somerset and October 5th in Paducah.

Names of infantile paralysis cases reported to the State Board of Health are referred to the Kentucky Crippled Children Commission, and as rapidly as possible the four field nurses of the Commission's staff are visiting such cases, advising the parents concerning rest and home care, and giving information about clinics to which the children may be brought later for free examination. "The Commission expects to conduct from 12 to 24 such clinics this year," said Miss Marian Williamson, Director, "and every victim of infantile paralysis will have an opportunity to attend a clinic in his neighborhood. It is the Commission's job to see that every indigent case is offered the service provided by the state. We have already furnished hospital care or braces for more than 4000 crippled children during the ten years the Commission has been functioning, and we know that there are hundreds still in need of treatment."

ANNOUNCEMENTS MADE

Frankfort, Ky.—In announcing appointment of L. M. Zapp, of Louisville, as chief engineer of the Public Service Commission of Kentucky, Chairman Wilbur Miller said: "We have secured the services of a man who by training and experience should be highly competent for this important position."

Zapp was for many years connected with the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric Railway Co., for whom he designed and constructed sub-stations, transmission lines and other electrical features of their power station.

In 1911 Zapp was employed by the New York Water Supply Commission as cost accountant during construction of the Yonkers pressure tunnel. In 1917 he was employed by the Philadelphia Rapid transit Co., to make a study of economic power supply and distribution. He was for several years manager of the Philadelphia office of A. L. Drumm Company, consulting engineers, in which capacity he had charge of the work of placing valuations on electric light and gas properties of various utility companies for capitalization, merger and rate making purposes. He has frequently appeared before various state commissions as an expert witness on questions involving construction and operation of light and gas utilities. He was graduated from Purdue University in 1902.

Chairman Miller said "we anticipate that Mr. Zapp's wide experience will be a distinct asset to the commission and will prove invaluable in any rate cases or valuations of property that may come before the commission."

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Trench silos may be made permanent by lining the walls and bottom with concrete or rock. A drain should be provided in one corner at the lower end to remove water that may enter while the silo is being emptied.

If butter is soft, after churning is completed, it should be washed with water a few degrees colder than the butter; otherwise use water of the same temperature. Washing it twice will help prevent off flavors.

Removal of grass, weeds, manure and other debris from the base of trees in the fall helps to break up the hiding places of mice, which do a great amount of injury to Kentucky orchards. Placing a half bushel of coal cinders around each tree hinders mice from making burrows.

The hopper or self-feeding of whole grain is finding favor with more poultry raisers every year. It is more sanitary, saves labor and lowers the cost of egg production. Hens can grind their own grain more efficiently than any mill.

The porch ceiling should not be painted a conspicuously different color from those used elsewhere on the exterior of the house. It is a mistake to paint the porch ceiling light blue, because undue attention is thereby attracted to it.

Frequent care must be given sauerkraut. Remove the scum as it forms and wash and scald the plate, weight and cloth as often as necessary to remove scum and mold. Fermentation, complete in 8 to 12 days in warm weather, requires more time at lower temperatures.

FOUR-TIMES NATIONAL PLOWING CHAMPION!

CARL SHOGER SAYS

TIRES ARE BIG FACTOR

The National Plowing Championship—greatest of all agricultural laurels—was won for the fourth consecutive time by Carl Shoger at the Wheatland, Illinois, Plowing Contest, September 15th. This time, more than ever before, the contest was a convincing demonstration of pneumatic tire superiority, because rain during the event made conditions extremely difficult. Shoger won with an International Harvester Tractor that was equipped with Firestone Low Pressure Tractor tires, the same equipment he won with last year, but he put on his chains this year to plow in the rain. He was competing against the nation's most famous plowmen some of whom horse-drawn plows. Shoger believes used tractor equipment and others the new low pressure tractor tires are as important to the farm tractor as balloon tires are to automobiles.

Union county farmers estimate that between 15,000 and 20,000 tons of lespedeza hay above local needs will be harvested. The Farm Service Company has arranged to handle the hay cooperatively for $2.00 per ton service and selling charges. Every available storage space is being used to take care of the crop.

OVER THE WAYSIDE

There was a fine rain fell last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Black and family spent Wednesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard and family.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Uncle Bill Shinkle. This community extends sympathy to the bereaved family. Due to an error in last week's Recorder—Uncle Bill marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea, instead of Morgan. He joined the army when he was 16 years of age, and moved to Boone county when he was 41 years old.

Willnetta Shinkle spent Monday night with her aunt, May Hubbard and family.

A large crowd attended the sale of Mrs. Feldhaus Saturday afternoon.

Glenn Belle, of Muncie, Ind., spent Monday night with Delbert and Otha Hubbard.

Quite a few are having corn cuttings in the community.

The first Sunday of October will be "Promotion Day." This will be the beginning of Bro. Johnson's 9th year of service at Big Bone Baptist church. We would like to have as many members present as possible. Everybody invited to be with us, as we will have something interesting to tell you.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. J. H. Aylor, of Walton, who passed away Saturday morning at her home. She will be sadly missed by her daughter who has cared for her so long. The children and friends have the sympathy of this community.

Mr. and Mrs. Garland Huff spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sebre.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Black spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Isaacs.

Lute Simpson and son spent Sunday with Mrs. Alice Shinkle and family.

HEAT HELPS CURING IN SEVERAL WAYS

The use of heat is a different advantage not only in preventing house burn in damp weather but in raising the temperature of barns where tobacco is housed in cool weather, says the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Tobacco yellows slowly at temperatures below 60 degrees, and when the crop is cut late the temperature in the barn will frequently get low. If the tobacco yellows too slowly, it dries before the yellowing is completed and cures green.

Another instance where heat can be used to advantage is to dry out the leaf when it remains wet for several days after curing is completed. This is a big help in preserving the flash and color of the leaf.

GROWS WATERMELON WEIGHING 70 POUNDS

Mr. H. D. Brown of Reynolds Station, Ky., is undoubtedly the 1934 champion watermelon raiser of Hancock county. Several days ago, the Clarion received a renewal from M. Brown. In his letter he told us of having raised a watermelon that tipped the scales at 70 pounds. Those who helped eat it stated that it was as good as any they ever ate. We'll have to admit that a 70-pound watermelon is "some melon," and as far as we can learn, he holds the record—Hancock Clarion, Hawesville.

WALKING STICK WAS MADE IN 1792

In our show window you will probably see the oldest walking stick in Kentucky. This cane belongs to Henry Gragg. It is made of black pepper stalk, with a handle made of buck's horn, loaded with lead. On the handle are two dates: 1792 and 1867.

This cane belonged to Enoch Gragg of Mulberry, N. C., who was the great-great-grand father of Henry Gragg. Enoch Gragg was the nearest neighbor to Daniel Boone when the latter left North Carolina to settle in the wilds of Kentucky.

Henry Gragg has been offered $25 for this cane, but says he won't part with it at any price.—Times-Tribune, Corbin.

LARGE GINSENG ROOT SELLS FOR $2

H. M. Mullins, who with Edgar Purdy runs the Mullins & Purdy store at Bradfordsville, was in the Falcon office Monday and reported buying a large ginseng root Saturday from John Cochran, who lives on the head of Rush Branch.

Mr. Mullins, who has been a dealer in "seng" for 20 years, states the largest root from a single gin brought to the store Saturday was that the specimen Mr. Cochran seng plant that he has ever seen. Some of the prongs of the root were ten inches long and an inch in diameter, although dried. The root weighed four ounces, and brought Mr. Cochran $2.—Marion Falcon, Lebanon.

U. S. EXPORTS OF SLOT MACHINES ON INCREASE

A noteworthy stimulation of U. S. export trade in coin-operated machines occurred in the first half of the current year, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. During the 1934 period 20,449 machines, valued at $667,105, were sold abroad, an increase of 172 per cent in quantity and 279 per cent in value as compared with the corresponding period of 1933. The United Kingdom continues to be the chief market for American coin-operated machines, accounting for over 65 per cent of the total for the first six months of the current year. Canada was the second most important foreign outlet. U. S. exports to Latin America, if maintained at present volume, will exceed previous totals. However, coin-operated machines of the amusement type have not been popular in that region, machines with any element of chance involved in their operation being either prohibited or closely regulated.

COW HAS FIVE CALVES IN YEAR

Logan county, not to be outdone by other localities in the U. S. and Canada, lays claim to a record in multiple births. Russell Moseley, a well-known young farmer of the Spring Valley neighborhood, on the Orndoff Mill road, owns a cow that gave birth to a set of triplets and a set of twins within a year, and all five of the calves lived.—Adairville Enterprise.

Sympathy is extended to the children and other loved ones, in the death of their mother, Mrs. Roxanna Aylor, of Walton.

AN ANSWER

In answer to Mr. Rucker's article in last week's Boone County Recorder, we wish to state that in the article written by the K. I. O. Milk Producers Association, the writer did not have Mr. Rucker or the organization called the U. M. P. A. in mind, in fact, did not even think of either, but simply wanted to state the facts as they exist, but we are perfectly willing to answer Mr. Rucker's questions.

We have not accused the U. M. P. A. of spreading propaganda against the K. I. O. directly, but the publisher of the Clermont Sun in the issue of September 27th, and who had attended some of Mr. Rucker's meetings, plainly stated that the K. I. O. is a Dealers' Organization and we again wish to make the statement that if the dealers control the K. I. O. it would not look reasonable to any one that they would pay more money to our producers than has been paid to other producers in this same market.

Secondly: We wish to state in answer to his second question that the K. I. O. has had a representative on the Control Board ever since it was organized, and appeals have been made, as the K. I. O. is on record of filing briefs, on August 14th, 1933, also September 11th and September 22nd, 1933, and the writer has appealed to the Milk Commission personally several times since last October in an effort to get an advance in price for the producer, and as stated in the previous article, "the main reason that we are not receiving more money for our milk, is on account of taking care of several truck loads of milk through the Cincinnati pool that has no market except on a butterfat basis, which penalizes each producer in this market to make up the difference in price." We do not agree with Mr. Rucker as to the good that could be done by a larger representation of the producers going before the Milk Commission, as at the last meeting this was demonstrated, that they did not assist in a raise in price as the Commission has refused the demands that was made by representation of all of the groups.

It also should be plain that as long as the Co-operative Pure Milk Association are in the business of repelling milk their members could not join one organization without giving up what they have already invested. We also believe that if there had not been so much agitation and so much talk of strike that the price would have been raised to at least $2.50 in July. We have attended every meeting that has been held by the Milk Commission in an effort to secure a better price for the producers. We have not attended all of the meetings that have been held by the Milk Producers' Union or Mr. Rucker for the reason that we felt sure this agitation was doing more harm than good.

In answer to the third question, the reason we suggested that each producer make sure where his milk was going to be marketed and for how long, was for the reason that the K. I. O. Milk Producers Association have contracts with two-thirds of the Cincinnati and Kentucky dealers to supply them with milk, and in as much as the Burke Law was only passed to be in existence until July 1935, we are still bound under our contract and we expect to carry this contract out, and as we received more money for our producers' milk before the Burke Law went into effect than we have since, taking into consideration the retail price, we feel that we have done more for the producer than has been done since all of the agitation. We are not trying to discourage or discredit any movement that may be put forth that would be for the benefit of the producer, but we have a right to our opinion as to whether these movements are an advantage or disadvantage to the producer. We have been through milk strikes personally, and we have watched milk strikes in other cities and are unable to see where any milk strike or agitation has gained anything for the producer. We are ready and willing to do anything in our power at any and all times to benefit the milk producer, and we would like to state that the Co-operative Pure Milk Association and the K. I. O. Milk Producers Association have been working for many weeks to straighten out the difficulties in the Kentucky market adjacent to Cincinnati and with the able assistance of Mr. Forrest J. Alvin, as arbitrator who represents the N. R. A. of Northern Kentucky that we have been able to benefit the milk producers of northern Kentucky by keeping the market from being demoralized up to this time and we believe this condition will be straightened out to the satisfaction of all.

3,600-POUND STEER IS ATTRACTING ATTENTION

The largest steer in the country, raised and owned by Jack Howard of Bourbon county and weighing 3,600 pounds, was shown last week at the Kentucky State Fair and was quite an attraction.

He is of the Shorthorn breeding, smooth and well proportioned for so large an animal. Mr. Howard inclosed the steer in a tent and which netted him quite a large charged an admission of 10 cents, sum.

Mr. Howard has been urged to exhibit his wonder steer at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago this fall.

THE ANSWER IS EASY

A hard-headed California editor who publishes the Oakdale Leader, wants to know who is going to pay the California taxes when the politicians put the existing power companies out of business, with duplicate, tax-exempt, publicly-subsidized plants.

He asks the question after noting that one gas and electric company alone, in his state, pays into the state tax coffers $847 an hour, or $7,427,678.64 a year.

There is only one answer: Those taxes, plus the additional taxes required to finance unnecessary tax-exempt competing plants, would be added to any remaining taxable property.

BASE BALL NEWS

Midway played the Erlanger A. C. nine Sunday and were defeated by a score of 8 to 6. Steffen was on the mound for the Erlanger team and played a nice game of ball.

IN THE INTEREST OF ALL

The farm cooperative movement is, first and foremost, designed to help the agricultural producer—to obtain for him a larger share of the final selling price of his product, and to make his production methods more profitable and efficient.

In carrying out this purpose, the consumer is not "stung," he is, on the contrary immensely benefited. It is necessary to him that a constant supply of first-grade farm products be always at his beck and call. He wants food of quality, sold at a fair price. And that is what the cooperatives strive to give him. When a farmer gets more for what he raises it does not mean that the consumer is the victim of profiteering—it simply means that the money he pays to the retailer has been fairly distributed between those who produced the products, those who handled them between farm and market, and those who sold them to the public.

From another aspect, the farm co-op is aiding the urban resident. Farmers of the country normally provide the largest single consuming source for the products of our factories. The drop in farm income is one of the most burning problems of depression. As the co-ops gradually make progress, and farm income rises, all classes of American citizens will reap the benefit of stimulated buying and increased purchasing power.

Today farm cooperation is one of the greatest social and economic forces in our national life. It has done much in its brief life-time and its period of greatest achievement still lies in the future.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Newspaper readers have received big money's worth during the last two or three weeks. Headline news has been dramatic, colorful, important. High spots: The burning of a great passenger liner with rumors of sabotage and criminal negligence; the textile strike, which now affects 400,000 workers and is bringing about major political repercussions; the Senate investigation of the armament manufacturers.

So far as the long view is concerned, the last of these is easily the most vital. Nothing costs the world so much, measured either in dollars or lives, as does a great war. The economic cost of the World War is estimated at about $400,000,000,000. In every nation the cost of wars represents the largest item in the tax bill. In the United States, army and navy maintenance, charges on war bonds, pensions and war incidentals are over 60 per cent of the federal government's operating budget.

Last spring, the magazine Fortune ran an article entitled "Arms and the Men." Heavily documented, the article charged that the motto of the armament dealers is to keep a war going once it is started, to attempt to start new ones in time of peace. The article did not confine itself to generalities, but made specific charges against the famous firms, and mentioned names, dates, places, incidents. It was republished in pamphlet form by a large eastern publishing firm, and hundreds of thousands of copies were sold at ten cents each. Then, a few months later, two long books appeared, dealing in greater detail with the same subject. The present Senate investigation was the direct result of all this.

The executives of a United States submarine manufacturing company have produced the most dramatic testimony—letters from their files show that the arms companies constitute a tremendous international combine which takes no sides, knows no boundaries. As Fortune said it is the only business where a concern likes to see its competitors make sales, because it knows that these sales must inevitably lead to increased business for all concerned. Here's how it works to use a mythical illustration: The Republic of Sylvania buys a brace of destroyers from the A Armament Company. The neighboring Republic of Arcady becomes frightened, wonders if Sylvania is planning an invasion. A representative of the B Armament Company, Limited, shows up, presents his sales talk, "contacts" high officials—and Arcady buys three destroyers. Sylvania retaliates by purchasing two more—and so it goes, with each country trying to out-buy the other.

Honored names have been involved in the investigation. Example: One letter said that King George had personally interceded in an effort to bring certain buyers to the English arms market. Other letters said frankly, when talking of possible South American business, that graft was essential.

There is growing sentiment in favor of nationalization of the arms industry—but those who are not easily swayed by emotion feel that would avail little. American manufacturers are small frogs in a very large puddle—foreign concerns such as Skoda, Vickers-Armstrong and Krupp are the really big shots. If the government took over every American armament and munitions maker it would affect the international situation to only a minute degree.

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

By R. M. Hofer

I was talking to a very earnest lady recently who was enthused about the idea of "redistributing the wealth of the United States." I don't think she really knew the meaning of the phrase, but it seemed to have a nice sound to her.

She said the capitalistic system should be changed and limit the amount of money any one person could have to not over one million dollars.

I agreed no one would starve on a million and asked what her plan was for stopping industrial leaders when they had made their million. In other words, when would such men cease to be laborers from which point they started, and become capitalists?

If Henry Ford had been shelved when he made his first million, the world might have waited years to enjoy the millions of cheap automobiles he has built.

Ford is merely an example of the individual genius of a laboring man, which can be seen on every hand in the United States. It was this genius that built our nation.

You cannot limit genius and at the same time give its beneficial results to the people.

Those who thoughtlessly talk about redistribution of wealth, confiscating capital through taxation and limitation of inventive genius, are simply advocating, whether they know it or not, destruction of millions of jobs and wiping out of savings.

My intellectual lady friend was up a tree, at it were, when she started to try to decide, "When is a laboring man not a laboring man?" or "when does he become a capitalist?"

More than 300 hogs were sold at $8.10 per cwt., by Union county farmers at the sale following the Tri-State Hog Show at Evansville, Ind.

DRUG STORE SURVEY REVEALS COSTS,
SALES AND PROFITS

The drug store still draws substantial revenues and profits from the prescription department, the department which was responsible for the establishment of this retail outlet, Claudius T. Murchison, Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, stated at Washington when announcing the availability of the final report of the National Drug Store Survey, "Costs, Sales, and Profits in the Retail Drug Store"; this report has just been received by the Louisville district office of the Bureau.

The present report shows that the prescription department accounted for 16 per cent of total sales of the eleven test stores included in this survey and produced a net profit of 8.8 per cent of sales. Contrasted with this showing, the sundries and toiletries departments were shown by the study to have sustained net losses of 13.8 per cent and 6.2 per cent.

The survey was sponsored by the entire drug trade, including allied industries interested in the drug store as a retail outlet. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was requested to conduct the study, with the objective of determining what services, practices and commodities were responsible for losses or profits. This latest report from the survey follows nine other reports previously released on the subjects of prescription department, ice cream at the soda fountain, drug store arrangement, a package study, wholesale operations, and a comparison of city and country drug stores.

After careful consideration the Survey Committee, composed of 33 leaders in the trade, selected St. Louis, Mo., as the "laboratory city." Eleven independent drug stores were selected in addition to two national chain units. There were three "professional-type" pharmacies selected for an expanded study of the prescription phase of the survey, it was stated.

The 11 independent stores ranged in yearly volume from $13,000 to $78,000 and satisfied the other characteristics deemed necessary by the Survey Committee. Some were purely neighborhood stores, some were in business subcenters, while others represented typical transient or transfer point business. Home owners and apartment or flat dwellers, of varying income and racial classes, were included in the trading areas of the stores. A full year, April, 1931-March, 1932, was devoted to the field work of the Survey.

In this analysis of costs and profits, the effects on costs of selling time and rate of turnover on inventory investment, were measured by stop-watch observations, and detailed records of each item carried by the drug stores were kept throughout the entire year. This is an innovation in retail cost accounting, and makes possible a consideration of costs chargeable to an item or department, based upon measurements designed to establish real cost responsibility, according to Mr. Murchison.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

New York—The best business news of the week came out of the Mid-West where rains removed some of the despair caused by the devastating drought and the Government's crop reduction and construction program. From Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and other centers came reports of improved retail trade as rains gave farmers new hope.

One of the largest retail trade organizations in America reported that for the 32 weeks ending Sept., 10 the sales gain was 22.4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933. One of the largest retail grocery companies reported that sales for the 36 weeks ending September 8 were 11.4 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year.

The textile strike, which was branded by Recovery Administrator Johnson as a violation of organized labor's solemn pledge, dealt a heavy blow to business in the South, injuring farmers as well as mill workers and general business. Cotton consumption, which declined more than 20,000 bales in August, dropped still lower as labor strife hit the mills. This had an adverse effect on the prices of cotton right at the time farmers began their fall marketing.

W. C. Clark, deputy minister of finance of Canada, attracted widespread attention with the statement that "world recovery is definitely on the way." Canada, unhampered by such restrictions as have been placed upon American business and industry, makes no secret of its expectation of capturing millions of dollars worth of business formerly enjoyed by industry in the United States.

Wholesale commodity prices continue to climb, according to the Labor Bureau's index. Much of the increase, instead of going to workers, business and industry, is caused by the ever-growing cost of administering the multitude of codes in which business is entangled.

Steel operations are estimated at slightly more than 20 per cent of capacity, but steel output will increase if the automobile industry realizes the demand forecast by its executives.

Reports from Washington say Administration insiders are drafting new radical, labor legislation for the next Congress. There is not likely to be much loosening of investment money until strike-promoting policies are definitely rejected by the President and the Congress.

TAXES COST MORE THAN FOOD

Last year, according to the United States News, the American people paid $1,035,000,000 for medical services, $2,166,000,000 for fuel and light, $3,600,000,000 each for clothing and for home rental, $7,650,000,000 for the most basic necessity of all, food—AND $9,000,000,000 FOR TAXES!

The increase in taxation—local, state and national—is the most startling and menacing economic development since the world war. It was not so long ago that we used to pity overtaxed European countries, in the belief that we were escaping their experience. Today, with the cost of all forms of government soaring in the face of diminishing taxable assets and earnings, we are very close to the European level. Recently England, one of the heaviest taxed countries, enjoyed a general tax reduction, made in the interest of industrial recovery. The United States, unhappily, has no such prospect.

A great part of the tax-money does nothing to encourage industry—some of it is actually used for projects and experiments which discourage and throttle private initiative, retarding employment, not a spur, to purchasing power. It stands in the way of investment, industrial expansion, farm and home ownership. It is creating a vast, wasteful and inefficient bureaucracy which waxes fat while the public which supports it starves.

Industrial recovery and employment are inextricably bound up with the tax problem. Until government retrenches, all our efforts to go forward will be largely futile.

A GREAT BUILDER

"Life insurance is always building, never tearing down; it constructs and conserves but never destroys," said James G. Callahan of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, recently. "It stabilizes business, encourages enterprise, stimulates progress, sustains prosperity. It is the enemy of disease, poverty and fear; it develops character, trains in thrift and strengthens the virtues of love, loyalty and duty. The American home rests confidently and securely on the bedrock of life insurance."

In these days of change and general uncertainty, a constantly increasing number of people are turning to life insurance. They are using it not only to protect dependents, but to assure an income for themselves in old age, to educate their children, to build estates. During five years of depression they have learned many bitter but invaluable lessons. They have seen investments, which seemed iron-clad, shrink and disappear; they have witnessed business failures, and the utter collapse of great fortunes that once appeared to be impregnable. In that time life insurance has carried on its work without wavering—it has given the people a new realization of what the word "permanence" means.

Every insurance policy written symbolizes thrift, foresight, wisdom—characteristics that are typical of the American people. Every policy written means that a still another citizen has guarded himself against some potential exigency. Every policy written represents another stone in the bulwark we are erecting against occurrence of future depressions. It is no exaggeration to say that American ideals and the institutions of life insurance are inseparably linked together.

ORGANIZED LABOR PLANS

NEW DRIVE ON CONGRESS

Washington.—The high command of the American Federation of Labor is supporting a nationwide series of strikes with one hand and with the other is drafting bills and a campaign in Congress intended to give to organized labor complete domination over American industry, business and agriculture.

Writing in the current issue of the American Federationist, William Green, president of the A. F. of L., makes a strong appeal for "the support of all wage-earners," and gives a hint of the Federation's ambitions in the statement that:

"The last four years of depression together with the fact that all efforts at recovery have left us with an army of ten millions without regular work, have convinced labor that we faced the need of managing industry and government in the interests of common good and welfare instead of permitting a few under the plan of individual initiative to exploit all of us for their own benefit."

That is the goal of the highly-paid executives of organized labor. "Managing industry and government" is their insatiable desire, and they can accomplish their purpose if they can drive the original Wagner Labor bill through Congress so that all employers—industrial, business and agricultural—will be compelled to permit them to organize workers and collect unlimited union dues.

Organized labor's immediate objective is to dislodge Recovery Administrator Johnson because of his denunciation of the textile strike. Right now, the union executives fear that Johnson may have spoken with the full approval of President Roosevelt. It is doubtful whether they will attempt to force their ultimate program upon the Administration if Johnson is not ousted. But if the Recovery chief is publicly rebuked or his resignation requested by the President, the A. F. L. will press for legislation that is intended to turn America into a "closed shop" and that would make supreme dictators of the union officials.

IMPROVED DEMAND FOR LEATHER AND SHOES IN ECUADOR

Continued revival in business conditions in Ecuador has resulted in improved sales of leather and footwear, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. The United States supplies approximately 90 per cent of all the patent leather imported by Ecuador, 40 per cent of the calf and almost all of the side upper.

MAKE LABOR UNIONS LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE

It is for the Congress of the U. S. at its next session to make labor unions legally responsible for their acts, just as other bargaining groups are, John E. Edgerton, president of the Southern Industrial Council, declared today in a statement in which he said "there is not a good reason in the world why this should not be done."

Mr. Edgerton declared that such a measure would be the best preventative against "such spectacles of barbarism" as the present textile strike and the "one measure which I think probably would have virtue, without the excessive cost."

"Any group, of whatever class, that claims the right to bargain collectively, ought to be willing not to assume all of the obligations that go with such a right, but to put themselves in a position to be as legally and financially responsible for the carrying out of their end of a given agreement or contract as are the parties to the other side of the agreement," the council head declared.

Looking toward the enactment of such legislation by the next Congress, Mr. Edgerton is calling upon the constituency of the council he heads to bring his suggestions to the attention of their Senators and Congress and ask their support of such "remedial legislation."

His statement regarding the legal status of labor groups and the "inequality of responsibility and obligations" existing between them and employers follows:

"The textile strike is obviously a failure. It was fore-doomed to be a failure, for there was nothing in its proclaimed purposes and there has been nothing in its licentious conduct to commend it to the sanction of either common sense or moral propriety. Such enterprises always fail, because they should fail."

"But the country is thoroughly 'fed up' on such spectacles of barbarism, and the situation calls for the consideration of any measure which might have in it the virtue of a preventative without the cost of sound principles or of mere compromise with expediency. There is just one measure which I think probably would have that virtue, without the excessive cost. It is for the Congress of the United States at its next session to make labor unions legally responsible for their acts, just as other bargaining groups are. There isn't a good reason in the world why this should not be done. Any group, of whatever class, that claims the right to bargain collectively, ought to be willing not only to assume all of the obligations that go with such a right, but to put themselves in a position to be as legally and financially responsible for the carrying out of their end of a given agreement or contract as are the parties to the other side of the agreement. Not only that, but as an agency for bargaining they ought to be made as legally liable for their damages to the rights and property of others as their employers would be. Without such equality of responsibility and obligation, there cannot be in reason any system of collective bargaining that will be either right or practical, except that between individual employers and their own independently organized employees.

"It appears to have ceased to be a question now as to whether a thing is right or wrong. It is rather a question of whether men have the courage to do the right thing. There will not be in the next Congress of the United States a member who will not have enough intelligence and sense of right to know that labor, whether organized, or not, has not more right to form a mob and destroy life and property than has anybody else. Nor will there be one who will not know that the American Federation of Labor has demonstrated itself unmistakably to be a lawless organization, and one that has little respect for the rights of others. If, therefore, the next Congress, has as much courage as sense, it will stop this business of codding that aristocracy of labor by enacting some such legislation as will reduce it to the level of the common citizenship of this country. When the powers of Government once let these communistic elements know that they have got to subject themselves to the same laws and other requirements of civilization as all other citizens have to respect, then most of these vexatious problems will be solved. The Governors of North and South Carolina and of Georgia have given a practical demonstration of what law enforcement can do when courageously applied. There is not enough mob sentiment in this country to stand against public authority in any community or state, when it has a sufficient sense of its public duty.

"There is nothing novel in the suggestions I have herein made. They are as old as our nation is. I am making them now only because it appears to be the propitious moment for their adoption. The so-called 'labor question' is not for the employers to solve. It is not a conflict between Capital and Labor that is hurting. It is a conflict primarily between law and order, between crime and civilization. Let there be equal laws honestly enforced, to protect alike the right to work and the right not to work, as well as the right of the property owner and those with no property. With such guarantees the employers in America and their honest employees can, and will, solve their own problems.

"I am therefore calling upon the constituency of the Southern States Industrial Council, in their respective states and Congressional districts, to bring these suggestions to the attention of their Senators and Congressmen and others who aspire to these positions, with the view of bringing about in the next session of Congress such remedial legislation as will accomplish the objectives referred to. Any man who does not believe in the principle of 'equal and exact justice to all and special privileges to none,' and who has not the courage to work and vote for the application of that principle whether it offends either the man in overalls or in a silk shirt, has no moral right to be in the Congress of the United States, whether he be Democrat or Republican. Now is a particularly good time to find out how candidates stand on these elemental principles, and whether or not there is anything in their records to justify the faith that they have enough courage to do what they know is right. The helpfulness of the service which the next Congress of the United States will perform is going to depend more upon its backbone than upon its brain."

Denver Sergeant and H. Hensley, Harlan county farmers, cut four tons of Korean lespedeza hay per acre.

"THE STATE HIGHWAY PATROL"

Ernest Thompson, Chief of Police in Lexington, said recently: "I regard the creation of a state highway patrol as one of the most advanced steps that has been taken toward better law enforcement in Kentucky in recent years." Chief Thompson made the statement at the time he was awarded a medal by the United States Flag Association for the most notable contribution to law enforcement.

The Lexington chief believes that a state highway patrol will provide increased protection for rural districts, will reduce traffic accidents and promote observance of law. The highway patrol, consisting of about 36 men, will soon be placed on duty under command of Adjutant General H. H. Denhardt. While it is a relatively small force it is anticipated that it will demonstrate its effectiveness and justify its creation.

State highway patrolmen are used in many states as an auxiliary law enforcement arm and have proved to be highly useful. Traffic accidents have been reduced in states where patrolmen are on duty. The value of stolen motor cars and other property recovered, together with fines collected from law violators has totalled in many states more than the cost of maintaining the patrol force. It is no new experiment upon which Kentucky is embarking in a modest way. It is a plan that has been extensively tried and proved of great value.

THE NEW FEDERAL JUDGE

Stanley Reed will be the new Federal Judge in this Eastern Kentucky district, filling the vacancy created by death of Judge Cochran. While appointment of Mr. Reed has long been regarded as a certainty, it was not until U. S. Senators Barkley and Logan made an announcement that they would recommend to President Roosevelt the designation of Mr. Reed for the judicial appointment, that his selection became a certainty.

It is with very genuine pleasure that we congratulate Judge Reed upon the distinction which is shortly to come to him. In various important legal positions he has demonstrated that he is one of the most able lawyers in the nation. As counsel for the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association he demonstrated such exceptional ability that he was later appointed by President Hoover as general counsel for the federal farm board. Shortly after inauguration of President Roosevelt Mr. Reed was appointed general counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in which post he has attracted national attention as a lawyer of unusual legal ability.

The brilliant background of legal attainments which feature the professional career of Judge Reed demonstrate beyond question his superior qualifications for the most important judicial appointment in Kentucky. The judgment of Senators Logan and Barkley in selecting a qualified man to be the federal bench Judge Reed will climax an exceptional career with distinguished public service.

POULTRY RAISERS TO DISCUSS IMPROVEMENT

The improvement of the poultry industry and making chickens a greater farm asset in Kentucky will be discussed at the 11th annual poultry field day meeting at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington October 10.

Poultry now is the third most important farm product in Kentucky, and is running neck to neck with dairying. Rapid strides have been made in recent years in improving the quality and quantity of poultry products.

Among the speakers at the meeting will be W. D. Termohlen, in charge of the poultry work of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and an authority on marketing poultry products. He will speak twice on the part of the AAA in improving the industry. D. D. Slade, Lexington, president of the International Baby Chick Association and chairman of the hatchery code coordinating committee, will explain the hatcheryman's part in the AAA.

Other speakers include Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry department at the Experiment Station, and Prof. D. G. Card, E. A. Baute, and W. M. Insko, Jr., of the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture.

A part of the day will be devoted to inspecting the Experiment Station poultry flock and hearing reports on the various experiments. Arrangements are being made to

FLORENCE P. T. A. REPORT

The Parents and Teachers Association of Florence, with its members under the leadership of our very worthy president, Mrs. Lewis Sullivan, has afforded many useful and social affairs throughout the year which will go down in our history.

Shortly after installation of our president and officers last May, there was a shower given on one of our members, whose misfortune was to have had home and furnishings destroyed by fire.

A social was given at the lawn of the Christian church which netted us $17.34. A self supporting lunch room which furnished good, wholesome meals is operated by the P. T. A. which also has cared for the undernourished children within the school for the last two years, numbering around 25 daily.

The early fall brought about a costume Halloween party for the school. Prizes were awarded the best costumes and games of all kinds were enjoyed. Lunch and refreshments were sold, enriching us by $37.50.

Then came our pound party, the P. T. A. presenting a very interesting musical program from home talent. The admission was one pound or can of food which was used as a means in helping toward our caring for those not so fortunate as others. Total proceeds were valued at $50.00.

Throughout the basket ball season the P. T. A. served lunches at all the games, from which they increased their funds $65.03.

In January of 1934, the P. T. A. presented a play, "The Womanless Wedding," under the direction of Miss Simpson, on a fifty-fifty plan the total receipts being $326.61, our part after all expenses being paid, totaling $135.00.

This spring an independent basket ball tournament was given in the county by our school, with lunches, candy, and soft drinks being served by P. T. A. workers, totaling $39.25 banked.

We also took up the White Seal work for crippled children to which we contributed to the state $42.38.

Our monthly meeting are a source of pleasure to our members. After the close of our business session, refreshments are served and a social hour is enjoyed by all. We also have a penny drill at each meeting, the money being placed in a fund, known as a sick committee fund, for the purpose of sending flowers and cards to P. T. A. members.

In April we sold magazine subscriptions which netted us $6.50.

During the hottest days of summer was Mrs. Ida Hunter's sale, where we served lunch and soft drinks which netted us $95.00. Soft drinks and lunches were served at the Barnes sale and we banked $15. We have told only of the money and how we made it, and not for what purpose it was used.

Before the close of the school of 1933, the P. T. A. purchased a new stage curtain at the cost of $250.00 to which we have met our obligation, notwithstanding the additional cost of paying the balance on the set of World Reference books for the library, as well as many other things for the purpose of making our school a better institution for our children for this is the desired achievement of the Florence P. T. A., to aid and serve the children of our school.

We also purchased a set of trap drums for our school orchestra which we now have and owe to one of our most faithful workers, our athletic coach and teacher Charles Allphin. They have in return for our interest and support developed a fine organization and have furnished entertainment for us at basket ball games and various occasions.

The P. T. A. of Florence is very grateful to their many loyal friends of the community and county, as well as their members for their cooperation in the past year, and to all, we, through our president extend thanks.

We members, and the president try to do our part to live up to our school slogan, which is: "The Best School in Boone County."

—Publicity Chairman.

CANADIAN GROWERS EXPECT 27c FOR TOBACCO

Indications point to a satisfactory price level for this year's Canadian tobacco crop, according to a report by the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. Tobacco acreage in the Dominion has been decreased from 25,000 acres last year to approximately 15,000,000 pounds compared with 22,000,000 pounds in 1933. Early difficulties caused by weather conditions in addition to the planned acreage reduction have materially contributed to the prospective reduced yield. It is believed locally, however, that prices will equal or exceed the 27 cents upon which growers and manufacturers had attempted to make an agreement, negotiations having collapsed because of the failure of two large manufacturing companies to agree to the agreement. The reported demand from the United Kingdom, causing the reduction in present stocks and the expected small yield will undoubtedly afford American exporters an opportunity to increase their shipments to the Canadian market.

KENTUCKY BOY ON NATIONAL PROGRAM

How Garrara county 4H club members sell approximately $10,000 worth of fat calves and quantities of tobacco and other products annually will be the subject of a talk by Robert Shearer, a club boy of that county, in the National Farm and Home Hour program October 6. His subject will be, "4-H Club Members Increase Profits through Marketing Home Products." He will speak in the National Broadcasting Company's studios in Chicago on the program broadcast from 12 to 12:30.

There has been some alarm over a possible food shortage, but results of the Malaya situation convinces the Republic there is a disastrous shortage on which to feed the phant.

Diagnosed His Own Case and Died as Predicted

Very few of us would go to any particular trouble to hear a sentence of death pronounced upon us, but that is exactly what a medical professor at Budapest did, says a writer in Pathfinder Magazine. Confronted with disquieting symptoms, including, a pain in the chest, he had his suspicions, but his colleagues would tell him nothing except that he was "all right."

Finally he wrote to a Vienna consultant, with whom he had corresponded but had never seen, telling him that he had a patient in whom he suspected cancer of the chest, and requested a verification of diagnosis.

Then getting on the train, he presented himself as that patient. The Vienna doctor looked him over, told him he was getting along nicely, and sent him home. Then he wrote a letter to the Budapest professor, confirming his own diagnosis and saying the "patient" had but two weeks to live. The professor, who had lived a very secluded life, withdrew his savings and made whomever the rest of his life, which lasted only a few days over the allotted two weeks.

Independent, Personally Conducted Trips Abroad

There is a difference between the independent and the personally conducted trip abroad. A conducted tour is one arranged in advance by a tour company, with a set itinerary and the traveler is under the guidance of a tour manager who attends to all details, such as transfer of baggage, hotel reservations, sightseeing, etc., thus saving the traveler every possible inconvenience. For a person who has previously been to Europe, the independent arrangements are usually more satisfactory and arrangements are made by a tour company for steamship reservations and all hotel and sightseeing arrangements on the other side. The traveler is usually met at all stations and transferred to the hotel and coupons are issued for each excursion, hotel reservations, and he pays for all arrangements before he leaves the United States. The itinerary is elastic and can be changed en route, by dealing with the tourist company through whom arrangements were completed.

10,000 Copies the First Week

When "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was first printed in book form it sold 10,000 copies the first week and 300,000 in the first year. Half a million copies had been distributed in the United States alone in its first five years and it has been translated into more than a score of foreign languages and dialects. It is estimated that the entire sale of the book in the years since it was written have exceeded 12,000,000, about 7,000,000 of which never paid any royalties to the author, being sold in foreign countries before the establishment of international copyright law. The copyright, under the then existing statute, expired a few years previous to the author's death in the late eighties.

Queer Taxes

Many queer taxes have been imposed from time to time by chancellors who were at their wit's end for means of raising money. William Pitt levied 5s. on every clock or timepiece. As a result these became scarce, and "Act-of-Parliament Clocks" were exhibited by keepers of inns for the benefit of their patrons. During the Napoleonic wars a tax on hair powder caused the fashion for powdered wigs and heads to die out in England. Lord Randolph Churchill once proposed a tax on sporting cartridges, but the farmers threatened to let the country become overrun with rabbits, and the idea was dropped.—Montreal Herald.

The Santa Fe Trail

Don Pedro Vial, a Spaniard, explored the route of the Santa Fe trail. On horseback he pieced out the trail in 1798 and several other horsemen passed the dim markings before 1821, which was the year William Becknell made the first trip with a pack train. It was Becknell's report to congress that led to the council of 1825 when three federal commissioners met with the Osage Indians and made the treaty which gave the United States a right-of-way through the Indian lands forever, the Santa Fe trail.

Earthquake Frequency

Seismographs throughout the world record an average of twenty-five earthquakes every twenty-four hours, four teen of which are strong enough to be felt by a person standing over them. Those that occur on land and damage buildings take place on an average of one every eighty-two hours.—Collier's Weekly.

Madrid's Appetite Large

Residents of Madrid, Spain, consumed 78,580 tons of bread, 37,000 tons of vegetables and 190,000,000 eggs last year, according to statistics just published. More bread, potatoes and meat were eaten than in 1931, but the consumption of hams, game and canned foods decreased.

Have You Any Instincts?

Scientific study of 14,000 persons has revealed that they possessed a total of 5,759 instincts—natural propensities that did not come from either experience or instruction.—Collier's Weekly.

President Roosevelt meant exactly what he said when he told the engage in various experiments and that if these failed to restore prosperity he would try something else. Word comes through reliable channels that drastic renovation of the New Deal is being drafted by the President and his most intimate advisers. Those who are helping remodel the recovery craft include Professor Moley, Louis Howe, Bernard Baruch, and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. They are not divulging any "sailing" plans, as yet.

Among the reasons that may be cited as forcing early abandonment of some present experiments is the fact that NRA has collapsed. Whether General Johnson was the best man available for Recovery Administrator is not as important as the fact that he was getting action, maintaining the confidence of the public, and seeking to maintain the minimum of government supervision of industry necessary to protect the public welfare when the internal breakdown came. As usual in bureaucracy, personal jealousy caused the breakdown. Make no mistake about it—the Blue Eagle is "drifting down the river."

Much ballyhoo is being handed out about "reorganization," and about "the President's views," or "General Johnson's ideas," or "Mr. Richberg's desires," but Frank R. Kent, writing in the Baltimore Sun, probably described the situation most accurately when he said:

"The truth about NRA is that it is too sick to be cured. But the New Deal high command apparently would rather die than admit this. Ballyhooed to unmanageable proportions, it began to collapse six months ago, and is today in a very bad mess. Failed of its objectives, with its personnel shot to pieces; its more important men anxious to get from under, its policies lost in the shuffle, its prestige gone and its organization in a state of confusion, appears a wreck."

The question, "After the NRA—What?" comes to the front. It is known that Directors of the National Association of Manufacturers are assembling some valuable information for the purpose of giving a sound answer to this question. However, the Administration may continue to reject the views of successful business men in favor of further experiments advocated and directed by the "collegiate left wingers."

Straight dope from the inside says the New Deal lawyers have suddenly discovered that the Senate resolution authorizing the National Labor Relations Board, and the President's executive order setting up the Board, failed to give the Board any such authority as it pretended to exercise in the Houde Engineering Corporation case, now known as the "majority rule" decision. Some of those in the various "guessing schools" around Washington say this sudden discovery had something to do with the announcement that Chairman Gar-

My Commission expires January 11, 1936.

President Roosevelt meant exactly what he said when he told the engage in various experiments and that if these failed to restore prosperity he would try something else. Word comes through reliable channels that drastic renovation of the New Deal is being drafted by the President and his most intimate advisers. Those who are helping remodel the recovery craft include Professor Moley, Louis Howe, Bernard Baruch, and Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. They are not divulging any "sailing" plans, as yet.

Forty press agents and information directors are listed in executive departments and emergency agencies in an official bulletin just issued by the Government. These are heads of departments, in most instances. Many have from three to a dozen assistants, and at one time the NRA press agent had two the active head of the NRA press department, seeing the Blue Eagles feathers ripped by high-ranking sharpshooters who are aiming at Gen. Johnson, eased quietly out of the organization into private employment. He did a great job of publicizing the "grand old bird."

Business failures in the United States were fewer during the third week of September than in the same week in any year for the last 14 years, Dun and Bradstreet report a total usiness failures for the week were 174 as compared with 255 for the corresponding week in 1933, and a total of 420 in the third week of September 1932. This significant fact refutes the partisan piffle of the fault-finders who try to scare us into believing that our liberties have been taken from us. One still has the liberty to go "busted" if one neglects one's business. But improved economic conditions make business failures less frequent.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

"THE CROSS ROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 59

Established 1875

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY OCTOBER 11, 1934

NUMBER 38

NEW OWNER

FOR BOONE COUNTY RECORDER—E. A. SKILLMAN FORMER PRINCIPAL OF BURLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL IS PURCHASER—TO TAKE CHARGE MONDAY.

The present managers of this paper wish to announce that the Recorder has been purchased by E. A. Skillman, who will take active charge with the next issue. From our knowledge of Mr. Skillman and his intentions we do not hesitate to say that the Recorder will be placed on a permanent basis, that its future is secure, and that its influence will be widened to include all the service possible to the people of Boone county and vicinity.

Mr. Skillman is no stranger to Burlington and Boone county. He formerly lived here at which time he served as principal of the Boone County High School. He has many friends here now and desires to extend his acquaintance to all sections of the county as quickly as possible.

The managers who have had the Recorder under lease for the past five months feel that they have had the loyal support of the public. They are grateful for this support and wish to take the opportunity at this time to thank everyone for their patronage and support. Both members of the present management, Messrs. Kirkpatrick and Combs, will continue their connection with the paper under the new ownership.

FARMERS FAVOR

A-A-A CORN-HOG ADJUSTMENT CONTINUANCE FOR ANOTHER YEAR—MEETINGS HELD IN SIX COMMUNITIES OF THE COUNTY

The referendum taken the past week in Boone county on the two questions, submitted by the Agriculture Adjustment Administration to signers and eligible non-signers of Corn-Hog Contracts, showed a large majority in favor of the continuation of the A-A-A Contracts for 1935 and 1936. Meetings were held in six communities of the county to find the opinion of the people on these questions. Question No. 1—Do you favor an Adjustment Program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935. Forty-three votes were cast in the affirmative and five in the negative of the signers of the contracts and five yes and none no of the non-signers. On question No. 2—Do you favor a one-contract-per-acre-Adjustment Program dealing with grains and livestock to become effective in 1936. Forty-two of the signers voted yes and 15 no, and 3 non-signers voted yes and 2 no.

LOCAL BOY IS OUTSTANDING PLAYER IN COCA-COLA LEAGUE

In the Junior Coca-Cola Championship Series of 1934 at Crosley Field last Saturday, Leon Ryle, of Burlington was the outstanding player. In the first game against New Vienna he led off with a double, scoring two runs, and in the eighth he hit a triple, which won the game for his team. Mr. Ryle entered in the game in the seventh inning. He is regarded as the outstanding player in Northern Kentucky.

It was a great day for the youngsters—and a great day, too, for the mothers and dads and friends and fans everywhere. Mr. Ryle played with Covington.

SMALL PAPER

WILL BE PUBLISHED THIS WEEK AND NEXT DUE TO REPAIRS BEING MADE—BOTH PAPERS WILL BE PUBLISHED THIS WEEK.

It will be necessary for the Recorder to publish a small paper this issue and next owing to the fact that the building in which it is now located will be undergoing extensive repairs next week. It is the intention of the owner, Alfred Porter, to make the building more comfortable and presentable. There have been times when the building was not able to be heated properly, which interfered with the work. To correct this condition Mr. Porter expects to put in a new floor and to sheet-rock all the walls and ceiling. In addition, the hallway and the upstairs front room will be treated in the same manner. The office of the Recorder will be upstairs where business can be conducted away from the noise of the machinery. When finished, the Recorder will have as comfortable and nice appearing quarters as will be found in any small newspaper plant. We are informed that the work can be completed in one week and feel certain that it will not be necessary to miss one publication. We regret the necessity of making our paper smaller, but the repairs must be made and it is unavoidable.

We plan to print four pages for this issue on our regular press day and four pages for next week's issue on Saturday of this week, which will mean that our paper will have very little correspondence from over the county. This publication could be skipped if it were not for several Commissioner's sales which must appear during that week.

As soon as the necessary repairs are made our subscribers can be assured of an eight page paper each week.

STONE PILLAR

SECOND BLOOD

GOES TO PETERSBURG WHEN THEY WIN OVER BELLEVUE 6 TO 3—NEXT GAME TO BE PLAYED AT BELLEVUE SATURDAY.

This game of the Little World Series proved to be very much under expectation of the games fought out between these two clubs. Both teams had several errors, which of course, goes a long way to stimulate disinterest in a ball game. But every team seems to have its off-days and Petersburg and Bellevue must have had one at the same time and in the same game. Even the Cards pulled several boners last Saturday with both head and accuracy, so neither of these Little World Series teams need feel discouraged because the next game between them may be one of the best games either has ever put up.

Henry Deck and Jay Ryle started the twirling for Petersburg and Bellevue. Henry Deck easily finished his task, but Jay Ryle voluntarily stepped off the mound in the first inning when his arm started hurting to such an extent that he lost both speed and control. Bill Rogers then took the mound and allowed only five hits, but on account of errors behind him, they counted big.

Turning now from the pitchers' side of the game to the batters' side we have only one thing to write about and that is the exhibit of how the old apple ought to be hit in a ball game as displayed by "Hubie" Deck when he got two successive hits which counted for a three-bagger and a home run.

The next game will be played at Bellevue next Saturday, Oct. 13th. Two-base hits, W. Rogers, B. Bradburn; three-base hits, Amzen, B. Bradburn, L. Deck; home runs, L. Deck; base on balls off Deck, 2; off Rogers 1; struck out by Deck 7; by Rogers 10.

This information was mailed us by Col. R. G. Kinman who has charge of the Henderson, N. C. warehouses this season. Mr. Kinman also stated that prices were expected to even surpass this mark.

BROMLEY MAN

INJURED FATALLY LAST SATURDAY NIGHT WHEN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE—WAS WALKING ON SIDE OF ROAD AND STEPPED IN FRONT OF CAR

Emidic Marra, 51 years old, barber, 109 Pleasant Street, Bromley was injured fatally last Saturday night when he was struck by an automobile driven by John Williams, 48, proprietor of the Fairview Night Club. Mr. Williams removed Marra to the St. Elizabeth Hospital where he died a few hours later, suffering from internal injuries and a fractured skull. Papers found on Marra showed he was born in Italy and became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1922 at Camden, N. J. The papers showed that he had a wife Fannie Marra and six children of which no trace could be found.

Mr. Williams told police that Marra was walking by the side of the road when suddenly he ran across the road into the path of his car.

Chief George Langley cited Williams to appear in Kenton county court on a charge of reckless driving. It was said later to have been changed to a charge of manslaughter.

Dr. James P. Riffe, Kenton county Coroner, is investigating.

The bridal party was met at the altar by Rev. W. F. Dunaway, brother-in-law of the bride, who performed the ceremony in a most impressive manner.

This was the first marriage ceremony in this church.

A CORRECTION

In last week's issue of The Recorder in the obituary of Mrs. Alice Tanner Utz, several errors were made, due to the typesetter. We take this means of correcting these errors.

Obituary

Mrs. Alice Tanner Utz, passed to her eternal reward September 18, 1934 at Florence, Ky. The funeral service at the home Thursday afternoon was conducted by her pastor, Rev. Roy Johnson, and attended by many friends, of life-long standing, who gathered to show their high esteem of this good woman, and to add any last loving service to her devoted family.

Wonderful fortitude and patience was exhibited by Mrs. Utz during her illness. There was no complaining at her lot and when she knew the end must be, she quietly rested in Him, whom she loved and whose face she now beholds.

Although more than three score years and ten, she was near old—the changes the years wrought, left her fresh in spirit.

She loved her home, her dear ones, her greatest concern was the care of her children, her greatest delight was in training them for usefulness and service, and they rise up and call her blessed. Loyalty to friends was a notable trait in her character. She is not dead, she's just away. With a cherry smile and a wave of her hand, She has wandered into an unknown land And left us dreaming how very it needs must be, Since she lingers there.

EMERGENCY EDUCATION IN KENTUCKY

In many parts of Kentucky at the present time classes are being organized in various educational projects for adults. Boone county has been allotted two teachers for such work if there is a demand for such classes. The Federal Government will approve classes in most any subject in which people would be interested. The following are some of the classes listed: Reading, language, arithmetic, business practice, Health and Sanitation, Homemaking, Agriculture in its various phases, music including community singing, History and Government, in fact classes would be approved in most any subject that as many as 20 people are interested in. Any individual or group interested in this work should communicate with me and I will have the District Supervisor, T. W. Skinner to meet with us and help map out such work as may be desired.

D. H. Norris, Supt. of Schools.

This boy is going to be Near-Sighted

THE above picture illustrates one of the very common causes of nearsightedness... one of the reasons why twenty children in every one hundred have defective vision today. What is happening in this picture may be happening in your own home... damaging the eyes of your children. The boy is reading in poor light... and in order to see the printed words without effort, he has brought his eyes much too close to the book. Constant reading in this position will eventually cause near-sightedness.

If your boy holds a book less than 14 inches from his eyes, he needs more light, or glasses, or perhaps both. Remedy the lighting in your home by providing each member of the family with his own reading lamp... equipped with at least one 100-watt lamp, two 60's or three 40's, according to the number of sockets. Then see that these lamps are properly shaded to eliminate glare or shadows. We will gladly help you correct the lighting in your home. Phone today for an appointment.

Ten Million People HELPED BUILD THIS TIRE!

The NEW Firestone CENTURY PROGRESS TIRE

EQUAL OR SUPERIOR to ANY First Quality Tire BUILT REGARDLESS OF NAME, BRAND, BY WHOM MANUFACTURED or AT WHAT PRICE OFFERED FOR SALE.

THE TIRE SENSATION OF '34

Sells on Sight!

TO SEE it is to buy it! That's the way extra value stands out in the new Firestone Century Progress Tire. We found out what car owners wanted most in a tire—then we gave it to them. Out of more than ten million visitors to the Firestone Factory at the World's Fair last year, we obtained this opinion: "Give us Blowout Protection, Non-Skid Safety, and Long Wear, at a Moderate Price."

That was a large order, and the price part of it was our biggest problem. We said to ourselves: "Surely, if millions of people could get the tire they wanted, they would BUY!" We could see volume production... resulting in unbelievably low prices—and savings for millions of car owners who wanted the safety, long wear, and dependability of a first quality tire, at a price that would permit them to replace not only one tire but all four tires.

So we built the greatest tire ever made to sell at these low prices. Then the wave of buying started—car owners from Coast to Coast bought—not just one or two tires—but complete sets!

Go to the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store in your community TODAY! See the new Firestone Century Progress Tire—just look at the broad, husky shoulders, massive flat tread, deep-cut non-skid and Gum-Dipped cords. Did you ever see so much tire for so little money? No wonder it's the Tire Sensation of '34 and Sells on Sight! Why not equip your car with a complete set—while prices are still at today's low level. And remember, you get the new Firestone Triple Guarantee

FORMER RESIDENT

OF BOONE COUNTY HONORED LAST TUESDAY NIGHT—JOHN URI LLOYD GIVEN INTERNATIONAL AWARD BY PHILADELPHIA COLLEGE.

The first Procter International Award given by the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science, and so named in memory of a former member of the faculty of that institution, was presented to Cincinnati's distinguished scientist, Prof. John Uri Lloyd, at a dinner in his honor in Philadelphia, Tuesday night. The Philadelphia institution is the oldest pharmaceutical college in the United States.

The Procter International Award in the form of a watch suitably engraved on the back, would be presented annually, it was announced. "In recognition of distinguished services rendered by those who have contributed to the advancement of the health of the world." It would not be limited to pharmacy, it was said, because the college had been expanding its program to include all sciences relating to health with the exception of medicine and dentistry.

The award is one of many which Prof. Lloyd, president of Lloyd Brothers Pharmacists, Inc., Court and Plum streets, has received in his long career as a scientist. He has been awarded honor medals by the American Pharmaceutical Association on four different occasions. For research work in colloidal chemistry he received the Remington honor medal in 1920.

In Other Fields

But not alone to the field of pharmacy have Prof. Lloyd's activities been confined. Several books which he has written have dealt with subjects other than pharmacy. Intensive investigation of dialects, superstitions, and folklore of Northern Kentucky, has held his interest for years. He has made special study of plant chemistry and phyto-chemistry as applied to medicines, alkaloids, glucosides, and proximate principles, precipitates in fluid extracts and phenomena of capillarity. He is a regular contributor to pharmaceutical journals. He is president of the Lloyd Library and Museum.

Presentation of the award to Prof. Lloyd was made after many months of inquiry into the activities of scientists who were working toward the betterment of health, and came as a surprise to the noted Cincinnati, it was said. Prof. Lloyd was accompanied to Philadelphia by his son, Dr. Thomas Lloyd, and his brother-in-law, John Rouse.

GIVES VIEWS ON

4-H CLUB WORK

"When boys and girls become interested in 4-H club work they educate themselves," The Herald-Post of Louisville quotes Eugene Culton, a Boyle county farmer, in an interview during the Kentucky State Fair.

A picture of Mr. Culton and two sons, with their two prize-winning calves, and an article written by James Speed were published. It quotes Mr. Culton as follows:

"My wife and I are enthusiastic about club work. Seems that when boys and girls get into it they proceed to educate themselves. The whole family's getting into it makes the family a sort of cooperative educational affair. And fortunately it is the plain type of education that everybody can take part in. My children's coming here to the State Fair, where they meet other youngsters from all over the state, has been worth while in their education. Education today is real stuff."

Owner of a good Jersey herd, Mr. Culton did not become interested in purebred stock until his children in a Jersey calf club bought some high-class cattle.

"We now can talk dairying pretty well in my family," he said. "All of us milk and know the game. Its mighty interesting how club work develops youngsters and makes them to think about getting somewhere in the world."

Quite a number of Congressional nominees, particularly Senators who are "over the top" because their nominations mean certain election have been slipping quietly in and out of the capital recently. They do not want to be interviewed by reporters—until they know what to say. This condition hints of another "rubber stamp" Congress.

FIVE REPUBLICANS REPLACE DEMOCRATS

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 1—With the recent discharge of five Democrats who were replaced with Republicans, the entire relief organization in Magoffin county is now in the hands of Republicans.

The last issue of The Salersville Independent published a news story under the headline "Local Relief Organization Now Frankly Republican." It is related that five Democrats were recently discharged and along with them went two independent Republicans. The thirteen individuals employed in the county relief office are all Republicans.

Magoffin county is in the congressional district in which Congressman A. J. May is a candidate for reelection. It is the home of H. H. Ramey, the Republican nominee for congress.

The first move to place the county relief administration in Magoffin entirely in the hands of Republicans came Aug. 23, when the man in charge of the county relief administration was discharged and replaced with a woman sent to Salersville from Louisville by state relief headquarters. On Sept. 22 all Democrats connected with the relief office were discharged and their places filled with Republicans. The two independent Republicans who were discharged are said to have been known as favorable to the candidacy of Congressman May.

Lawrence Brown, of Covington, spent Monday and Tuesday guest of G. C. Jarrell and family.

Quite a force of hands are at work on the Hebron-Linaburg road, clearing the right-of-way.

SEEDS OF SLAVERY

The warning sounded by a distinguished Democrat, James A. Reed, former United States Senator from Missouri, in his Constitution Day address by radio from Chicago, should cause American workers to ponder the dangers that lurk in laws and bureaucratic edicts that attempt to regulate hours of work.

Referring to NRA regulations that forbid employers to give more than 30 hours employment, he said these regulations in effect forbid labor to work more than 30 hours, and pointed out that the power to limit work implies a power to compel men to work many more hours.

"I warn the laborer that there is a two-edged sword which may cut into his own vitals and strike at the heart of his liberty," said Reed.

EUNIE B. WILLIS

HAS POSITION IN NORTH CAROLINA—WAS RED CROSS NURSE OF BOONE COUNTY FOR SEVERAL YEARS—WAS VERY POPULAR.

Miss Eunie Willis, Boone County Health Nurse, who has been at Oakdale, Tenn., for the past six months, spent last week at her home in Burlington, but left Monday for North Carolina, where she will do Red Cross work. She will go by way of Washington, D. C., where she will confer with the National Red Cross officials. Boone county suffers a severe loss in parting with Miss Willis who has demonstrated her great efficiency as health nurse of this county.

When the National Red Cross considered putting on a Nursing Service in Boone county, the local Red Cross personnel hesitated over the outcome of its acceptance, until the National Representative mentioned the fact that they hoped to obtain Eunie B. Willis for the position, whereupon Mrs. Mabel G. Sayre, one of the county chapter's most loyal supporters, exclaimed, "well, if you can secure the daughter of Tom Willis it will be a success, she can ride on her father's popularity until her own worth is established."

CHOOSE NURSERY

STOCK WITH CARE

When buying nursery stock the quality of the plants, the place where they were grown and the method of handling in preparation for selling, are the important considerations. It is not easy to look at a plant and tell if it harbors injurious insects or plant diseases. The only wise way to select plants is on the basis of reputation of the nurserymen growing them, or on the credentials of the representative selling them. Know that the plants have come from nurseries which have been inspected regularly.

The Nursery Inspection Act passed by the General Assembly in 1926 provides that every package of nursery stock sold in the state or given a common carrier in the state shall be accompanied by a certificate of inspection. This certificate is obtained by fulfilling the requirements of the Act, one of which is an inspection of the stock by an official inspector, and if the plants are found to be apparently free of injurious insects and plant diseases a fee of $5, provided by the law, is collected and a certificate issued. Also the Act provides that any agent of dealer or any person soliciting orders or delivering nursery stock shall carry with him a copy of his permit, issued at the Agricultural Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, to be shown prospective buyers or officials. This permit is obtained by filing credentials with the State Entomologist at the Experiment Station, which if acceptable, will indicate that such plants handled by him will come from inspected nurseries.

No person should buy nursery stock from any individual or agency without being sure of his reputation or seeing the permit issued by the State Entomologist. It is always good business to insist upon receiving an itemized receipt showing the name of the nursery and the size and quantity of plants delivered.

READ THE CONSTITUTION

It would be interesting to know how many Americans have read the Constitution of the United States, the document upon which the republic was built, since they passed out of school. The chances are that far less than ten per cent could honestly say that they have read it. They have seen a few quotations from it in articles and editorials; they know vaguely that its purpose is to guarantee liberty and opportunity for all, and to assure stable, representative government, and that about all they know.

There never was a time when a general study of the Constitution would be so valuable as now. Today it is being criticized, it is accused of the crime of antiquity, and those who would change it say it has outlived its usefulness. The result of these attacks on the Constitution are already reflected in legislation and in governmental procedure—liberties, rights, privileges, for which our ancestors fought and died, are endangered.

In other countries, similar constitutional guarantees have been thrown overboard—and the final result has been invariably dictatorship. It should be everlastingly kept in mind that the Constitution is the bulwark that stands between us and one "ism" or another.

Read the Constitution, paying especial attention to the sections which compose the Bill of Rights. Those sections reflect all that man has striven for through thousands of years of turmoil—the widest possible liberty, the right to live as an individual, dominated by none. If the Constitution is out-of-date, so is the cause of human freedom.

Work of putting a new roof on the County Infirmary is progressing nicely. W. R. Garnett, of Hebron, has the contract.

A series of meetings will be held with the local Baptist church, beginning October 21st—Pastor doing the preaching. Will have a song leader. Everybody welcome.

The work of giving the Bellevue and Burlington pike a coat of river gravel, is under way. The State Road Department has a digger at work at the gravel pit near Bellevue.

Charles A. Blanchard, efficient field man for the Mergenthaler Linotype Co., was a visitor in Burlington last Wednesday afternoon.

DRIVER CLEARED

IN FATAL ACCIDENT—MAN-SLAUGHTER CHARGE DISMISSED IN MARRA CASE—DEFENDANT CLAIMS MAN STEPPED IN FRONT OF CAR.

John Williams, River road Bromley, Ky., charged with manslaughter, was dismissed Thursday of last week when arraigned before Judge John B. Read, in the Kenton County Court.

An automobile driven by Williams struck and fatally injured Emedio Marra, Bromley barber, on the Pleasant Run pike, Bromley, October 5th.

Williams told the court that as he was driving along the road, Marra ran from one side of the road and stepped into the path of the automobile. The court held Williams blameless for the death of Marra.

Plummer Gulley, of the Gunpowder neighborhood, returned Tuesday from a visit of a few days with friends in Petersburg, Aurora and Cincinnati. Mr. Gulley consulted a Cincinnati eye specialist while on his visit. One of his eyes giving him considerable trouble lately.

LAFFOONS

TO GIVE BALL AND RECEPTION AT FRANKFORT NOVEMBER 2—BOONE BICENTENNIAL GROUP SPONSOR OF OBSERVANCE.

Governor and Mrs. Ruby Laffoon will give a reception and ball in Frankfort Nov. 1 in observance of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Daniel Boone, Kentucky pioneer, Harry B. Mackoy, northern Kentucky member of the Boone Bicentennial Commission, announced today.

The reception will be held in the Executive Mansion at 9 p. m. and the ball will be given in the rotunda and corridors of the state capitol from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m. Admission will be by tickets costing $1.00 a person.

One hundred tickets have been allotted to northern Kentucky, Mr. Mackoy said, and may be obtained from him, the Covington Chamber of Commerce or at other places to be designated. Proceeds will be used to defray expenses of the affair.

The social event on Boone's birthday anniversary is only part of the program planned by the Bicentennial Commission created by the 1934 Legislature. There will be 600,000 Boone half dollars minted and sold as souvenirs at $1 each, the profit being used to erect memorials at Blue Lick and at Boonesboro.

AGED FARMER

COMMITTS SUICIDE LAST THURSDAY MORNING AT 3:00—HAD BEEN IN FAILING HEALTH FOR SEVERAL MONTHS—DESPONDENCY BLAMED.

Edward Clegg, 75 years of age, died Thursday morning by his own hand, when he fired a bullet through his skull at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Clegg had been in bad health for several months. The cause of his act was attributed to despondency. He had lived with his son since the death of his wife fifteen years ago.

He was a resident of the Long Branch neighborhood, near Union, where he was held in high esteem by the citizens of that section. His passing will be mourned, not only by the immediate family, but by practically every citizen of Boone county. He was held in high esteem by everyone who knew him.

He was a member of the Hopeful Lutheran church and had taken active part in church work.

He is survived by one son, Lewis, three grandchildren, Mrs. Arnold Conley and Howard Cless.

Roy Ryle and son left Wednesday for Miami, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Aylor, of Florence, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Aylor, at their home on Woolper.

QUALITY PRODUCTS FEATURE ROBINSON HARVEST FESTIVAL

Exhibits of farm, home and school products that would do honor to any fair featured the ninth annual harvest festival at the Robinson Agricultural Experiment Station at Quicksand, Breathitt county.

The exhibits comprised large quantities of grains, forage crops, tobacco, potatoes, swine, poultry, vegetables and fruits, canned and baked foods, clothing and other textiles, and home and school products. The quality of the exhibits has improved steadily since the founding of this annual festival and fair.

Memorial services for the late E. O. Robinson, who was deeply interested in the welfare of the mountain people, and who gave the University of Kentucky the land upon which the Experiment Substation is located, featured the first day's program. Judge Edward C. O'Rear of Frankfort made the address.

The second day was devoted to 4-H club activities and was attended by several hundred 4-H club members and their parents. Each club reported on its activities, and outstanding individuals were accorded special honors.

Berea College and the Wootton, Hindman, Stuart Robinson and Highland schools cooperated in the festival and fair. Exhibits also were made by Home Place, which Mr. Robinson established as a demonstration farm, by the forestry service of the Experiment Substation and by the State Board of Health.

Music was furnished by the University of Kentucky band.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE ENROLLMENT INCREASES

The enrollment in the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky is now 287, or an increase of 43 per cent over last year. The Freshman class has an increase of more than 70 percent over a year ago. This growth in the number of students studying agriculture and home economics is interpreted by Dean Thomas P. Cooper as one of the encouraging signs of the times. "It shows that an abiding faith in agriculture holds," he declared. "The growth in the Freshman class is especially encouraging, and indicates that young men and women see increased opportunities in agriculture and home economics. The opportunities in these fields have steadily widened, and graduates are in demand."

"Agriculture and related industries offer unsurpassed inducements to young men and women willing to study and prepare themselves for greater service. The college's enrollment this year indicates that more ambitious young men and women are coming to realize this fact. There need be no fear for the future of agriculture so long as large numbers of young men and women give serious study to its problems."

HOW'S BUSINESS?

New York—Cigarette production continues strong, 9.2 per cent greater than the first eight months of 1933; the value of building contracts awarded during August was 13 per cent above August last year; steel operations climbed slightly during the last week; department store sales in metropolitan New York rose more than 7 per cent during the first half of September over the corresponding period last year.

These are some of the bright features of business. But on the "red" side of the ledger—

The New York Times Weekly Index showed a sharp general decline to a new low for recent months; Canada reported a heavy flow of American dollars into that country; exports of American cotton so far this season are more than 50 per cent behind a year ago; car loadings are disappointing at a time when seasonal improvement usually gets under way.

Vague and disturbing governmental policies continue to frighten investment capital. Recent addresses delivered by high officials of the Administration in which they asserted there is no intention of trying to destroy the profit motive in business have failed to offset the actions of other federal bureaucrats who are issuing more and more regulations that confuse, confound and alarm industry and commerce.

Ordinarily, a statement such as that made by Eugene R. Black, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board, when he said "everything is set for recovery" would have an encouraging influence upon security trading, but "pep" talk no longer interests Wall Street. It is conceded that Mr. Black was correct when he added, "All that is needed is a renewal of confidence or an exhibition and manifestation of courage."

The question business is eager to have answered is: When will the Administration provide this "renewal of confidence" by abandoning its policy of competing with and dictating to private industry?

THE PRESIDENT TALKS

In a brief radio address last night President Roosevelt discussed national problems with that clarity and sincerity which inspires confidence, creates the impression that the pilot of the ship of state knows where he is going, is moving steadily forward despite great difficulties.

Appeal of the President for an armistice in the conflict between capital and labor while the second phase of the NRA is being worked out should be heeded. Strikes retard the recovery processes, injure, not only employer and employees, but adversely affect the entire citizenship.

Those involved in disputes should realize that the President is endeavoring to be fair to all involved. They should realize that the public is growing impatient with those who decline to cooperate with the President in an endeavor to see that justice is done.

Gently, yet effectively, President Roosevelt chided those who have grown vociferously critical of the program of recovery. These fault-finders, emerging "from the storm cellars, have forgotten that 'there ever was a storm,' he said. He might have said that business and industry, sorely sick at the beginning of his administration, has recovered sufficiently as result of his restorative efforts to get on its feet. Some business captains have forgotten the physician that pulled them through the crisis and are loudly objecting to the treatment being administered in an effort to restore the convalescent to full vigor.

Facts refute the fault-finders. Progress made has been phenomenal. Business failures were fewer last month than in many years. Wholesale and retail trade continue to show decided gains. Bank credit is increasing as bank loans to business and industry continue to increase.

President Roosevelt's confident, yet kindly, appraisal and review of the situation had the effect of confirming the confidence of those who have not listened to the gloom spreaders. It may have made some of the fault-finders and hypercritical feel a bit ashamed of themselves.

Industrial spokesmen are not mining words nowadays. For instance, consider these remarks by David Clark, editor of the Southern Textile Bulletin: "Francis J. Gorman says that he has torn the NRA apart. He may have done so, but he has not yet established union domination in the place of the NRA. If codes can be amended by intimidation and violence, we have reached the ends of codes. If the NRA is gone, and with it the textile code, there are several possible paths, and one leads back to constitutional government."

DR. HOOVER PRESCRIBES A CURE

Ex-President Herbert Hoover has written a book in which he criticizes the plan being followed by the Roosevelt administration to relieve distress of the nation's needy and restore a prostrate country to prosperity.

Dr. Hoover advances a unique substitute for methods which he criticizes. "New inventions and new discoveries" are prescribed by him for economic ills of the nation. Marvellous, amazing, indeed. Wonder why no one had thought of it before. Too bad that when Dr. Hoover was president he did not think of this simple remedy.

After a prolonged rest at his California home, during which he cogitated over conditions brought upon the nation during his regime, the former president has done some inventing of his own. He has invented a brand new medicine for the depression. His proposed cure is "new inventions and new discoveries." Medicine being administered, and under which the sick patient has been remarkably improved, does not meet with approval of Dr. Hoover. So, belatedly, he comes forward with his own "Herb prescription."

Now all that remains to be done is to find some one to invent something new, make new discoveries. Of new things that can be manufactured and sold in such quantities as to put all the jobless to work. Then the depression will be over. Think the "Herb Doctor." And since he has shown such ingenuity in inventing a new Herb tonic which will restore the bloom of health to economic situation, drive out the depression germs, it would seem that Dr. Hoover is the very person needed to make the "new invention and new discovery" necessary for the recovery cure. Just wait patiently and prayerfully while Dr. Hoover does some more inventing, makes some more new discoveries.

AN INDUSTRIAL STATESMAN SPEAKS

Simply and briefly, Robert L. Lund, a St. Louis business man pictured recently one of the foundations of good government. He said:

"The fight for efficient and economical government must be a long and difficult one, against heavy odds, but it is a fight that must be made, because the beginnings of economic disaster lie in the unwise spending of public moneys."

Organized labor, seizing upon Administrator Johnson's resignation as an unqualified victory for unionism, is seeking to dominate whatever reorganization there is of NRA. That the trend is distinctly to the left is clearly evident. The goal is to get legislation along the line of the Wagner labor disputes bill and including farm labor, to place NRA under union domination, and to turn American industry into a closed shop for one minority group.

INDUSTRY PREPARING FOR UNIFIED ACTION

Washington—Two distinct moves made through the National Association of Manufacturers have convinced Washington observers that American industry will be a more potent factor in the polls in the future, and that the next Congress will find industrialists presenting a united front, speaking with one voice, on subjects involving "government and business."

With the statement that "the ballot box has become an integral part of business," the Manufacturers Association announced a 12-point questionnaire prepared for presentation to all candidates for Congress. Unlike the American Federation of Labor, which has put candidates "on the spot" by demanding signed "yes" or "no" answers to questions of whether they will vote for legislation favoring pet proposals of labor unions, the Association simply presented the questions involving public policy.

For instance, the first question asked by the N. A. M. was: "Do you believe Congress should resume its full legislative and deliberative powers?" and the second was: "Do you favor reducing Government control of the management of private business?" Other questions also involved broad, national policies.

At the same time the questionnaire was announced, the Association disclosed that its Committee on Future Relations of Government to Industry is drafting a definitive program reflecting the views of industrialists on present and future legislation. James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Company of New Haven, Conn., is chairman of the Committee, which includes 43 of the foremost manufacturers in America.

Mr. Hook said the Committee will hold a series of conferences and hearings in an effort to get the real viewpoint of industry on the NIRA. This will enable the National Association of Manufacturers to speak for industry in answering the question: "After NRA—What?"

LEGION HEAD PLACES NATION ABOVE POLITICS

Philadelphia—Defense of American principles was described by Edward A. Hayes, National Commander of the American Legion, in an address here as something above politics.

"Men who are of serious purpose will not be motivated by political considerations in their support of Constitutional principles," he said. "Neither will they be deterred from defending the Constitution because partisan politics seem to be involved. Upholding and defending the Constitution transcends politics. To be eligible to partisan membership one must first be an American citizen—if he would put his party above his country he is not worthy of the name American."

"The generality of language contained in the preamble to the Constitution has been the occasion for much divergence of opinion. But it seems that those who glibly assert the 'flexibility' of provisions, either forget or have never learned that the so-called Bill of Rights was added for the specific purpose, among others, of restricting the meaning of general terms."

MISSIONARY FROM CONGO SPEAK AT BULLITTVILLE

On Saturday afternoon, October 13th, at 2:30 (fast time) Mrs. Chas. P. Hedges, who returned to America after her husband's death and burial in Africa, more than a year ago, will speak at the Bullittsville Christian church. Mr. and Mrs. Hedges were on the mission field more than twenty years. Mrs. Hedges not only will give an address but also will bring curios. She is interesting and instructive. Come and hear her.

Just remember, those remarks come from deep in Democratic Dixieland.

A REPLY

Mr. Sidwell contends that the U. M. P. A. has been guilty of circulating propaganda to the effect that the K. I. O. is a dealers' organization because Mr. Dave Roberts, the young, brilliant and popular editor of the Clermont County Sun, Mr. Sidwell's home paper, said some place and sometime that it was.

Mr. Roberts, who evidently has been such a thorn in the flesh of the K. I. O. and Mr. Sidwell's futile attempt at domination in the milk industry, has never attended but one meeting in Cincinnati or elsewhere that I have attended. I know that he did not make the statement there. I do not know what he said at some other place and I do not care.

I am confident, however, that Mr. Roberts is well able to defend any statement that he may have made, either on the platform or through the medium of the public press, and would be delighted to meet Mr. Sidwell in joint debate at Clermont county.

Mr. Sidwell's home county, and discuss that mooted question, and also whether or not Mr. Sidwell is now and has been such a great benefactor to the milk producers as he claims to be in his two articles. I am sure that the milk producers of Clermont, Brown, Clinton, and Warren counties, Ohio would take advantage of the opportunity to get at the "real facts of the milk situation," and would be present at the discussion. They would be highly elated and edified at the clear, convincing and forcible refutation of the various assertions made by Mr. Sidwell in his recent articles.

It seems to me that the time is very opportune for such a discussion, because as Mr. Sidwell stated, it is "high time that the milk producers know the true facts about the milk situation." I am confident, however, that such a discussion will not take place because, as Mr. Sidwell says in his recent article, he is opposed to agitation. I don't blame him. If I were in his place, I would be.

W. H. RUCKER.

CHEMICAL EXPORTS NOW
AT HIGH LEVEL

United States imports and exports of chemicals and allied products have increased substantially since the beginning of 1934 due largely to increased activity in chemical consuming industries at home and to improved conditions in many foreign markets, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Department of Commerce. Exports of leading chemicals and allied products from the United States during the first eight months of the current year showed an increase of almost 25 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933. Devaluation of the dollar has aided materially in stimulating chemical exports, as in many instances it has resulted in diverting orders to the U. S. Fertilizer and fertilizer materials were outstanding among chemical imports during the eight months of this year, advancing 27 per cent.

The Liverpool market for American tobacco is showing greater improvement than a year ago.

Five tobacco factories in the Canary Islands are manufacturing about 10,000,000 cigars and 234,000,000 cigarettes every 3 months, most of which are sold to the Spanish Government Monopoly.

The tobacco crop of Southern Rhodesia, in South Africa, is going to be of higher quality this year, reports say, with substantial increase in poundage. Anticipating an extra large crop, the Tobacco Association is endeavoring to take steps to prevent a disastrous break in prices.

Over 4,000 acres of tobacco in tario, Canada, were recently killed by early frost. Over 1,500 acres were destroyed by hail in August.

United States furnished 66 per cent of all leaf tobacco imports of Norway during the first six months this year.

Costa Rica has raised its duty on leaf tobacco, and its local production is increasing steadily.

It is expected that this year's tobacco crop in Central Germany will be the best in years. In Thuringia, because of the long dry spell and following rains, leaves are unusually big and light in weight.

Brazilian oranges are finding an improving market in Europe.

Germany, the world's largest aspirin exporter, is finding its foreign trade constantly decreasing in this medicinal.

South Africa's lumber market is booming as a result of heavy building and construction schedules. Pitch pine is much in demand at the gold mines.

From a little brick workshop to plants over all the world is the forty-year history of Henry Ford.

The original shop in which the first Ford was built in 1895 has been set up in the Ford Exposition at a Century of Progress in Chicago.

And so has the "Ford World."

It is hard to say which attracts the larger World's Fair crowd, the modest first "factory" or the huge revolving globe that depicts the present world-wide Ford organization. Each exhibit always is thronged with sightseers.

Twenty foot in diameter, the Ford globe is said to be the largest in the world, though the smallest that could be made to show the extent of Ford Motor Company operations. All around the earth, across seven seas and six continents, Ford activities spread and they are identified on the 1200 square feet of the surface of the sphere.

Ford properties thickly dot the map of North America, and many are shown also in South America, Australia and Asia.

Next to the United States, Ford interests are heaviest and most numerous in Europe, from Istanbul to Copenhagen, from Bologna to Stockholm. All these Ford properties and more appear on the Ford world in bright paint by day and lighted by night.

The great globe revolves on its axis in a terraced basin of growing flowers in the "Court of the World" in the center of the vast rotunda of the main Ford building, which rises ten stories open to the sky.

AMERICAN RADIO SETS
POPULAR IN FRANCE

Approximately 40 per cent of the radio sets sold in France are of American make, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. French buyers feel that in an American set they are getting full value for their money and moreover, American radios are equipped with American tubes, which are by far the most popular in France.

Now is the time to plan water systems and other improvements for the farm home that can be installed during periods of slack work in winter. Write to the College at Lexington for plans and suggestions.

AN IMPORTANT
UTILITY DECISION

A short time ago the New York Public Service Commission laid down a decision to the effect that municipal power plants were not created for profit, and are not entitled to charge rates above the level necessary for breaking even on the operation of the plant.

Costs, the Commission continued, should include all operating expense, direct and indirect; allowance for uncollectable bills; actual and theoretical taxes; amortization and depreciation charges; provision for renewals, replacements and retirements, and allowances for use of municipal property and services, such as those of a book-keeping nature.

It would be a splendid thing if similar rulings were made in other states. Once that was done, the public could really have an opportunity of finding out precisely how successful these ventures are. At present, in most cases, costs that legitimately should be carried by the municipal plant, are paid for by the city government, and "trick" bookkeeping methods make it next to impossible to analyze the real financial status of a plant. In other cases, city governments have created so-called "taxless" towns, by charging excessive electric rates which produce sufficient profit to pay all municipal obligations. This makes the electric utility carry the entire burden of local governmental expense.

The New York Journal of Commerce, referring to the decision, observes that if municipal plants are forced to do business on the sound lines laid down by the Commission, they will hold out little inducement to small users of electricity who, under past conditions, have enjoyed the privilege of the public paying part of their electric bill through higher taxes to support a tax-exempt municipal plant. The decision may be of epochal importance in clarifying the problematical position of publicly owned utilities.

THE HIGHWAY—
THE CAR—THE DRIVER

When you take your car on streets or highways, three definite factors are involved. First, the road. Second the car. Third, the human element—yourself.

Practically every automobile accident can be traced to one of these three factors. And the third is infinitely the more important. Highway engineers have done their part to make driving safer—they have given us model highways, with scientifically constructed turns and the safest of surfaces. Automobile development in safer bodies, brakes, steering, lights and tires have been nothing short of sensational.

For every accident that can be blamed on the road or the automobile, a dozen can be blamed on the driver. It is an established fact that the bulk of accidents occur on good, straight highways in ordinary weather, and involve cars whose mechanical condition is adequate. Apparently, if a road and a car are produced which make it safe to drive ten miles an hour faster than in the past, a legion of drivers will at once start driving twenty miles faster—and the inevitable result is a mounting accident toll.

The present year is witnessing a tremendous increase in accidents over 1933—if the trend continues a new high in fatalities may be established. The cure is knowledge that tells you how to drive under all conditions, and a sense of the responsibility you owe to all who use the public highways. If every motorist would start an individual safety campaign of his own, the automobile accident record would go into a tailspin.

RAILROADS GIVE

In 1922 the average freight train consisted of 38 cars. In 1933 it consisted of 46 cars, a gain of 21 per cent.

In 1922 average freight train speed, counting stops, was 11.1 miles per hour. In 1933 it was 15.7 miles per hour, a rise of 41 per cent.

In 1922 loss and damage amounted to $1.11 for every car loaded with revenue freight. In 1933 this had been reduced to 52 cents, a drop of 53 per cent.

In 1922 each freight train, on the average, moved 7,479 tons of freight one mile each hour. In 1933 it moved 10,974 tons, an increase of 47 per cent.

It is easy to imagine what these improvements have meant to shippers of the country, to whom time is money. They have been saved millions of dollars by the decrease in spoilage, and lessening of time to carry produce from farm and factory to market. And the amazing thing is that the progress has been made during years in which railroads have been continually depressed. No industry has done more to discharge its public obligation—none has received so little consideration from the public it serves.

Today the people are awakening to the fact that the destiny of the railroads affects us all—that employment, purchasing power, taxation and similar great problems are intimately related to the railroad problem. When legislation is passed to give the railroads a fair chance to do business, the entire nation will feel the good effects.

EXILED GERMANS ARE BUSY IN HOLLAND

Industrial stimulation in the Netherlands resulting from the influx of immigrants from Germany is revealed in a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. Since April 1, 1933, a quarter of a million of such immigrants have established in the country approximately 100 industries employing more than five laborers each. The number of workers given employment as a consequence of these activities, including those indirectly affected as a consequence of the purchase of material for the new industries, is estimated at 4,500. The new industries include an important nickel factory and various metal products factories, especially for lamp manufacturing; also a factory producing electrical instruments for medical purposes and another making special measuring instruments. These industries are all new to the Netherlands.

Plowing in the fall for spring planting should not be done if it will result in washing during the winter and spring. Some soils will compact so that there is no advantage in fall plowing. Also there may be much loss of fertility from leaching.

BOONE SERIES

ENDS WHEN BELLEVUE WINS FOURTH GAME OVER PETERS- BURG BY SCORE OF NINE TO SEVEN—FOUR PITCHERS USED BY BELLEVUE.

The fourth game goes to Bellevue by defeating Petersburg, by score of 9 to 7. This ends the Little World Series as Bellevue took 3 out of 4 games with one game tied 4 to 4.

Bellevue had to use four pitchers in this last game. "Jay" Ryle started the game but was relieved by Bill Rogers in the 1st inning after Ryle had pitched to five men with four of them hitting safely and three runs in. Rogers showed plenty of stuff and retired the side to end the inning. Rogers handled Petersburg with ease but in the fourth inning the first man up grounded to John Walton at third and in making the throw to first hit Rogers in the head and put him out for the count of ten. But like "Dizzy Dean" he refused to stay out. Manager Hensley begged Rogers to leave the mound but he refused to leave him in any longer and removed him in the 4th inning for a runner after he had hit through Carver at third. Arnen pitched to the eighth inning. Two singles and one double in the 8th drove him from the mound. Morris relieved Arnen and finished the game without Petersburg scoring off him.

Bill Bradburn pitched for Petersburg and pitched a nice game, and might have won but for one bad inning. At the fifth inning the score stood 4 to 2 in Petersburg's favor. Arnen the first man up walked, Less Ryle, next man walked, Morris singled filling the bases, Bellevue pulled one of the prettiest squeeze plays you would see in any ball game. Bucky Rogers came up and had been hitting the ball hard previously. Petersburg was expecting him to hit, but Hensley singled "Bucky" to bunt and on the first ball pitched laid a perfect bunt down the first base line. Petersburg was so surprised that they threw the ball away and two runs crossed the plate with 2nd. Hensley was next man up, Morris going to third and "Bucky" he singled to right scoring Morris and "Bucky." That was all but it was enough for it put Bellevue in the lead 6 to 4. Bellevue got two more runs in the eighth when Leon Ryle and Less Ryle tripped. One run in the ninth.

Petersburg scored three runs in the 1st inning, 1 in the 4th, 1 in the 7th and 2 in the 8th. R. Bradburn led the hitting with single, fought series and all fans enjoyed double and a triple. It was a hard it, for both teams were fighting at all stages of the game, and you could not pick the winner until the last man was out. So we will look forward to some good base ball in Boone county next year.

RIFLE CLUB OF BOONE POST

NO. 4 TRY OUT NEW RANGE

J. P. Brothers, 99 score, 300 possible, 33 per cent.

TOBACCO GROWERS

Many Stockholders of the Northern District Warehousing Corporation seem to be in doubt as to my attitude in reference to the dissolution of the said Corporation, and a little explanation may be in order, permit me to say here that I am for the dissolution. I believe it to be for the best interest of the Stockholders that the officers of the Corporation be closed up, its properties be sold and the proceeds be distributed among the stockholders, and in order to do this it is absolutely necessary that the court have the consent of a majority of the stock outstanding as soon as possible. So when you receive your consent card, make it YES, sign your name and place it in the mail box now.

Remember that in doing this you will be helping in winding up what has proved to be a troublesome problem.

C. O. Hempling.

100 PERCENT CLUBS

IS GOAL FOR 1934

Boone County 4-H clubs are fighting hard this year to have as many 100 percent 4-H community clubs as possible according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. Special honors will go to the community clubs and project groups having 100 percent of their project work and project record books completed.

The banks of Boone county are offering special trophies to the clubs scoring highest in achievement and work. Due to the splendid work done, it is hard to pick the likely winners of the trophies at the present time. The final scores of each club will be checked and announced following the eighth and last community club meeting of the club year which will be held early in November.

MILLER—GRAHAM

Mr and Mrs. G. B. Miller announce the marriage of their daughter, Maud J. Miller to Mr. Maurice Graham, of Covington, Ky., which was solemnized at that place Friday, October 19th.

In connection with the victory of Boone county schools at Lexington last week, the following may be of interest.

Misses Melicent and Helen Berkshire, formerly of Burlington school, made straight A's for the first six weeks at Kentucky Female Orphan School at Midway, Ky., and were on honor roll for same. Only three girls of 200 in the institution gained this distinction and these sisters were of the three. Melicent, the elder, has made straight A's throughout her school life at Burlington. Those growers who did not sign contracts and do not receive exemptions will pay a 25 percent tax on all tobacco sold this year.

The County Control Committee will meet at Burlington on Monday to make allotments and consider applications for exemptions. The number of pounds to be allotted in the county is limited. ### AN APOLOGY

The present owner of the Recorder had anticipated making a few changes in the make-up of the paper and to include a few new features with this issue. However, in repairing the building the plant has been in a rather chaotic condition. We wished above all to get out this week's issue on time and we flatter ourselves that we have been able to do it at all. We expect everything to be running in smooth order by next week which will enable us to give more thought to the appearance and content of the paper.

WORD WAR

IS RUNNING FULL TILT— SPENCE AND NEWHALL PUT ON HECTIC CONTEST—SPENCE EXPECTED TO WIN BY BIG MARGIN.

Brent Spence, Democrat, Fort Thomas, Incumbent, and J. Lincoln Newhall, Covington, Republican, put in the greater part of last week hurling verbal prickbats at each other in their campaign for Representative to Congress, Fifth Kentucky District.

Newhall is attacking Spence defending his record in the lower house during the last four years. Spence has been campaigning in Kenton and Campbell counties. Newhall has conducted a speaking tour in more rural parts of the district, including Glencoe and LaGrange, Ky., with Judge Rodney G. Bryson, Kenton Circuit Court, as a running mate.

Judge Bryson is one of a group of potential candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor next year.

The congressional race is attracting considerable attention. Spence insists he is entitled to reelection because he has stood squarely behind President Roosevelt and the policies of the Administration.

Newhall Attacks New Deal

Newhall is attacking the New Deal and the NRA as unconstitutional procedure. He has declared that Spence has been inactive as the Fifth District Representative, having permitted other districts in the state to obtain far more appropriations of Federal funds than have been allotted to the Fifth.

Newhall would like to regain the seat in the House which he occupied in 1929 and 1930 as the result of having been swept into office in the Republican landslide in 1928. He believes he will receive the support not only of his friends but of many Democrats because of opposition to Spence in the Democratic party.

Political observers as a rule, do not agree with Newhall. The prevailing opinion is that Spence will be reelected by a big plurality.

The other candidate in the race is John J. Thobe, Socialist, who is an independent candidate. While Thobe says he is gaining strength, he will be a poor third in the contest if he runs true to form of several of his previous races. Thobe last week filed an expense account showing that he has spent $60 in the campaign.

Thobe started out as a candidate on the Socialist ticket, but he got into a squabble with Socialist leaders of the state, then weighed in as an Independent.

This project offers the dairymen the first opportunity he has ever had to get his herd checked from this disease and at the same time get paid for all animals that are affected or react. There are no charges for the testing work to those dairymen who agree to carry out the clean-up and Disease Eradication project.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

A great sea disaster is drama in the grand manner. Nothing printed on the stage or through the printed word, can approach it in tragedy, vividness, power. Good newsmen, reporting one of these rare events, seldom use flowery or over-dramatized writing—they present the simple facts, and that is enough.

In time the general public forgets a disaster. But the law does not. Many important regulations covering construction and operation of modern ships stem from disasters which taught lessons that could not be learned in any other way. According to the New York Times, which recently traced the influence of marine tragedies on marine law, every great maritime disaster of recent times has resulted in new protective legislation.

The first of the wrecks that started this trend was that of La Bourgogne, on July 4, 1898. Bound from New York to France with 725 passengers and crew, she collided with a sailing ship in a fog and sank in forty minutes. Only 163 were saved—and of these but one was a woman, though 300 were aboard. It was proven that the crew had failed its responsibility—had saved themselves at the expense of the passengers. The result was a tightening up of ship discipline throughout the world.

Then, in 1909, the Republic, carrying 461 passengers was rammed off Nantucket. Though both holds filled she kept afloat long enough to bring a rescue ship in response to an S. O. S. Every passenger was saved, and the necessity of radio was instantly realized—comparatively few ships were so equipped at the time. The result was laws making radio equipment mandatory, first on liners, then on freighters as well.

The next great disaster, April 14, 1912—one of the worst in marine history—was the Titanic, "marvel of the seas." Her bottom almost sliced off by a submerged iceberg, she went down in three hours, and 1,517 of the 2,340 persons aboard were lost. Out of that tragedy came the North Atlantic Ice Patrol which checks on the movement of ice and warns all ships when danger appears. There has not been a sinking due to ice since.

The sinking of the Lusitania by a U-boat resulted in an agreement between the five great naval powers not to attack merchantmen in time of war.

In 1929 came the Vestris disaster. Beset by storm, the ship listed until it sank with loss of 110 people. The inquiry developed that it had been overloaded, that its life-boats were in poor condition, and that there were innumerable other faults. It was said that the S. O. S. had been purposely delayed, because the Captain did not wish to force his company to pay salvage costs, and preferred to take a chance on making port. Consequences were a revised salvage law, and more stringent rules for inspecting ships.

The Morro Castle, latest of major disasters, will undoubtedly be of similar influence in strengthening maritime law. The inquiry on her sinking has not yet been completed, but already there are dark rumors of inefficiency, cowardice on the part of officers, callous disregard for dying passengers on the part of the crew, sabotage. However, the main points so far developed have to do with the liner's fire hazards—apparently she offered little resistance—once a blaze was well started. Legislation will be offered to the next Congress to Other nations will unquestionably lessen the fire risk on all ships. follow—effective marine law must be international in scope. It is safe to say that on the ships of the future, less wood and cloth will be used, and more metal and glass.

Thousands of lives have been lost needlessly in sea disasters—but it can be said that they have not been lost entirely in vain. Every catastrophe makes the operation of ship safer; every one lessens the chance of another disaster occurring.

Recent reports indicate that the long anticipated NRA reorganization will be effected in the near future. According to the Washington Post, which has a high batting average in announcing pending developments before official announcements, a policy-making board will be set up. Bernard Baruch and Raymond Moley will be among its members. General Johnson made his strike speech, which almost ruined the President's more tactful settlement plans, and implied that on legal matters he had the advice of Supreme Court Justice Brandeis. This was tantamount to saying that a judge of the highest tribunal in the land, who will eventually help decide the constitutionality of the new legislation, had a hand in its making. It is said that the Justice hit the roof, as did the President.

Another development of interest comes from the United States Chamber of Commerce, foremost representative of industry. It is seeking an overhaul of New Deal laws. One of its committees has made a report holding that existing emergency agencies with stupendous spending power are operating without proper financial supervision and recommends that measures be taken to give the President adequate power to directly control the spending.

YOUR DOLLAR'S WORTH

Take a dollar out of your pocket, it's yours—you can do anything you like with it. But you can't buy a dollar's worth of commodities or services.

The reason for that is that about 25 per cent of your dollar has to go to government. If you use it to buy theatre tickets, gasoline, cigarettes, electricity, clothing or anything else, 25 per cent of the cost, on the average, will represent taxes.

The main reason we have allowed the tax problem to grow so grave in this country is that millions of people haven't realized that such a problem exists! These are the people who pay no taxes directly. Their incomes are below the level touched by the income tax. They rent homes. They do not own a business, but work for someone else. And the result is a belief that those who own businesses have larger incomes, and possess property pay all the taxes.

There aren't enough large income people in the country to make a dent in meeting the cost of government. The great bulk of taxes are taken from the ordinary person—and they are taken indirectly. Instead of writing the tax-collector a check, most of our citizens pay their taxes unknowingly during the course of daily living. Rent is higher than it would be, because the landlord must pay taxes. Salaries are smaller, because the employer is heavily taxed. Food is more costly because the farmer, the processor, the transporter and the final seller are all taxed. So it goes, through everything we need and use.

Don't be fooled. Everyone pays taxes—everyone is in danger of being forced to pay more. A reduction in taxation through less tax spending is essential.

TEMPERANCE NEEDED

The eighteenth amendment came into existence because the American public believed that no step was too drastic to outlaw the evils that has disappeared in the liquor problem. Millions of thinking American citizens, who were not "dry" in the sense of believing it a crime to take a drink, had seen the powder of the saloon appear in politics, grading city and state government, and had watched entrenched interests successfully violate both the letter and spirit of the laws that the next step to control the sale of liquor.

The eighteenth amendment was repealed by this same thinking public when it became apparent that the evils existing before were magnified, rather than lessened. The ends of temperance were not served, the gangster came into his glory, and million-dollar bootleggers became as politically powerful as their legal predecessors had in the old days.

Today the American people want temperance. They want the liquor traffic to be adequately controlled. They will not again countenance any illicit alliance between government and liquor interests. We are passing through an experimental period—and if present laws are inadequate, other and harsher measures will be brought into play.

To promote temperance—which means the elimination of drunkenness and license—is the duty of every citizen. It is likewise the duty of those make and sell liquor—in addition, it is simply good business so far as they are concerned. The American people are not fanatical either for or against liquor per se. They are interested in eliminating abuses of the present as well as of the past, and they intend to succeed.

LIFE INSURANCE AND NATIONAL WEALTH

In 1850 the national wealth of the United States was about $7,000,000,000. Life insurance in force totaled $75,000,000—one percent of the wealth.

By 1900 the national wealth had risen to $38,000,000,000 and life insurance in force to $3,500,000,000—ten per cent of the nation's worth.

In 1929 the national wealth was between $320,000,000,000 and $350,000,000,000, while life insurance policies outstanding aggregated over $100,000,000,000—close to a third of the wealth.

This constant progression is indicative of the attitude of the American people toward life insurance. During the present century there has been great decentralization of wealth, which has given the average man more to spend. As the average income rose, a steadily ascending percentage of it was applied to life insurance. Late estimates indicate that 67 per cent of our people own life policies. It is an encouraging fact that the trend is toward the purchasing of policies of the investment type, which create estates and protect the head of a family as well as his dependents, rather than policies which mature only at the death of the wage earner.

Hard-headed observers forecast that life insurance is just on the verge of greatest expansion—and that even its fine record in the past will look small compare to that of the future. If that is true, there need be little worry over the ultimate economic welfare of the American people.

A NEW APPROACH TO THE RECOVERY PROGRAM

The past eighteen months have witnessed many daring plans with recovery as their goal. Not a few of these programs have been directed toward restriction of surpluses. In dramatic contrast to this method of solving problems of trade and livelihood is the plan of the newly formed Institute of American Fats and Oils under the leadership of C. O. Moser, for a great many years previously connected with the American Cotton Cooperative Association.

The new Institute, with ample evidence to show that the health of the nation is suffering from under consumption of fats, such as butter, margarine and shortening, will soon be launching an educational program designed to bring about more balanced dietary habits on the part of the people of the United States and thus afford an outlet for inexpensive edible oils for which there is now an inadequate market.

The basic promise of the new Institute seems very sound. It is based upon the finding of the United States Department of Agriculture that the average per capita consumption of table spread is only twenty pounds a year, whereas according to the government the per capita consumption should be 36 pounds of table spread in order to maintain normal health. Some authorities say it should be forty pounds. In addition the government through its Department of Agriculture recommends that enough other fats be included in the diet to bring up the total consumption for each person to fifty-one pounds.

Obviously, in the present instance, constructive effort to increase per capita consumption is in the interest of the public, since the very important matter of health is here involved, so that the problem takes on a different complexion, from that involving surpluses of commodities which may be dispensed with without injury to the individual.

There is a much larger potential market, according to Mr. Moser, for all types of edible fats, including butter, but he is now chiefly interested in placing within reach of the consumer a table and cooking fat which in all ways serves the same purposes as butter and at the same time is much cheaper.

This last consideration is of prime importance to more people today than in normal times and therefore seems worthy of widespread support. Moreover, in the making of this less expensive fat, known as oleomargarine or margarine, the new Institute has already brought about an important conversion from the use of imported oils to the use of oils grown in the continental United States. This reform alone cannot but prove highly beneficial to producers of cotton, peanut, soy bean and corn oils, and beef and hog products, resulting in the increased use of margarine for recognized dietary needs, and at the same time proving a boon to American producers.

garded in administration circles as the future hanw-book of the New Deal. Its arguments will figure largely in the coming congressional election.

What everybody wants to know is what the Secretary will have to say in this much-discussed book. Before the book is issued parts of it will appear in Collier's Weekly and from that source it is learned that the Secretary will express a political philosophy designed to mark the dividing line between liberal and conservative voters.

The chapters that are expected to attract even more attention than the Secretary's views on agriculture are those that deal with "government in business." In a plea to business men to view this question more open-mindedly the Secretary says: "Big business men of the United States who live in the great trading and financial centers like New York and Chicago are continually talking about the dangers of governmental interference with business. As a matter of fact, certain businesses has always been up to their necks in government. This is especially true of the central core of the banking business and of those businesses which from a world competitive point of view are so inefficient that they would die without tariff protection.

"If the full truth were ever known about the way governmental influence has been used by great corporations, public indignation would know no bounds. Nearly every President who has had anything to do with tariff revisions has been impressed by the way in which great businesses rally round in the hope of securing governmental favors through the tariff in order to help them promote monopolies. The legalized thievery of the tariff is probably working more harm to the people of the United States than all other forms of robbery put together.

"Those smaller men who sit at home attending quietly to their own business and who never come near Washington, either personally or through the secretary of their association, do not realize the extent to which our situation has always been one of private control of government."

In other words, Secretary Wallace concludes, since business is up to its ears in government, there's no reason why the government shouldn't be in the business picture, providing a constructive attitude is maintained and the good of the many is always kept in mind.

ANOTHER RACKET DOOMED

Like all comparatively young industries, radio seems to have been particularly subject to many forms of racketeering. Its spectacular rise in public favor and the profit-making possibilities it offered attracted many opportunists. But fortunately, the combined weight of enlightened public opinion and the responsible elements in the industry who were able to look ahead have forced most of these rackets out of existence.

One serious racket, however, has flourished from the beginning and grown to the point where it was a real menace to public confidence—the vacuum tube racket—in which unscrupulous persons hoodwinked the public by substituting used or worn out tubes in new cartons and sold them as new. But all rackets eventually encompass their own destruction by overreaching. Now, E. T. Cunningham, head of the largest tube organization in the world, announces the application of a powerful new weapon that means the end of the tube racket. His company has devised a non-refillable, sealed carton which makes it virtually impossible to substitute for the multi-tested, precision mechanism which the public has a right to expect. Other manufacturers have already begun to follow suit, and as the public learns to protect itself by insisting on this guarantee, the tube racket will inevitably become a thing of the past.

PEPPING UP THE PLUMBING

In making all these old homes look like new, one is inclined to believe that one of the first things to do is to throw out the old and obsolete plumbing and modernize the bathroom. At least the signs of progress ooked by the Government furnish pictures showing how these necessities may be provided for.

Two hundred forty Warren county Negro 4-H club members and adults attended cooperative outings last month.

A FIRE PREVENTION PROGRAM FOR THE INDIVIDUAL

During October, Fire Prevention Week will be observed again. Every householder should look forward to the Week, and determine to follow a fire prevention program of his own.

His first action should be to learn from fire marshals or other authorities, all he can about the menace of fire and ways to eliminate the more ordinary hazards. He should make a thorough inspection of his home, place of business and other property, beginning with the basement. There's a good chance he will discover old papers or other rubbish in places that offer a perpetual invitation to fire. It's possible that the furnace is out of repair—with winter coming on, a weakness in the heating system may lead to complete destruction of his home. And a million basements contain still another major hazard—improperly stored gasoline kerosene, inflammable cleaning and other liquids.

That done, the citizen isn't nearly through. How about wiring the lamp connections? Most of us, at one time or another, have done amateur work of this kind, and forgotten to have it replaced by an expert electrician. It would be a safe bet that there are thousands of switchboxes in which a penny is acting as a fuse, placed there "temporarily." One short circuit—and fire will result.

Finally, it is a rare attic which doesn't contain an accumulation of old clothes, old magazines, old furniture and old luggage—all ready to burn.

Look your property over. And in the future make the same inspection at regular intervals. It will minimize the chance of fire—and that means safety to life, and money in your pocket.

LIFE AND HOPE

Before the World War there had been more than a century of progress in the new nation—a century interrupted occasionally by panics and depressions and Wars. Through the cycles of change with their up-and-downs the final analysis showed tremendous period of progress. It may come again.

NEW HOMES

AND IMPROVEMENTS

The Federal Housing Administration offers plenty of financial help to the people in every section of the country who want to help themselves.

James A. Moffet, Housing Administrator, in a recent address under the auspices of the United States Building and Loan League, explained the purposes of the Federal Government to enlarge credit plans to enable property owners to enjoy housing improvements and pay for them in small monthly installments; and also to make it possible for more of our people to obtain credit to build new homes.

Commercial banks are enabled to enlarge their methods of credit under the new plan which provides them with a form of insurance under which the Government guarantees the banks against losses on long-time loans. The Administrator says:

"The basic principle embodied in the National Housing Act is that Government insurance is to take the place of the property security ordinarily demanded by financial institutions, thus reducing the cost of the lending operation to both the borrower and the lender.

Most of the expenses of title searches, abstracts, and numerous other fees will be avoided under the program.

Building and Loan Associations have generally accepted the plan, which is consistent with their long-established methods of doing business. The fact that the Government is backing these credits proves that the cooperating associations are on solid ground.

The Better Housing Program aims to supply every possible provision to aid property owners, who are urged to "recognize the importance of keeping their homes and business properties in an efficient operating condition." Communities everywhere are asked to get behind the program and by doing so "not only aid in this great program to restore normal activity in one of the most important branches of American industry," says the Administrator, but also "to put new life into practically every line of business in the U. S." He adds: "Furthermore, its success will assuredly bring profits to all our citizens, because whether or not he is the owner of home or business property, he is bound to benefit by the general stimulation of business that follows every great revival of building activity."

HOPE BABIES NEVER DO EQUAL TURKEYS

If babies grew at the rate turkeys grow, that bouncing baby boy would weigh 600 pounds when six months old, says Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, in a statement urging farmers to finish their birds well before selling time.

Turkeys gain at the rate of a pound for each two pounds of feed consumed during their first six months, and increase their birth weight about 115 to 120 times in that period.

A six months old turkey weighing 15 pounds has consumer about 60 pounds of feed which, at present prices, should not have cost more than $1.20, or 8 cents per pound of weight for the bird. This should result in a profit.

Turkeys need a balanced ration, says Prof. Martin. The natural sources of protein and mineral are not sufficient on the average farm. While they catch bugs and worms, they need either milk or meat scrap, in addition to grain and mash.

A good home-made mash is composed of equal parts of bran, shorts ground oats, ground corn and meat scrap and 1 percent of salt. Keep this mash in self-feeders before the birds, and in addition feed grain morning and evening, or in separate self-feeders.

Fatten turkeys on old corn, as new corn may cause indigestion. If it is impossible to keep them out of the cornfield, be sure their appetite for grain is satisfied before they are turned out in the morning.

Taylor county farmers are firing tobacco with coke and wood, to determine the better method.

Approximately 3,000 bushels of fruit were harvested from a McLean county orchard.

Lloyd Ellis, of Hylan county harvested 3 tons of soybean hay per acre.

NEW MATERIALS

ARE IMPORTANT

A great deal of the expense that formerly went into new homes is now being avoided by leading architects and contractors who arrange to use material like Celotex, which has all the beauty and most of the virtues of all other kinds of building materials in interiors.

There is a good deal of this to be found in the White House and other Government buildings in the National Capital. It is common in airplanes and in public buildings and halls where its popularity is increased by the fact that it deadens the unnecessary sounds and echos. Celotex was the pioneer in this class of fabricated building materials and it heads the list in use and popularity among the building trades.

PRINTER'S INK IS BEST

There is an interesting trend in the publicizing of hotels in our large cities. Gradually they are going back to the use of printers' ink, on a larger scale than heretofore.

Advertising in the newspapers of the cities in which the hotels are located is being supplemented by the use of national publications of various classes. At present many enterprising hotels are extending their advertising into cities and towns from which they have reason to expect returns upon their investment. Another innovation that has been gradually finding favor is found in thirty-two page hotel magazines.

This has been taking the place of the old style gossip sheets that were formerly put out by many metropolitan hotels. The new idea in these magazines is shown by the Hotel Montclair on Lexington Avenue in New York, which features many signed articles by prominent writers that relate to such matters as the attractions of the city, travel, fashions, amusements and other timely topics of interest. The Montclair stands out in the foreground as one of those new modern hotels in the new center of New York which has grown up above Forty-second Street.

You know, if you know your New York, that the city has been moving north for many years and the region that begins with the Grand and branches out to the East and Central and Pennsylvania Stations North, encompasses most of the principal hotels. It extends West and North around Rockefeller Center thus taking in the luxurious Park Avenue area and the choicest blocks along Fifth Avenue. Such is "the new smart center of New York," where every feature of modern life exists. In this surroundings there is comfort, safety and wonderful features of the great city for travelers and visitors of the metropolis, with moderate priced hotels among which the Montclair is a leader.

In the competitive field of the hotel business it has been proven beyond doubt that the best way to reach the public is by the use of printers' ink. This should be an increasing field for new business for publishers.

VICTORIES FOR THE FARMER

Few have suffered more from hard times than has the average farmer. In company with all other national groups, he has struggled bravely against what sometimes seemed impossible odds. He has faced the specter of absolute ruin, the destruction of savings and work of a life-time. Even nature took a hand against him, with the greatest drought in recent history.

It is to the farmer's great credit that he has never given up. Though discouraged and disheartened, he has not surrendered to the forces of despair. Instead, he has used every resource and maintained his faith in a better future.

The agricultural cooperatives are largely responsible for this attitude. They have never wavered in their intensive efforts to bring order out of chaos, recovery out of depression. They have been immune to political influences; farm relief efforts have been tried and discarded, but the co-ops remain. They are responsible to the farmer's desires and his will—he and his fellows control their activities. He has seen them making progress at times when only retrogression seemed possible, and when all the cards in the economic deck seemed stacked against him.

In many particulars, the agricultural outlook has greatly improved recently. Farm income will be higher than last year. Market conditions are generally better. The work of the co-ops has assured the average producer that he will get a larger share of the final selling price of his produce than in the past. In brief, the clouds are really lifting, and the farmer's future looks brighter for some time.

DISCIPLES OF ISAAC
WALTON SPENT $115,895.370
IN THE YEAR 1933

An estimated $115,295,370 was spent by the sport-fishermen of the United States during 1933, or an average of $12.14, for licenses, tackle, transportation, guides, boat hire, live bait, boots, oil, hotel accommodations, and lodgings, according to a report to the Louisville district office of the Commerce Department. Of this amount it is estimated that each fisherman contributed approximately 81c for tackle, rods, lines, reels, files, plugs, spinners, landing nets, baskets, sinkers, and the other equipment. About $6,775,370 was contributed by 4,858,178 disciples of Isaac Walton as fees for fishing licenses. Transportation, boat hire, guides, live bait, boots, etc., hotel accommodations and lodgings account for another large expenditure—conservatively estimated at $100,000,000, or $10.53 per annum per angler. Forty per cent of the sales volume in the fishing tackle industry is paid out in wages, and the pay-rolls of those serving the angler and sport-fisherman in the many different services amount to well over $46,000,000. According to reports throughout the country, fees received from the sale of fishing licenses and the sales volume of fishing tackle for the year 1934 will exceed the expenditure for these same items in 1933, and it is safe to assume that other expenditures of sport-fishermen will also be increased proportionately, it was stated.

THE FARM AND HOME
(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

It pays to keep pullets free from lice. Examine them closely now, and treat them with nicotine sulphate or sodium fluoride, if lice are found. Give nicotine tablets or put tobacco powder in the mash, if the birds are afflicted with round worms.

To be well dressed does not mean that one must be expensively dressed, notes Iris Davenport of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Good taste and extravagance are not synonymous. Gaudy clothes are never beautiful, smart nor economical.

It sometimes pays better to can chickens than it does to sell them. Properly handled, poultry can be preserved by canning and used as needed for a year or more. Write to the College of Agriculture, Lexington, for suggestions about canning meats.

HERE IS A GOOD ONE!

We now read that the Tennessee Valley Authority has sent the district chief electrical engineer to rector of its electric program and England to study the grid system of power transmission and distribution.

It is a matter of record that Sir Andrew Duncan, chairman of England's Central Electricity Board, came all the way from England to California for information to guide him in developing the English grid system, and during May 1929, spent an entire week studying the Pacific Gas and Electric Co.'s transmission and distribution system in California.

These Englishmen knew that this California company had pioneered in building an interconnected network to the highest point of efficiency.

It is common knowledge that the United States has been a pioneer and a leader in electrical development and that electrical engineers from all parts of the globe have come to this country to learn how to operate power projects.

Going to foreign countries, however, to study electric systems is in line with the general political program to socialize the electric industry in the United States along European lines of bureaucratic control and the destruction of private electric companies.

ATMOSPHERE ON TAP

A few years ago no one would have believed that it would ever be possible to keep selected atmosphere in storage. But air conditioners have furnished us this new wonder.

Air has always been nature's most abundant element, for centuries human beings did not learn how it could be cooled successfully and scientifically. When Woodrow Wilson was President he ordered the discontinuance of the old-style air-cooling system at the White House because it was too expensive. It consumed enough ice to run a Chicago packing house. That wasn't very many years ago.

But it is now possible, thanks to research and science that has developed the Frigidaire self-contained air conditioner to overcome the drawbacks that formerly made it impossible to obtain proper air conditioning results. The new purveyors of atmosphere are said to be fairly inexpensive. They cool, dehumidize, cleanse and circulate the air; automatically providing a condition delightfully comfortable, healthful and refreshing. They work so perfectly that all the disadvantages that the public complained about in improperly ventilated picture houses, are pleasantly missing. The problem of getting plenty of fresh air of exactly the right quality has been successfully solved—thank goodness for that forward step.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

It has been said that the education of a child involves two factors, namely:

(a) Securing his attendance at school.

(b) Providing the proper educational opportunities for him while in school.

The commonwealth feels that it is its duty to insist that every child receive an education that he may become an intelligent and law abiding citizen and be intellectually equipped to earn a livelihood for himself and those who may be dependent upon him. If the parent will not urge the child to take advantage of the free educational opportunities offered, it becomes the duty of the state to insist that the parent do his part, as a parent, to secure the education of the child. The parent who will allow his child to grow to manhood or womanhood without an education is doing him a greater wrong than when he physically maltreats him.

It is, therefore, that the child may receive his educational birthright and that a democratic government may assure itself of a citizenry sufficiently educated to appreciate and to be able to intelligently upon the responsibilities of citizenship that there are laws requiring school attendance.

Good attendance is essential to successful work in school. If the schools are to educate a child we must see not only that our child is enrolled but that he attends school regularly. School records will show that the child who is present during only a part of the term is frequently not promoted at the close of the school term. The cost of reeducating the child who has already been over the work is a very large item of expense to the school and parent besides the loss of many years of time to the child involved can not be reckoned.

We hope to prevent much of this loss both to the school, parent and child by improving attendance. With the help of every parent, teacher, and child we can get ahead much faster.

BURLINGTON P. T. A.

The P. T. A. social and kitchen shower was a huge success. The program which was sponsored by Miss Sarah Cropper was enjoyed by the audience; also the music and singing by Boyd Snow's band.

A fine lot of food and useful articles for the kitchen, were received and a fair sum of money from the pies and candy that was donated was realized. Also, there was a good number of new members added to our P. T. A. The drive is still on and we would like to have everyone join that is interested in helping the P. T. A. care for some of the little ones who need help.

The Kentucky Ramblers are having a musical program next Thursday evening, October 25. This is for the benefit of the Parent and Teachers' Association. All are invited to come out and enjoy the evening.

The P. T. A. wish to take this means of thanking those who donated candy, pies and other articles.

THE GARDEN

Fall Salvage, III

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Various emergency vegetable storage methods have been discussed in the past two weeks, as well as all-winter ways of keeping some of the warm crops through the winter. We come now to the matter of saving the cool crops for winter use. These are white potatoes, cabbage, beets, carrots and turnips. Also properly included are parsnips and salsify, but their storing may be dismissed by the mere mention that if the rows are properly located in the garden, they may remain there with no protection, except possibly a light mulch of tree leaves or straw to keep the ground from freezing too hard for harvesting to be done handsily.

Another group of cool vegetables embraces Chinese cabbage, winter radishes and celery. Celery requires special storing in trenches outside, or if the floor is earth, in the house cellar. The other two may be kept acceptably, although not for so long a time, in the same manner about to be suggested for the vegetables in the list that was given first.

To keep successfully the cool vegetables, a prime requisite is a temperature that stays between 35 and 45 degrees; 40 degrees, without fluctuation, is ideal. Equally important is a humid atmosphere, to prevent excessive wilting, and some means whereby fresh air may be introduced and stale air passed off. In fact, if ventilating is efficiently done, temperature may be measurably controlled and the humidity entirely. Proper ventilation is not difficult to install, keeping in mind that air behaves just like water. Stale, moist air given off by stored vegetables is light and will seek outlet at the highest point in the storage. As it escapes, cool fresh air flows in to replace it. Accordingly, a ventilating system for a vegetable storage structure consists of a vent in the ceiling and another at the floor line, both of them fitted with means for opening them in the degree desired. In winter weather both may be opened during the sunny hours to fill the structure with relatively warm air to carry over the night. On the other hand, in the fall or spring when the days are occasionally warm, the vents may be kept open during the night to store cool air for bridging over the day.

Storage structures may range from merely simple pits or mounds through temporary caves built in makeshift fashion, to outside cellars built of stone, hollow tile or concrete. No matter what its nature, however, the insulating material is earth. For example, in constructing a pit, the vegetables are covered with straw, and then with earth. In the temporary pole and plank cellar, it is the earth with which the storage is covered and mounded about that determines the efficiency of the storage. The same is true of more permanent cellars. If there are windows, as in the instances of above-ground cellars, they should be double. So should the doors, the inner door having an opening located at its bottom edge fitted with a shutter so that it may be opened to whatever extent one wishes. With the outer door open and the inner one closed except for the opening at its base, the intake ent is in operation. The exhaust is a stack set in the ceiling.

These are the general principles that govern the storage of the cool vegetables; next week details will be discussed. In the meantime, anyone who wishes may procure a copy of Extension Circular No. 266 "Vegetable Storage Structures," by making request to the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

CAUSES AND CURES

OF DEPRESSION

"Nobody in the world knows exactly what causes depressions, not even Senators or Army officers," says Neil Carothers, Professor of Economics at Lehigh University, in an article in the New York Herald-Tribune Magazine. "The economists, who do know quite a lot about depressions, admit that they cannot isolate the exact cause. They know that it is not the gold standard or the stock exchange or farm prices or the rich grinding the faces of the poor. In fact, they know there is no one cause but a combination.

"Depressions do not originate in non-capitalist countries such as India. Economic breakdowns in such countries are reactions to depressions in capitalist countries. Do not hastily conclude from this that capitalism is a failure. The non-capitalist countries have chronic misery and recurrent famines. The awful spectacle of children starving to death by thousands is to be seen only in China, which has not developed capitalism, and in Russia.

"Just as they hesitate to assign a specific cause for depression, so do the economists refrain from proposing a patent cure. They know that the one cure is that one remedy for all human ills—time.

"Trying to force recovery by statute is like standing up in a sailboat and blowing on the sails. The speed of the boat is determined by forces outside it."

It is natural that we should largely fall. Economic laws which are as old as organized government cannot long be circumvented—precisely as these laws make depressions, they eventually present us with the cure. No one conversant with the history of this country can believe that it will not pull itself out of the doldrums—but natural, not artificial, forces will deserve most of the credit when that is done.

A Henderson county homemaker used money received at the curb market to go to the Century of Progress Exposition.

AILING EYES were CRIPPLED LEGS

ONE child in every FIVE would need crutches

IT is an appalling fact that 20% of the children of school age—one child in five—suffer from defective vision. And this total mounts so rapidly that 40% of our young people are wearing glasses, or should be, at college age.

The new Science of Seeing shows that much of this eye trouble comes from one preventable cause—inadequate light. Here is a typical case—a child spends several hours a day studying or reading in poor light. Instinctively she forms the bad habit of holding the book too close to her eyes. Her eyes adjust themselves to this wrong reading distance—and she eventually becomes near-sighted.

If your child holds a book less than 14 inches from her eyes, there are two things you should do. First, have her eyes examined by a competent eye specialist. Second, check your reading lamps and see that lamp bulb sizes meet these scientifically correct standards: one 100-watt, two 60's or three 40's, according to the number of sockets.

We will gladly help you solve your lighting problems. There is no charge for this service.

WASHINGTON SNAP-SHOTS

Those who know state that President Roosevelt is worrying more than he has at any previous time since entering the White House. The time is approaching when past Administrations cannot be blamed for the economic plight of the Nation and the present Administration must stand or fall on its own record. This situation is believed to have contributed directly to the recent leanings of the President from experiments to sound tested steps toward recovery.

After eighteen months the Administration found the National debt raised above $27,000,000,000. It found many experiments had run their course under a fair trial. Still, estimates placed more persons on the relief rolls than ever before. Obviously the conclusion was that only business recovery and not reforms was the next step and with this in view there is every indication that the next few months will find the Administration and business working closer for recovery and opposing suicidal panaceas such as the thirty-hour week. There will be greater realization that business cannot operate in a strait-jacket and that what is good for a peanut industry is not suited to basic industries.

One trend stands out definitely and significantly. Professional labor union organizers have received two jarring uppers from the Administration's heavy fist since the current "reorganization" started.

First, the professional union group discarded Gen. Hugh Johnson (with his consent) and then drew Mr. S. Clay Williams as chairman of the Recovery Board. There was much backstage walling among the union officials when they discovered that the President had dealt Mr. Williams in the new Recovery Board hand. There is no evidence that the Board chairman intends to be unfair to unionism, but that is beside the point. The A. F. of L. didn't want him, but he is Board chairman, just the same.

Second, the Department of Justice declined to prosecute the Houde Engineering Corporation in the case involving the majority rule decision of the National Labor Relations Board. Most reliable information available is that Attorney General Cummings was in closer contact with the White House than he was with the NLRB before he announced his Department's action in the case. Predictions were made freely, and publicly, that the A. F. of L. would go after Mr. Cummings' scalp, but Mr. Cummings was remarkably calm in the face of these predictions.

These two are possible straws in the latest New Deal breeze.

AAA OFFICIALS PLACE FARM HOPE ON INDUSTRY

Washington.—Farmers must look to the recovery of industrial purchasing power for more aid than can be extended through the AAA during the next six months, it was conceded by Farm Administration officials in a public statement disclosing that "just about everything which can be done under powers of the adjustment act is being done by the AAA." This same official added that "since added benefits to farmers must come from increased purchasing power, the close interdependence of farmers and industrial workers is again demonstrated."

This is the first social recognition that has been taken of the extent to which farm income is dependent upon industrial recovery. While one federal bureau has been dealing out hundreds of millions of dollars to farmers, other bureaus have been throttling industry with a multitude of regulations and restrictions. It may be necessary to pull the bureaucratic pack off of industry's back before industry can regain its old stride and restore industrial purchasing power to city and farm alike.

GENERAL MOTORS DEFINES COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Washington.—Members of Congress who are eagerly watching every major development in the field of industrial labor relations are giving close study to the declaration of principles and policies adopted by the General Motors Corporation for the guidance of its employer-employee relations. There divisional managers in dealing with a possibility that the G. M. C. "labor creed" may enter prominently into the prospective Congressional revision of the National Industrial Recovery Act and its vexing Section 7 (a)—the collective bargaining provision.

The principles of collective bargaining is fully endorsed in the mutual "bill of rights" adopted by G. M. C. and issued over the signature of Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President, to the Corporation's 130,000 employees. This principle is defined in the formal statement as follows:

"Collective bargaining is to be understood as a method of intercommunication and negotiation between employees and management whose objective is the maintenance of harmonious and cooperative relations through mutual understanding and agreement with respect to terms and conditions of employment."

The instructions to divisional managers said: "Employees must be given entire freedom with respect to the selection and form and rules of their organization and their selection of representatives," and added that regulations forbidding coercion and solicitation of membership during working hours must be enforced impartially as "to both employee associations and outside labor organizations."

"It must be made clear that collective bargaining does not imply the assumption by the employee of a voice in those affairs of management which management, by its very nature, must ultimately decide upon its own responsibility," said the Corporation in discussing general principles. "It does not mean collective employer-employee management and must be limited to 'employer-employee relationships.'"

Regarding settlement of differences, General Motors said "Management is charged with responsibility for promoting and maintaining the best long-term interests of the business as a continuing institution. Therefore, while management should exhaust every means in endeavoring to settle all problems of employer-employee relationships which may arise, it cannot agree to submit to arbitration (which is a surrender by both sides to the authority of an outside agency) any point at issue where compromise might injure the long-term interests of the business and therefore, in turn, damage the mass of employees themselves."

WATERWORKS

SYSTEM TO BE INSTALLED AT FLORENCE IN NEAR FUTURE — WILL FURNISH EMPLOYMENT FOR SEVENTY-FIVE MEN — LOCAL MEN TO BE EMPLOYED

On June 6th, 1933, the Board of Trustees of the Town of Florence made the first step toward obtaining city water in the town. This was followed by a vote on the proposed project at the November election. In August 1934, the Boone Circuit Court declared the bonds of said town valid, and on September 5th, 1934, the town entered into an agreement with the U. S. Government through the Public Works Administration, whereby the town is to receive a grant of $6,000 and the United States is to buy the towns 4 per cent bonds in the amount of $16,000 making a total of $22,000 available for the project.

In addition to the convenience of City Water, the insurance rate in the town will now be cut more than 50 per cent, this will mean that the property owners will possibly save more in the 20 years which the bonds are to run than it will cost to construct the system.

The citizens of Florence certainly owe a vote of thanks to the Board of Trustees whose term expired January 1st, 1934, and to the present Board, Clerk and associates whose untiring effort has brought this forward step.

The contract for laying the mains was awarded the Mobile Construction Company. Approximately seventy-five men will be employed in this project, of which as many as possible will be employed from the town of Florence. No machinery will be used, only where same is absolutely necessary.

Paul Hesser was engineer of this project, and Chas. Riley took care of the legal side.

LOCAL QUINTET

BID FAIR TO ENJOY ANOTHER FALL SEASON—FOUR REGULARS WILL BE ON LINE-UP THIS YEAR—NEW COACH TO GUIDE LOCALS

Burlington's High School Bearcats bid fair to enjoy another successful basketball season.

Four of the regulars who brought the Boone countians some neat net play in 1933-34 are back and the powers that be in the county capital are looking forward to a big season.

Last year, under the direction of Coach Lamb, the team went to town and but for an early round game with Walton in the district tournament might have advanced much farther along the road to state honors.

This year a new coach will guide the destinies of the Bearcats, Coach Lamb having accepted the principalship of Morgan, Ky., Hi School. An all-around schedule that includes some of the best local talent has been arranged.

Erlanger and Florence, bitter rivals of the capital team, are down for December battles at the Bearcat floor. Other crack Boone county clubs are on the lists, as well as Campbell and Kenton quintets.

HELD UNDER $5,000 BOND

A. L. Halstead, 37 years old, Lower River Road, near Constance, Ky., charged with breaking, entering, and having stolen goods in his possession, was ordered held for grand jury investigation by Judge John B. Read, in Kenton County Court, Covington. His bond was placed at $5,000.

Halstead, entering a plea of not guilty, waived preliminary examination. He was arrested Wednesday night by Louis Vogt, Kenton County Sheriff, and Theodore Harding, deputy, when he mingled with a posse formed to hunt for a man who had broken into a home on Lower River Road.

Sheriff Vogt testified that Halstead attempted to throw him off the trail by telling him that he had seen the burglar escape in the opposite direction from that the searchers were following.

MILK WAR

DELAYED AGAIN — EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE GIVEN MORE TIME TO ATTEMPT TO SOLVE LOCAL PROBLEM — LITTLE PROGRESS HAS BEEN MADE

The Executive Committee working in an attempt to avert the threatened northern Ky. milk price war has been given additional time to find a solution to the problem, it was reported today.

The local firms which have issued an ultimatum threatening to cut prices to meet competition from smaller firms have agreed to delay their intended cut in prices at least for today and tomorrow, it was learned.

Today had been set as the deadline by the firms. In their ultimatum they stated that prices would be slashed unless several local dealers could be forced to bring their prices up to the agreed minimum.

So far the Executive Committee has made little progress toward solution of the problem, it was reported. Meetings of several special committees are slated for today and tomorrow in Covington.

CELEBRATION

TO BE HELD AT CARROLLTON NOVEMBER 12—CARROLLTON TO BE HOST TO FARMERS TROUBLOT BURLEY BELT—SPONSORED BY ASSOCIATED WAREHOUSEMEN

The return of better tobacco prices will be celebrated by the burley belt November twelfth at Carrollton, Kentucky, when that city will play host to farmers and tobacco men from throughout the burley-growing territory. A huge celebration has been planned for the day which will include a parade, free burgoos, shows, band concerts and dances, and speeches by nationally prominent tobacco manufacturers and buyers and by representatives of the national government who will explain the present set-up for growing and selling as formulated by the A. A. A.

These festivities are being staged by the Associated Warehousemen of Carrollton in cooperation with the Carrollton Junior Chamber of Commerce who are extending an invitation to every tobacco grower in this section to celebrate this day with them. This day, November 12, has been designated as Tobacco Day and it might well be termed Farmer's Day as the keys to Carrollton will be turned over to the grower—he will be honored guest and he is assured a hearty welcome and every cordiality from the citizens of the Carroll county seat.

Further indications for the best tobacco market in Carrollton's history were seen this week upon the return of R. M. Barker, prominent Carrollton citizen and largest independent tobacco buyer in the U. S. from an extended trip to the tobacco centers of the country. Mr. Barker announced that his commitments to purchase during the coming market will approximate ten million pounds, his largest quota in his many years of buying on Kentucky markets. He said: "I can use every pound of tobacco that will be brought to the Carrollton market, the other buyers will have to bid mighty high to get their share."

Mr. Barker will be among the speakers on Tobacco Day and every farmer will welcome his views on the prospects and conditions of the coming market as those of a man who in every instance has proved a true friend of the farmer.

The Tobacco Day celebration will commence at nine-thirty in the morning with a parade composed of bands, floats and decorated automobiles which will proceed through the principal streets of Carrollton to the mammoth warehouse where the chief festivities will be staged. Welcoming and introductory talks will be delivered at ten-thirty and at eleven o'clock will be served. Following the burgoos will be a band concert lasting until four. At four-thirty free picture shows will be exhibited at two Carrollton theatres.

Another band concert will be heard at seven o'clock, this time in the court house yard. The days activities will be completed by both new and old fashioned dances which will last until one in the morning. Everyone is urged to come early and stay late; there will be entertainment during every minute of the day and it will be entirely free.

BURGLAR CHASER

RUNS HIMSELF "IN" — CONSTANCE MAN ONE TOO MANY IN DASH—LOOT FOUND IN FLOOR OF CUPBOARD. LOOT AMOUNTED TO APPROXIMATELY $500.

Arthur Halstead's too great interest in pursuing a burglar attracted attention to himself and led to his arrest on burglary charges at Constance, Ky., late Wednesday.

Summoned to Constance, where frequent burglaries had been reported, Sheriff Vogt, of Kenton-co., and Theodore Harding, deputy found a farmer named Ferguson racing across a field in search of a thief who had stolen his bedclothing.

The three shortly were joined by Halstead, custodian of a Constance club, who said he had seen the burglar bolting down the road. A bunch led the officers to the clubhouse.

In the floor of a cupboard they found a hole through which Ferguson found his bed-clothing. The floor lifted on hinges and beneath it was discovered loot, including clothing, valued at $500. Ferguson claimed most of it.

Halstead was lodged in Kenton county jail.

TO ANNOUNCE 1935

CORN-HOG SIGN-UP

Adjustment Administration Says
New Contract Will Be Ready Soon

Following an approval of the corn-hog program, by farmers voting in the recent poll, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced that it will make public its plan about Nov. 1.

A statement by Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section, says in part: "The referendum results seem to indicate rather clearly that corn-hog producers want a follow-up program. In view of this indication, it has been decided to offer a definite plan as soon as the necessary provisions can be worked out. Such a plan probably will follow the general outline of the 1934 contract, involving control requirements and benefit payments with respect to corn and hogs....

"We are particularly interested in simplifying administrative procedure in order to eliminate unnecessary delays and to plug up holes that develop in working out the operations of this 1934 program."

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration's statement, released through the College of Agriculture at Lexington, says that "a new corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1934 contract is deemed advisable to prevent an excessive increase in corn acreage and production and in hog numbers over the next year or two."

VACCINATION NEEDED TO PREVENT DISEASE

Cholera and Blackleg Appear Among Livestock of Kentucky

Reports received at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington indicate that cholera and blackleg are more or less prevalent in Kentucky this fall.

Vaccination is needed to control both diseases, says Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology.

Cholera attacks hogs of all breeds and all ages. There is no cure for it. Many farmers have adopted vaccination as a regular practice, in order to keep their hogs free from this disease. They treat their pigs every year, preferably in the spring and fall months and directly after weaning. Farmers having untreated hogs at this time should have them vaccinated promptly, if they would avoid loss from cholera.

Blackleg attacks cattle between the ages of 6 months and two and one-half years, although it may occur in younger calves and older cattle. Like cholera in hogs, there is no cure for it.

The duration of immunity from vaccination is about 18 months. Therefore, if calves are vaccinated at the age of 6 months to a year, they usually require no further treatment. If vaccinated when they are under 6 months they may need another vaccination the following year.

It is the best policy to make a regular practice of vaccinating calves against blackleg, just as it is to treat pigs against cholera, declares Dr. Dimock.

NEED SPIRIT OF PIONEERS

The government has been pouring out relief funds for two years. There has been an emergency and it was imperative that relief be given millions of people. In this land of plenty no one should go hungry nor be cold for lack of clothes.

But the public relief has been abused, and it is high time that men and women for their own future welfare take stock of their situation. We do not want to have our people become improvident and shiftless dependents.

Relief workers report that it is difficult or even impossible to induce some persons who are asking for public relief to go to the exertion of planting a garden or canning vegetables or fruits. Men have been hired to grow community gardens, and women are to be paid for their services in canning the vegetables from these gardens. The canned goods will then be given to the people who are in need of food next winter. The garden and canning projects are commendable enterprises. There are families in the county where the mother in the household is ill and who has not the strength or the equipment with which to can the vegetables. She and her family must be given food that has been prepared for them.

But according to reports there are men and women who have the physical strength to plant and care for gardens and the produce from them who simply neglect to do so through shiftlessness. These people will have to be fed; they cannot be allowed to starve, but the brunt of public opinion should bear down heavily on them. It is disgraceful for a person to ask for public charity or to take feed and supplies from public relief agencies who does not actually need them.

The greatest recovery program that could be launched in this country would be to arouse the latent spark of pride in self-support. It is demoralizing to have thousands of people in this state maintained by public charity. We need more of the spirit of the pioneers.

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS

According to the law of this State and of most states, education is a state affair. The State divides its area into school districts, and provides that the school affairs of these districts be administered by directors or boards of education selected by the people to represent the people. These boards of education are created and regulated by law. They are under the law and are sworn to carry out the law and protect the law. The first duty of every school board is to know the law of its existence and to carry it out. The second duty is to defend it.

One of the theories upon which the State assumes responsibility for the education of its people is that if education were made a local or municipal function it would at once become exposed to the current taint of local politics and to every mismanagement that might prevail in such local communities. Education must be sacredly safeguarded as a totally separate function in order that the children may remain for all time the State's preferred creditors.

The business of running schools is an expert business. The business of a school board is not to run the schools, but to see that they are run. One of the most regrettable and pernicious spectacles in American life is to be seen in the non-technical interference in technical public business. The high-minded attitude of an efficient board of education is that of an intelligent board of directors toward its experts, and not that of employers toward employees.

The business of educating the youth of Kentucky is one of the State's very largest projects. In the nation there are only five industries which represent a capital investment more valuable than the physical equipment alone, that is, the buildings and properties of the schools. These five are agriculture, railroads, oil, electricity, and lumber.

In the nation more than a million teachers and tens of thousands of other employees, such as janitors, engineers, custodians and bus-drivers, are necessary to carry on this vast enterprise. Only in the fields of agriculture, textiles, railroads, and construction are more people employed.

The schools enroll more than 30,000,000 pupils, and their program touches the life of nearly every home.

This extensive program is carried on to promote both individual and national welfare. There are seven major objectives toward which the work of schools is directed:

1. Good health.
2. Mastery of the tools of learning, reading, writing, speech, and number.
3. Happier homes.
4. Vocational efficiency.
5. Good citizenship.
6. Proper use of leisure.
7. Character.

There is available some very definite data which show the extent to which these objectives are being realized. For example:

1. Between 1900 and 1928 life expectancy increased 18 per cent and the death rate per 1,000 inhabitants decreased 32 per cent.
2. Illiteracy dropped from 10.7 to 4.3 per cent between 1900 and 1930.

3. National wealth increased four-fold in the same period.
4. The index of the amount of output per worker stands at about 190 units as compared with 100 units in 1899.

5. The value added to raw materials by manufacture has increased six-fold in thirty years.
6. The per capita circulation of library books is twelve times as great as it was in 1876.

- Of course, other social agencies helped to bring about these conditions, but the schools deserve much credit for the unparalleled progress we have made.

This great educational program is directed by more than a half million school board members and trustees. The efficiency of a school board member is of primary importance. The trustees and board members have the future of the nation and the progress of the people as their responsibility.

The maintenance of the democratic aspect of public education is as much dependent upon the type, the intelligence, and the ability of school board members as it is upon the quality of instruction in the classroom. The capable and honest trustee renders the highest type of public service, but the inefficient board member not only hinders progress in his own community, but thereby impairs the whole program of his state and nation.

A school board is not merely a collection of individuals. It is a unit. Each member has ideas which he contributes, and he modifies his own opinions in the light of those expressed by his fellow-members. Therefore, at the close of deliberations each member may hold an opinion entirely different from that held by any member when the discussion began.

The relationship between the school board member and the public is implied by his relation to the board as a whole. The board should be ready to hear a representative, to receive a petition or resolution to hear an individual citizen, but a board member should not.

Board action implies discussion and deliberation; it implies agreement growing out of differences. But when differences arise, only policies or courses of action should ever be involved. A fellow board member is not to be condemned because of his opinion. It is the opinion, the policy, the course of action that is, perchance wrong. A policy may be rightly criticized and vigorously opposed; a fellow board member may not be. Every controversial issue should be thoroughly discussed before the board acts, but all differences should be purely impersonal.

The majority action of the board on a given issue should become the policy of the entire board until such time as the question is again raised for consideration. Only in the most exceptional cases, where dishonest or corrupt practice on the part of a majority of the board actually threatens the welfare of the district, is a board member justified in resisting board action. The board member's first duty is to the public, and, to be sure, he is obligated to carry to the public a complaint against corrupt action. Otherwise, he is obligated to support the action of the majority of the board. Teamwork is the first principle of board action. A member with the proper conception of his relation to the board will criticize neither the action of the board as a whole nor that of a fellow member.

He will present his views in board meeting and vote according to his best judgment; but if the majority vote is against him, he will lay aside personal opinions and co-operate with the majority in sustaining the policy of the board.

MAMMOTH CAVE SOON TO BE A NATIONAL PARK

Presentation to the federal government of 33,000 acres of land in the Mammoth Cave area for a national park marked culmination of efforts started by public-spirited citizens many years ago to secure for Kentucky a national play ground. It was a happy day for those under whose leadership the activity has been carried forward year after year, often in the face of disappointment and discouragement.

Before the area may officially become a national park it is necessary that 16,000 acres of additional land be added to the tract. Money is available with which to buy the needed land and acquisition will be completed as quickly as negotiations may be closed with owners.

Senator M. M. Logan, who was successful in securing a federal appropriation with which to complete buying the required acreage, said at the ceremonies held at the state capitol, that he considered the interest he had taken in the project "a more beneficial service" than anything he had done for the state.

Movement of the project has been hastened in recent years under the administration of Governor Laffoon, who has been deeply interested. The park has been operated as a state park in recent years. Mrs. Emma Guy Cromwell, director of state parks, and General Bailey P. Wooten have in official capacities contributed very largely toward hastening the day when the famous cavern is to become a unit in the national park system.

Those Kentuckians who, as organizers of the Mammoth Cave National Park Association, supplied the leadership, whose enthusiasm was sustained through the long years of effort to attain the goal now in sight, have earned the gratitude of a citizenship which will be materially benefited by having in their state a national park that will become a mecca for tourists whose numbers will increase from year to year.

Max Nahn, Bowling Green, Huston Quinn and Robert Ball, of Louisville, are among those who have as officials of the park association, sustained their enthusiasm, continued their endeavors for years to carry to a culmination this project which contains possibilities of being worth so much to Kentucky.

As a national park, publicized and developed by the federal park authorities, those familiar with its possibilities predict that in future years the tourists which will be attracted to the state by Mammoth Cave park will spend in Kentucky annually as much money as is received for the tobacco crop.

The entire state will benefit. Visitors who come to Kentucky to visit Mammoth Cave National Park will linger to visit other of the numerous points of historic interest and scenic beauty. It is as such resources, which exist in this state in abundance, are developed, that we shall enhance the economic stability and prosperity of our people.

Approximately 525 acres were seeded in alfalfa during the past two months in Montgomery county.

The salaries named are subject to a deduction of not to exceed 5 per cent during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, as a measure of economy, and also to a deduction of three and one-half per cent toward a retirement annuity.

All States except Iowa, Vermont, Virginia, Maryland, Rhode Island, and the District of Columbia have received less than their quota of appointments in the apportioned departmental service in Washington, D. C.

GOOD CHICKENS PAY WELL IN KENTUCKY

Sixty-six farmers cooperating with the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, in demonstrating good poultry raising, reported an average return of approximately $1.50 per bird over feed cost and miscellaneous expenses for the 10 months period of Nov. 1, 1933, to Sept. 1 this year. There were a total of 7,345 layers in the 66 flocks.

White Leghorns, averaged 155 eggs in the 10 months and returned $1.17 over feed cost and miscellaneous expenses. Rhode Island Reds averaged 146 eggs and a profit of $1.82; Barred Plymouth Rocks, 135 eggs and $1.60, and White Plymouth Rocks, 117 eggs and $1.63. Practically all of the eggs were sold at regular town store prices.

Delbert Leger of Whitley county sold 75 bushels of potatoes grown from 300 pounds of certified seed.

A Daviess county farmer cut 55 bales of Korean lespedeza from a 10-acre clay soil field.

Plans are being made for selling hatching eggs cooperatively among Monroe county farmers.

THE FARM AND HOME
(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Farmers are being urged to save sorghum cane seed. There was a scarcity of sorghum of all kinds this year, which may result in a seed shortage next year. Even farmers who grew sorghum for sirup making are urged to save seed.

Experiments indicate that one of the most efficient and cheapest poultry rations consists of nothing more than corn, skim milk and mineral. Limestone fulfills the demand for minerals, which means that many Kentucky farmers produce a good poultry ration on their farms.

It is best to wait until leaves have fallen before setting trees and shrubs. Many persons make the mistake of setting them too early in the fall. Nov. 15 to Dec. 10 is considered a good time in Kentucky.

Nov. 11-17 has been designated national honey week. Honey should be better known and more widely used, as it is the oldest and best of the many sweets. A predigested food, it is readily assimilated when taken into the system.

Tests made at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station show that manure gives the best results when applied to corn, in a corn, wheat and clover rotation. When applied on wheat, the increase in the corn yields was much less than when applied directly to corn.

Timely College of Agriculture extension circulars: Cherries in Kentucky; Home Storage Structures and Equipment; Soil Management; Killing, Cutting and Curing Pork; Korean Lespedeza; The Hydraulic Ram; Poultry Parasites and Sanitation; Producing Milk of Good Quality.

Unlawful to Cage Song Birds. In the United States it is unlawful to capture and cage any of the protected song bird species native to the country except with permission of the federal government and then for bird banding or scientific purposes only.

THREE WAYS TO GET RID OF EXCESS HOGS

Three alternatives are open to signers of corn-hog adjustment contracts who have hogs in excess of their allotment, says a statement from the state compliance office at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington.

Farmers may give excess pigs to relief organizations, do away with the pigs on the farm, or keep them and let $20 a head be deducted from their benefit payments.

Since hogs are not worth $20 a head, it is generally accepted that farmers will wish to dispose of them rather than to suffer the penalty.

Arrangements have been made by the Kentucky Emergency Relief Administration whereby county relief directors will be responsible for the handling of excess hogs. Farmers having excess pigs which they desire to give away for relief purposes should notify their county corn-hog allotment committee, which in turn will make arrangements with county relief directors to take them.

An excess of 5 per cent in the number of hogs over the allotment of any farmer is allowed to take care of death losses between now and December 1. On that date all excess hogs will be assessed $20 per head.

Elliott county farmers are showing increased interest in poultry raising, reports County Agt., Edgar Rice. Plans are being made to blood test flocks, and to sell eggs at a local hatchery. Four Kentucky type houses were built last month. It is believed that egg production can be increased almost fifty per cent.

Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, pretended to be a New Deal convert, but when decision day arrived he threw his support behind Reed, the Republican candidate for United States Senate, who has been the bitterest foe of the Roosevelt recovery program. Betrayal of Democrats by Republicans is so certain that it occasions no surprise.

MAKES STATEMENT ON KILLING HOGS FOR HOME EATING

Due to misunderstanding relative to the number of hogs which corn-hog contract signers may slaughter for home use, the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has issued the following statement from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration:

"The deduction for slaughter for consumption on the farm in 1934 shall not exceed the average deduction for 1932 and 1933. This refers only to hogs produced from 1934 litters. To allow the home slaughter of hogs from 1934 litters to exceed this average would in some cases permit producers to conceal violations of the hog provisions of the contract by slaughtering their 'excess' pigs for home consumption. This, of course, is not permitted. There is nothing in the contract, however, which prevents a producer from slaughtering for home consumption more hogs from his 1934 litters than the number which he slaughtered on the average from 1932-33 litters which were owned by him when farrowed, provided he reduces hogs produced for market from his 1934 litters by a number equal to the 'excess' slaughter. There is no limitation on the number of feeder pigs which the producer may slaughter for home consumption, and such feeder pigs slaughtered will not affect the number of hogs which may be produced under the contract for market from his 1934 litters. Hogs purchased before August 1 for breeding purposes only or for home consumption need not be considered as feeder pigs, if permitted market production is exceeded.

"For example, a producer's permitted production for market is 10 head and the average slaughter for home consumption from his 1932-33 litters is two head. If he raises 12 head from his 1934 litters he must slaughter two head in order to come within his permitted production, but he may slaughter five head if he so desires, provided hogs produced for market from his 1934 litters are reduced to 7. Suppose this producer raises only 8 head from his 1934 litters and purchases no feeder pigs. He therefore would be free to market all these hogs or to slaughter any number of them, since in either case the number produced for market would not exceed his permitted production of 10 head."

"The slaughter of hogs for home consumption is not a violation of the contract, provided the number of hogs produced for market from the 1934 litters is reduced by a number equal to the number of hogs slaughtered for home consumption."

THE "TAKE-A-CHANCE CLUB"

You won't find the address of the "Take-A-Chance Club" in any telephone book or city directory. It has never been incorporated, and it has no club-house. But a good many thousand Americans belong to it—though they wouldn't admit it—and no "fraternal" organization in the world exacts such high dues.

The ritual of the club runs something like this:

"I will always take a chance when driving my car. I will cut corners and drive on the wrong side of the road if I happen to feel like it. I will make a regular habit of passing other cars on hills and curves. I will always drive faster than road conditions warrant, and I will be especially careless when it is raining or snowing and visibility is poor. I will not make regular inspections of my car's lights, brakes and steering. I will make no effort to learn the traffic laws of my state and community, and if I do happen to discover some of them accidentally, I will break them at every opportunity. I'll let the other driver watch out for me as well as himself, and I'll act as if the highways and streets were my private property.

"I'll pay no attention to traffic lights and stop signs, and I'll do my best to practice none of the courtesies of the road."

The members of the "Take-A-Chance Club" follow this ritual to the letter, and the result is that each year some 30,000 people are needlessly killed in automobile accidents, and property is destroyed to the extent of $1,000,000,000.

Are you a member of the club?

County Agent C. V. Bryan of Taylor county reports that Frank Noe conducted a serious lespedeza demonstration with good results. The field was cut twice, and a third crop is being grazed. Mr. Noe says that his cattle graze the field very close.

Twenty-five county dairymen registered 500 cattle for the AAA bang's disease test, and it is expected that 1,000 cattle will be available when it is made. Interest is shown in feeding a balanced ration, and farmers expect to grow their own feed for the cattle.

BRIEFING SERVICE FOR LAWYERS

Designed to aid members of the Kentucky bar in investigating points of law, a briefing service has been established at the University of Louisville School of Law, Dr. J. A. McClain, dean of the law school has announced. The service, which is being offered without charge, is under the direction of Attorney Norman Goldberg, research supervisor, who will be aided by several outstanding students of the school.

All lawyers from throughout the state are being invited to submit to the briefing service staff any question upon which they are unable, because of limited library facilities or for other reasons, to find the law surrounding the subject. The staff will return to the lawyer a complete brief of the authorities on each question asked.

The briefing service plan places the School of Law library, of 17,000 volumes, in which is contained practically every reported English and American decision, as well as the leading texts and treatises on the law, and the statutes of over one half of the states, at the service of all Kentucky lawyers.

The students selected to work on the subject under Mr. Goldberg are: Homer B. Parrent, Anchorage; Selden Y. Trimble, Hopkinsville; Samuel R. Wells, Elizabethtown; James G. Ratcliff, Princeton; Raymond Bossmeyer and Raymond Stephenson, Louisville.

Requests for information may be mailed to Briefing Service Staff, University of Louisville School of Law, 312 Armory Place, Louisville, Kentucky.

Displays of homemakers' work at the Breathitt county annual meeting caused many visitors to realize how easily worthwhile projects can be carried on, reports Mary Clifton, home demonstration agent. "I never knew that so many things I needed could be made from materials right at home," one woman said.

Herman Williams of Webster-co., sold 100 bushels of beans at $125 per bushel from an 800-hill planting.

MAKES STATEMENT ON KILLING HOGS FOR HOME EATING

Due to misunderstanding relative to the number of hogs which corn-hog contract signers may slaughter for home use, the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has issued the following statement from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration:

"The deduction for slaughter for consumption on the farm in 1934 shall not exceed the average deduction for 1932 and 1933. This refers only to hogs produced from 1934 litters. To allow the home slaughter of hogs from 1934 litters to exceed this average would in some cases permit producers to conceal violations of the hog provisions of the contract by slaughtering their 'excess' pigs for home consumption. This, of course, is not permitted. There is nothing in the contract, however, which prevents a producer from slaughtering for home consumption more hogs from his 1934 litters than the number which he slaughtered on the average from 1932-33 litters which were owned by him when farrowed, provided he reduces hogs produced for market from his 1934 litters by a number equal to the 'excess' slaughter. There is no limitation on the number of feeder pigs which the producer may slaughter for home consumption, and such feeder pigs slaughtered will not affect the number of hogs which may be produced under the contract for market from his 1934 litters. Hogs purchased before August 1 for breeding purposes only or for home consumption need not be considered as feeder pigs, if permitted market production is exceeded.

"For example, a producer's permitted production for market is 10 head and the average slaughter for home consumption from his 1932-33 litters is two head. If he raises 12 head from his 1934 litters he must slaughter two head in order to come within his permitted production, but he may slaughter five head if he so desires, provided hogs produced for market from his 1934 litters are reduced to 7. Suppose this producer raises only 8 head from his 1934 litters and purchases no feeder pigs. He therefore would be free to market all these hogs or to slaughter any number of them, since in either case the number produced for market would not exceed his permitted production of 10 head."

Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Watts entertained relatives of Cincinnati, last Sunday.

conditions warrant, and I will be especially careful when it is raining or snowing and visibility is poor. I will make regular inspections of my car's lights, brakes and steering. I will make no effort to learn the traffic laws of my state and community, and if I do happen to discover some of them accidentally, I will break them at every opportunity. I'll let the other driver watch out for me as well as himself, and I'll act as if the highways and streets were my private property.

"I'll pay no attention to traffic lights and stop signs, and I'll do my best to practice none of the courtesies of the road."

The members of the "Take-A-Chance Club" follow this ritual to the letter, and the result is that each year some 30,000 people are needlessly killed in automobile accidents, and property is destroyed to the extent of $1,000,000,000.

BRIEFING SERVICE FOR LAWYERS

Designed to aid members of the Kentucky bar in investigating points of law, a briefing service has been established at the University of Louisville School of Law, Dr. J. A. McClain, dean of the law school has announced. The service, which is being offered without charge, is under the direction of Attorney Norman Goldberg, research supervisor, who will be aided by several outstanding students of the school.

All lawyers from throughout the state are being invited to submit to the briefing service staff any question upon which they are unable, because of limited library facilities or for other reasons, to find the law surrounding the subject. The staff will return to the lawyer a complete brief of the authorities on each question asked.

The briefing service plan places the School of Law library, of 17,000 volumes, in which is contained practically every reported English and American decision, as well as the leading texts and treatises on the law, and the statutes of over one half of the states, at the service of all Kentucky lawyers.

The students selected to work on the subject under Mr. Goldberg are: Homer B. Parrent, Anchorage; Selden Y. Trimble, Hopkinsville; Samuel R. Wells, Elizabethtown; James G. Ratcliff, Princeton; Raymond Bossmeyer and Raymond Stephenson, Louisville.

Requests for information may be mailed to Briefing Service Staff, University of Louisville School of Law, 312 Armory Place, Louisville, Kentucky.

Displays of homemakers' work at the Breathitt county annual meeting caused many visitors to realize how easily worthwhile projects can be carried on, reports Mary Clifton, home demonstration agent. "I never knew that so many things I needed could be made from materials right at home," one woman said.

Herman Williams of Webster co., sold 100 bushels of beans at $125 per bushel from an 800-hill planting.

NEWS OF FORTY YEARS AGO

A number of our subscribers have asked that we resume publication of the items under the heading "FORTY YEARS AGO." We are glad to do this and the first of the series will appear in this week's issue. The others will follow continuously each week. The Recorder is fifty-nine years old, and one of the oldest papers in this section. We are fortunate in having material of this type extending so far back and we are glad to publish it for our readers. It may be that we will also publish items of twenty or twenty-five years ago. This would appeal to a later generation. If so, we shall include the article in the near future.

CHURCH NEWS WANTED

We wish to run a column or less under the title "CHURCH NEWS." Under this heading we would like to have the weekly announcements and we trust they will take the time to send it to us. All congregations would like to know in advance the topic of the sermon and other similar data. The Recorder wishes to be of service to all our churches in any way possible. The ministers really owe it to their congregations and the public generally to inform them of all church activities. We shall be glad to publish all such news each week.

$12,637.42 A-A-A TOBACCO CHECKS RECEIVED

The County Agent's office at Burlington received 446 A-A-A tobacco first adjustment payment checks the past week for a total of $12,637.42 or an average of $28.34 per contract. This represents slightly over 60 per cent of the first payment checks to be received.

The remaining 289 contracts for the first adjustment payments will be paid in the near future. The payments were delayed on these contracts for various reasons including fewer tenants this year, requests for corrections to the contract, marketing card sent in late, late signature on compliance forms, or mistake on compliance forms, and in two or three cases non-compliance or no contract. All but non-compliance contracts should be paid inside the next two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Congleton and family have been spending a few days with relatives at Salem, Indiana. Mr. Congleton's father returning home with him for a few days visit.

JUDGE NORTHCUTT

FIRE AT INTRUDER SUNDAY MORNING—NEGRO TUMBLES DOWN STAIRS LOSING HIS CAP AND KNIFE—BELIEVES NEGRO WAS WOUNDED

Awakened by a Negro prowling in his bedroom at 5 o'clock Sunday morning Judge John Northcutt, 2 Arcadia Avenue, Ft. Mitchell, did some quick thinking before opening fire upon the intruder with a gun which he keeps in a handy place.

A light sleeper, Judge Northcutt was awakened by the Negro as he crept about the room. Reaching quietly for his gun, Judge Northcutt lay still, the Negro being in line with bedrooms occupied by other members of the family. The Negro finally reached a position near the starway and out of range of the other bedrooms. Judge Northcutt fired one shot.

The Negro tumbled down the stairs, losing his cap and a knife with which he was armed. He escaped through a rear door. Judge Northcutt expressed the belief that he hit the man as no trace of the bullet could be found in the house.

Investigation revealed that the Negro had taken $5 from the trousers of the Judge, but had left some change. Nothing else was missing.

Police are keeping check on hospitals to determine whether a Negro applies for treatment for a gunshot wound.

SUBMITS A-A-A TOBACCO TAX EXEMPTION APPLICATIONS

The Boone County A-A-A Tobacco Production Control Association submitted to Washington the first of this week approximately 125 applications for tobacco exemptions warrants. These applications represent those who did not sign A-A-A Tobacco reduction contracts and who have applied for exemptions from the 25 per cent to be applied under the Smith-Kerr Act.

The Smith-Kerr Act provides that from those farmers who did not sign contracts, only those farmers who could not sign a contract and receive an equitable base are eligible for exemption warrants.

All contract signers and those who receive exemptions will receive tax exemption warrants. These warrants will pay the 25 per cent to be collected from all tobacco sold this year.

Those in charge of such matters in this county should get the fellows together right away and enter the club before November 14th. Write William A. Leach, Secretary, 520 East Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CHANGES IN GAME LAWS

The hunting season is drawing near and the attention of hunters is called to the changes in hunting regulations. The quail season will open on November 24, and will extend to and include January 9. There will be no open season on pheasants. The Federal law compels all hunters over 16 years of age, of migratory waterfowl to have a Federal duck hunting stamp, but this stamp does not excuse the possessor from having a Kentucky hunting license. Sportsmen are asked by all game wardens to acquaint themselves with the changes and to help in the enforcement of the game laws.

ARRESTED FOR STEALING PISTOL FROM UNCLE—WAS APPREHENDED IN BOURBON COUNTY—EXAMINING TRIAL WEDNESDAY OF THIS WEEK

Leonard Perkins, 19, who made his home with his uncle on the Limaburg and Constance road, was arrested in Paris, Bourbon county, last week on a charge of stealing a .32 caliber revolver from his uncle, Milton Frederick.

Frederick called Sheriff W. B. Cotton and stated that his revolver had been stolen and that he believed his nephew had taken it. The Sheriff called Luther Rice, sheriff of Bourbon county and asked him to be on the lookout for Perkins. He was arrested and placed in jail. Local authorities called for him and returned him to the Burlington jail.

An examining trial was held Wednesday, but we are unable to give the result as we go to press. Perkins stated that the pistol was hidden in the Bourbon county jail, stating the place where it was hidden, but said he did not hide it there.

CHARGE OF 25 CENTS SET

Automobile drivers' licenses lost or stolen may be duplicated at a cost of 25 cents each. H. Hamilton Rice, Assistant Attorney-General, informed the State Automobile Department today. Fifteen cents of the cost may be retained by the Circuit Court Clerk issuing the duplicate, Rice said, and the remainder must be turned over to the state.

Rice submitted to the State Tax Commission forms for revocation or suspension of licenses as provided by the drivers' license law. He advised the commission that, before a license may be revoked, the accused driver must be notified of the date and place of a hearing and must have the right to make a defense.

Hearings are to be conducted in the county in which the accused person resides.

ERLANGER FIRE

CAUSES LOSS OF $500—BLAZE OF UNKNOWN ORIGIN SWEEPS FIRST FLOOR OF LUMBER COMPANY'S PLANT TUESDAY

One person was injured slightly and damage estimated at $500 was done to the Erlanger Lumber Co., situated between the Dixie Highway and the Southern R. R. tracks, in Erlanger, and owned by H. A. Hagelmeier, when fire of unknown origin swept the lower floor and burned through a portion of the second story flooring in the mill department at 12:30 a. m., Tuesday.

Forrest Baird, 29, of 442 Commonwealth avenue, Erlanger, suffered lacerations of the right wrist when he thrust his arm through a glass. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, by Erlanger firemen, where his condition is reported fair. He remained at the hospital.

Chief Jess Courtney of the Erlanger Police Department discovered the fire during one of his regular nightly inspections of the city. Chief Andrew Schen of the volunteer fire department and 25 of his men fought the blaze for one and one-half hours.

One of the saws and an electric motor located on the first floor of the mill were destroyed. No damage was done to the side walls of the structure.

Chief John Crowell and members of the Elsmere Fire Department came to the scene, but found it unnecessary to give aid to the Erlanger department.

DAIRYMEN

JOIN PRODUCERS BODY—LEADER DECLARES PRICE PAID TO FARMER TOO LOW—CONSUMERS IS CHARGED TOO MUCH, RUCKER SAYS

The producer is not receiving enough for his milk to buy feed for his cattle, and the consumer is paying too much for milk delivered to his home, W. H. Rucker, attorney and farmer, Hebron, Ky., told 150 milk producers from Campbell, Kenton, Boone, Pendleton and Grant counties, meeting at American Legion Hall, Newport, Friday afternoon. Those attending voted to join the United Milk Producers' Association.

At a meeting August 8th at the Cincinnati Courthouse, Rucker was named Chairman of a committee of 15 to organize producers in Northern Kentucky. He presided over the meeting Friday.

"Someone between the producer and consumer is getting too much, and this must be adjusted," Rucker added.

Rucker said the meeting was the outcome of the mass meeting held in Cincinnati and several meetings held at the Covington Chamber of Commerce. The Queen City Milk Producers Association went out of existence in 1920, he said. Since then, he added, Southern Ohio and Northern Kentucky producers have been without an organization.

Peak in 1920 Cited
Records in Cincinnati show that in February, 1920, the peak milk price was reached when producers received $4.45 a hundred and consumers paid 15 cents a quart delivered, Rucker said. He declared the dealer received $6.97 a hundred, or a margin of profit of $2.25 a hundred.

REVIVAL MEETING

They were Rebecca Stephenson, Rosa Pettit, Violet Rose Stephens, Mary Phyllis James, Elizabeth Ann James, Albert William Weaver, J. D. Jarrell, James Gayle Smith, Thomas V. Hensley, Marian King, Melvin King, Joseph King, Cornelius King by confession, and Ray King and Rev. and Mrs. James by letter.

The attendance was good and the sermons and special songs were enjoyed by all who attended.

Mary Louise Renaker was home Tuesday night to visit her family and friends. Mary Louise is going to school at the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. and is staying in town through the week.

UNION BOYS

BREAK WINDOW IN AUTO, WAVE GUN IN COVINGTON—ONE ASSESSED A FINE OF $115.00 BEFORE JUDGE JOSEPH GOODENOUGH AND WILL HAVE TO APPEAR BEFORE GRAND JURY

Two Union boys went to Covington Sunday and landed in Covington Police Court Monday morning. Jack Portwood and his brother Jess, who has just turned 20, broke windows in a parked car owned by W. M. Eschlagel, 827 Madison avenue, Covington police said.

Next they threatened several pedestrians, and Jack was accused of waving a gun in the general direction of several persons, the judge was told.

All this was reviewed in Covington Police Court and Judge Joseph P. Goodenough decided Jack must pay $15 and costs on an intoxication charge, $100 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge and appear before the next grand jury on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. The first two fines also were assessed against Jess.

Game Warden E. M. Johnson and assistant game warden Geo. Lanter, brought in one violator of the game laws Sunday, two others Monday, and two more Tuesday. They all appeared before Judge N. E. Riddell and were fined in accordance with the law governing such violations.

OUR S. S. TEACHERS

There are about two million Sunday School teachers in this country, and the service they give us is one which we could ill do without. Not only does the task require preparation and study each week, but it also demands the ability to deal with and instruct children, no mean job in itself.

The men and women who engage in this difficult and exacting work cannot be praised too highly. They deserve all the honor that can be given them. The religious, ethical and cultural value of their service cannot be over-estimated.

ALL HONOR TO BOONE COUNTY STUDENTS

In the County Superintendent's office is the beautiful loving cup which was presented to the Boone county students when they won first place in the state in the recent scholastic and athletic tournament in Lexington. The Recorder wishes to compliment these boys and girls and their teachers for gaining so fine a distinction. The county is proud of them and all honor is due them.

Boone county in the past has produced many able and outstanding men and women. It would appear that this younger generation has the ability to keep up the good record in time to come.

THE AMERICAN CREED

One of the finest things ever written is William Tyler Page's THE AMERICAN CREED. It would not be out of the way if Supt. Norris would suggest that his high school teachers require each student particularly the boys, to memorize this gem. It is as follows:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people and for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it my duty to my country to love it, to support its constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag and to defend it against all enemies."

BOONE COUNTY BANKS

A short time ago the county papers published the statement of the nine Boone County banks. These statements showed clearly that all our banks are in fine condition. In fact, it is doubtful if any county in Kentucky has a higher standing and rating in this connection.

It would seem that these banks have been so carefully managed that they are now in position to be of great service in their respective communities and to take care of any legitimate requirements. The total deposits of all nine banks is rather amazing when the population of the county is taken into consideration. The grand total of both time and checking deposits in all nine banks amounts to $2,049,584.54. The Recorder feels that this is a wonderful record for these times and wishes to congratulate all banking officials for so excellent a showing.

Fireside Thoughts

NOVEMBER

"Who said November's face was grim?
Who said her voice was harsh and sad?
I heard her sing in wood paths dim,
I met her on the shore so glad,
So smiling, I could kiss her feet!
There never was a month so sweet."
—Lucy Larcom

The worst thing in giving charity is politics. We would guess that more money has been squandered than has ever been lost through the inexperience or lack of understanding of those who spend the public's money. It seems impossible to keep politics out of the work of helping people. That is not a new condition. It is as old as charity, itself.

Isn't it funny that so many business men will get up in the morning, shave with an advertised razor, and advertised soap, put on advertised underwear, advertised hose, shirt, tie, and advertised shoes, seat themselves at the table, eat advertised cereal, drink coffee, put on an advertised hat, light an advertised cigar, go to their business in an advertised car, and turn down an advertising proposition on the ground that advertising doesn't pay.

We have known men who made their entire fortune in one town but who never acted as though they owed the town anything. This is the wrong attitude to take. The best type of citizen is he who is civic minded and will give his time and thought freely to the town or county in which he has prospered. No one can live in a community, enjoy its privileges and draw his substance therefrom without becoming lastingly indebted to the community, its people, and its institutions, and that obligation is a debt of loyalty the discharge of which is incumbent upon him as opportunity offers.

The first time we ever remember hearing of John Uri Lloyd was when we were a high school freshman, too many years ago to mention. Our family physician was a member of the faculty of the Eclectic Medical College, Cincinnati, and was a close friend of Mr. Lloyd. He lectured to us students one day on John Uri Lloyd's first book, ETIDORPHA. After all these years the only thing we recall is that the title was Aphrodite, a Greek god or goddess, spelled backward. Since then we have read every book Mr. Lloyd has written and expect to read his last one just recently issued.

We were somewhat disappointed to note that there were not any school news items from any of our county high schools in our last issue. We believe a limited amount of school news is welcomed by the patrons and quite beneficial to the schools. We have reference to the scholastic and social activities of the students rather than to the athletic. Certainly each of our prominent high schools should send in school news frequently. We shall be glad to publish it in the interest of all concerned. School publicity pays.

A town's progress is not generally noticed by those who have lived there all the time. Let a former resident return after a number of years' absence and all improvements will stand out clearly. When we first drove into Burlington recently it seemed quite changed and very much for the better. We noticed the large addition to the high school, the monumental and beautiful Peoples Deposit Bank, the handsome new Jail, the re-built Blythe Corner, thirty or forty modern residences, electric light system, better roads, etc., etc. The old Court House stood out to us as about the only familiar landmark. Truly, Burlington is a much better place in which to live.

Editorial of the Week

THE SCHOOL A PART OF US (Kentucky Post)

Next week is American Education Week and on Thursday and Friday the Northern Kentucky Education Association will hold a two-day program.

Sometimes, especially when we get to thinking about school costs, we are apt to view our schools as something apart from community life as a whole—something which costs us money, the less the better. But the schools are actually a part of us. The produce the schools are making now will become "us" when the younger generation has grown up into the community and we who now constitute the working community have passed into oblivion.

This point was made not long ago by Dr. Charles H. Judd, prominent American educator, in a speech before the Cleveland Rotary Club. "The schools and business and public life are in partnership," he said.

The truth of the assertion has wide ramifications, but it has a direct bearing on the effort in all lands to reduce juvenile criminality. One need not resort to sentiment to make a case for schools when the fact is cited that it costs, in the United States, only $90 of the taxpayers' money to keep a boy in school but $3000 to keep a man in jail for a year.

Not all boys and girls who attend school turn out to be good citizens, but it can be said that few turn to delinquency because they went to school. And a practical problem community faces, if it fails to support its schools or to encourage its children to attend, is what to do with the idle boys and girls. It is unsocial, if not illegal, to throw them into competition with adults for jobs and, on the other hand, sheer idleness promises no good for anyone.

A petrified tree, approximately fourteen inches in diameter, has been found near Nigh, according to M. Hunt, a resident of that section.

Mr. Hunt states that the tree was discovered on a hillside and about six feet of it was standing. A part of the top had been broken off. The tree was found by Pld Charles, a road worker. The bark of the tree, Mr. Hunt says, is also petrified and can be scaled from the main body.—Pike County News, Pikeville.

A Peculiar Fungus Growth

L. E. Ward, of the Alexander community, sent to this office Saturday a fungus growth, very peculiar in nature, which he took from the base of a beech tree growing on his farm. The growth is of spongy nature and is quite different in structure from the average growth found in the woods. ## Honey Stored In Courthouse

The Lincoln County Court house at Stanford is a sweet place, it was revealed Friday when Arthur Russell, a jeweler, and his assistant, George M. Davidson, went to the dome of the building to repair and regulate the town clock and discovered that bees were using the dome for a hive.

Mr. Russell stated the honey was stored in an almost inaccessible part of the dome and estimated that approximately 200 pounds of honey had been stored there. Plans are under way for removal of the honey.

The report did not specify whether or not Mr. Russell repaired the clock.—Springfield Sun.

Cow Answers Automobile Horn

Milkmaids of old passed down the shaded lanes with the pails swinging. But not Mrs. Gertrude Johnson, deputy county clerk. But Mrs. Johnson is an unusual milkmaid and she has an unusual cow.

The Johnson car spins down the Mayo trail for a couple of miles each morning and night. Then Mrs.

Johnson steps from her car and swings the milk pail. The car horn is consulted and three short blasts bring Cleopatra to the fence for the milking.

"And," Mrs. Johnson says, "Cleopatra is not a Shorthorn despite the 3 short blasts."—Pike County News, Pikeville.

Finds Old Terrapin

Ed. Stephens, while gathering to mates in his garden at Portland, last week, found a terrapin with the name of his son, O. R. Stephens, carved on his shell and dated September, 1914. This old terrapin has been totting this name and date around for 20 years in the same neighborhood.

O. R. Stephens carved his name on this old terrapin when he was a carefree young man. He is now an engineer on the L. & N. Railroad and piloting trains over this division. Mr. Stephens hopes that this old terrapin lives to be as old as Methuselah and keeps his name as written there.—Outlook, Falmouth.

AN OVER-CROWDED PRISON

The state reformatory at Frankfort now contains within its walls 2,620 prisoners, the largest number of inmates in history of the institution since it was built 136 years ago.

The problem of maintaining discipline and preserving health of the inmates in the reformatory is complicated by having to confine 2,620 in a prison which has a normal capacity of less than 1,800. Gravity of the difficulties faced by Superintendent Elmer Deatherage in operation of the prison is intensified by the fact that most of the prisoners are idle.

Until recent years manufacturing plants have been operated in the prison by various manufacturing concerns who have utilized prison labor. Enactment of federal legislation which bars prison-made goods from inter-state commerce, in order to prevent commodities of prison manufacture from competing with free labor, has resulted in closing down of most of these factories that have operated within the prison.

As result of a decreased work opportunity many of the prisoners are idle. This fact makes maintenance of discipline more difficult. It also increased considerably cost to the state of maintaining the reformatory. Income from prison labor in previous years has contributed largely to expense of running the institution.

The over-crowded condition of the reformatory supplies a practical reason for granting paroles to prisoners convicted for less serious offenses. The Board of Public Welfare finds it necessary to parole prisoners as soon as they become eligible, in order to create room for the steady stream of new offenders committed to the prison by state courts.

Too long the prison problem of the state has gone unsolved. The dominant reason for having so long postponed the building of larger prison quarters is the fact that it is with such difficulty that money can be procured for such a project. Income of the state had diminished almost a third as result of lowered assessed values on taxable property. It has been with greatest difficulty that revenue has been provided with which to meet the most impelling necessities of state government and education. Enlargement of the penal and charitable institutions has had to wait.

The congested condition that exists in the Frankfort prison also exists in the other state institutions, the hospitals for the insane and other corrective institutions. Not much longer will it be possible to defer dealing with a problem that has grown more acute year after year.

ADVERTISING AND BETTER BUSINESS

The merchant who advertises protects his customers by backing everything he sells.

Advertising and better business go hand-in-hand. Why not advertise more and help business?

A faint heart never won much business. Why not go after it with a strong heart?

Up-to-date merchants make steady customers by giving prompt, courteous service.

Wise people don't lose much time puzzling their heads as to where and what to buy; they read the ads., knowing that the names of the live, up-to-date merchants can be found there.

Merchants with quality goods to sell advertise.

These merchants keep their stocks moving.

By keeping their stocks moving they keep them fresh and up-to-date.

Last week a mad dog bit a hog of Silvers Cullum, one of Geo. Youell's one of a colored woman, and a dog of William Huey, colored. These animals all developed signs of hydrophobia, and were killed. The dog that bit them was killed at Stringtown.

BORROWED SUM

PERIOD FROM JUNE 1, 1933, TO OCTOBER 28, COVERED IN FEDERAL FIGURES

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 2.—More than 67,000 farmers of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee borrowed sums totalling in excess of $150,000,000 from the Federal Land Bank of Louisville and the Land Bank Commissioner during the period from June 1, 1933, to Oct. 28, 1934, according to a statement of M. S. Kennedy, Jr., Secretary of the Federal Land Bank of Louisville.

"Borrowers used 91.3 cents out of each borrowed dollar to repay their old creditors and thus refinance their debts," stated Mr. Kennedy. "In many instances creditors were pressing for payment and threatening foreclosure, and these loans provided the farmers with means to repay such creditors and avoid foreclosure."

Figures received by Mr. Kennedy, based upon analysis of some 94 per cent of the loans closed, show that for each dollar loaned during the above period 39.1 cents refinanced farmers, debts to commercial banks and banks in the hands of receivers of conservators; 14.8 cents repaid debts to insurance companies; 8.6 cents settled debts due Joint Stock Land banks; 1.7 cents went to pay taxes; 1 cent was used to settle bills due merchants; and 26.1 cents were used in paying a wide group of unclassified creditors, including mortgage loan companies, private mortgage lenders, retired farmers and other farm creditors.

"Reduced to terms of dollars," said Mr. Kennedy, "the debts due commercial banks, including those in receivership or in conservators' hands, which were paid in this refinancing program totaled upwards of $58,650,000 during the period named, comprising a little less than 17 months."

Other Figures

The total refinanced for the other groups of creditors named includes over $22,200,000 paid to insurance companies, over $12,900,000 to Joint Stock Land Banks, upward of $2,550,000 to tax authorities, $11,500,000 to merchants and to the unclassified group of creditors described, $39,150,000.

"Of the sums not used for farm refinancing, 4 per cent or $6,000,000 was devoted to the purchase of land and equipment, construction and improvement of buildings and for general agricultural purposes, while 4.7 per cent or $7,050,000 was used for other purposes, such as the redemption or repurchase of land foreclosed, for loan fees and for the purchase of National Farm Loan Association stock."

FLOATING DEBT MOUNTS

To $19,001,090 In Kentucky, State Auditor's Records Show
Frankfort, Ky., November 1.—The state's floating debt mounted to $19,001,090.21 at the close of business October 31, records at the office of J. Dan Talbott, State Auditor, showed today.

This was offset in part, however, by a balance of $2,129,984.82 in the general expenditure fund, leaving a net deficit of $16,871,105.39.

The floating debt consists of $18,944,230.24 in state warrants issued prior to 1914. The total of $19,001,090.21 compared with a total of $17,652,578.46 in warrants outstanding at the close of business September 30.

In addition there was $1,663,482.34 in warrants outstanding against the state road fund, but this was offset in part by a balance of $962,387.19 in the road fund, leaving the fund $701,095.15 in the red.

Balance in the various state funds at the close of the month were: Cash in minor funds, $1,030,059.26; general expenditure fund, $2,129,984.82; common school, $50,337.71; highway bridge fund, $156,409.76; highway bridge bond sinking, $558,673.98; state road NRA fund, $471,672.32; transfer fund, $26,133.06; road fund, $962,387.19.

Trigg county farmers have a large amount of well-ripened tobacco as a result of using improved methods, reports County Agent Thomas Morgan.

DEATH FOR KIDNAPPER

IS LAW IN KENTUCKY
Before kidnapping for ransom was regarded as a national menace, the Kentucky Legislature put that crime in the same category as wilful murder and treason.

Back in 1928 the Legislature passed a law fixing life imprisonment or death in the electric chair as the penalty for kidnapping instead of two to twenty-one years' imprisonment.

Kentucky's freedom from kidnappers in the past few years has been attributed to the severity of its law. A lunatic was the first to defy the law. That Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., sought as the kidnapper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, knew death was the penalty was revealed in his ransom note.

The law has never been invoked. It may not be invoked in the Stoll case. Federal officers have announced that when Robinson is captured he will be prosecuted under the Lindbergh Law, which authorizes the death penalty if the victim is injured.

Kentucky's anti-kidnapping law was sponsored at the 1928 session of the Legislature by Senator John L. Thurmond of Hopkinsville. The State's penalty for kidnapping was "not nearly severe enough" to cope with "horrible crimes" of this nature, Senator Thurmond contended. The Senate passed his bill without a dissenting vote. The House approved it by a vote of 71 to 2. The new law attracted little attention at that time.

After the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby several members of the Kentucky Legislature then in session, unaware that the State already had the death penalty for kidnapping, introduced bills to make it a capital offense. Similar bills were offered at the 1934 session, but jurists at the Capitol told legislators they did not see how any more teeth could be put in the 1928 law.

Joe Terry, assistant county agent of Warren county, helped a Pet Milk Company representative select animals for the Pet Milk Dairy Show.

County Agent J. E. Wilson of Grant county reports that several soybean demonstrations are being conducted.

REFORMERS AND HUMAN NATURE

Our observation of reformers is that they are always in too much of a hurry. We haven't especially in mind, but we see and hear of lots of good people who think the world ought to be made over at once.

As far as we have read about what has gone on in the world in the past, there have been lots of tries at remodeling human nature, or at least of changing the shape of human organizations and institutions in the hope that, somehow, the change will react beneficially upon human nature. We have heard about very few such attempts that have succeeded in less than a few hundred years. Therefore we are inclined to be somewhat skeptical about any sort of attempt to reform anything of material consequences in a few weeks or months or years.

We are not against reformers. Quite to the contrary. We feel a good deal, at times, the way Omar Khayyam did when he wrote:

"Ah, Love, could you and I
With Him conspire
To grasp this sorry scheme of Things entire,
Would we not shatter it to —bits and then
Remold it nearer to the Heart's desire?"

We confess, however, that we have been unable, so far, to "grasp this sorry scheme of things entire," and we question whether anyone else has been able to do that. And if we were able to "remold it nearer to Heart's desire," the question would immediately arise to vex us: "Whose heart?" It takes a brave man, indeed, to assume that what he thinks is best for everybody will be accepted to everybody as best for themselves.

On the whole, perhaps, reformers do not do as much damage as some people imagine. And, on the whole, we think humanity has been doing a pretty good job of reforming itself, through the ages.

THE FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

OF THE DEPRESSION
Five years ago today it was that there occurred the disastrous crash of the Wall Street stock market, ushering in the severe and prolonged financial depression from which we are emerging.

Remember how the smart boys said it would not last long, would soon be over. Stock market experts predicted stocks would soon stage a comeback. Passing years have proved the folly of the Pollyanna piffle.

We have found out that one does headlong into a depression and crawls out. Slowly we are trudging up the hill out of the slough of hard times. Encouraging progress has been made toward recovery in the last 18 months. The most conservatively cautious admit that the worst of the storm is over, that the sun is breaking through the dark clouds which engulfed the nation in gloom.

We have gone from one extreme to another. Six years ago the speculative mania was so intense that most of us would have taken a chance on anything. Banks would loan on most any kind of collateral. Business men did not hesitate about ventures which contained elements of hazard. The idiosyncrasy of the idiotic era clouded the judgment of men regarded as sane and level-headed.

Now we have gone to the other extreme. We have been reluctant to renew our faith in the possibilities of our nation. In too many instances we have lost faith in ourselves, faith in our abilities to reconstruct upon the foundation of the rules which have fallen about us, a new structure more solidly constructed, less pretentious, but more enduring.

Under the leadership of the great statesman in the White House, raised up by destiny to guide this nation through one of its most critical phases, encouraging progress has been made toward recovery. President Roosevelt is utilizing all the resources of the government to restore a stricken nation, alleviate the misfortune of those who suffer privation, and lead this people again to the highland of happiness. So striking has been the improvement in general conditions as stubborn misfortune has yielded to the healing touch of the President's recovery program that our better judgment dictates that he be given every support as he continues his efforts in behalf of the American people. You can help Roosevelt to help you by returning to congress from this district the Democratic candidate for representative, electing a man who will uphold the hands of the President and sustain him in his endeavors to promote the welfare of this nation.

Our better judgment is reasserting itself. Shattered confidence is being restored. Our thinking is being re-adjusted. We reluctantly admit that the years of feverish prosperity were abnormal. It was an unhealthy condition which contained in itself the germs of eventual disaster. Our shattered hopes and fortunes can be rebuilt if we have the courage to enter upon the tedious task. The day of hectic prosperity, get-rich-quick insanity will not return, should not be restored. But, if we utilize the costly experience of the last five years we can restore an economic order in which profits will be smaller, yet security will be greater.

We may be thankful that five years of the depression with its devastating consequences are behind us, that we have paid a large portion of the debt of our folly and are moving slowly but steadily toward the highlands of a sane and more secure prosperity.

BANISH THE RECKLESS DRIVER

Reports from police departments, state traffic authorities and safety organizations in all parts of the country show a startling increase in automobile accidents.

Every driving crime is on the rise. The result, if the present trend continues, will be that 1934 will see the establishment of a new high in fatalities. Statistics for the worst driving months—October, November and December—may make the record even more horrible.

The automobile accident problem, which has been a major issue for many years, has reached a crucial stage. The American highway today is a slaughterhouse—the most careful, competent and courteous driver takes his life in his hands when he ventures on it. Around the next curve or over the next hill there may be a drunken or reckless driver at the controls of several thousand pounds of steel moving at a tremendous speed. Less than ten per cent of motorists take chances—but that ten per cent menace us all.

The old-fashioned type of safety campaign, restricted both in time and area, must be replaced by a real safety campaign, engineered and enforced by the general public—by the ninety per cent of drivers who are competent and careful. The reckless must be driven from the highways—and to achieve this, the force of public opinion can be even more useful than law. No matter how good a state's traffic code is, or how conscientious a highway patrol, it cannot produce results if the public is indifferent.

Banish the drunken, the reckless, the incompetent driver—it may save your life, and the lives of loved ones.

Pulaski county 4-H club members are fitting 30 calves for the baby beef show and sale in Louisville this month.

Lespedeza is undoubtedly the most valuable cover crop and soil protector available for poor soils, to restore fertility, keep down weeds and prevent erosion. Shortage of seed for other legume crops is expected to increase the demand for lespedeza seed next spring.

AGRICULTURE

The economic value of home demonstration work in Kentucky last year was more than half of a million dollars, based on minimum prices, says the annual report of the extension division of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

The vegetables, fruits, meats and other foods canned as a direct result of the work had a minimum value of $319,569. Home furnishings made as a result of the work were worth $87,855; home sewing, $44,634. Other parts of the work and their value are: Home management $35,562; home millinery, $5,687; home dry cleaning, $4,340; home crafts, $9,282; 4-H club clothing, $11,733, and 4-H club canning, $6,991.

Aside from the economic value, the report points out that "a large part of the home demonstration program cannot be measured in dollars and cents. Greater happiness and satisfaction of the homemaker, more beauty and comfort in home surroundings, higher standards of health, greater appreciation of life are intrinsic values that cannot be measured."

Home demonstration work was conducted in 464 communities in the state, with 6,242 women enrolled in homemakers clubs, and 11,583 girls enrolled in the work. A total of 40,037 persons were reached, with the aid of 3,298 volunteer local leaders. A total of 10,657 meetings were held attended by 376,980 persons. Help was afforded in relief work for 10,582 families.

14,000 FARMERS ARE BENEFITTED

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30.—More than 14,000 Kentucky farmers have benefited by the loan facilities of The Federal Land Bank of Louisville and the Land Bank Commissioner to the extent of upwards of $32,000,000, in loans closed during the period from June 1, 1933 to October 28, 1934, according to announcement today by M. S. Kennedy, Jr., Land Bank Secretary.

"Analysis of a large percentage of the loans shows that borrowers used 91.8 cents of each dollar so borrowed for the purpose of paying creditors whom they already owed," said Mr. Kennedy. "In many cases these creditors were pressing for payment and the loans provided the borrowers with funds to repay them and thus avoid foreclosure."

"A study of the figures shows that for each dollar loaned to Kentucky farmers during the period above mentioned 43 cents went to pay debts due commercial banks, including banks in the hands of receivers or conservators. This means the payment of over $13,766,000 to Kentucky bankers from funds loaned to farmers by The Federal Land Bank of Louisville and the Land Bank Commissioner during a period of less than seventeen months," Mr. Kennedy pointed out. "Joint Stock Land Banks received 9.3 cents or $2,976,000; insurance companies were paid 10.7 cents or $3,424,000; tax authorities received .7 cents or $224,000; merchants were paid outstanding accounts to the amount of 1 cent per dollar or $320,000, and other creditors got 27.1 cents or $8,672,000. This last group includes a large list of unclassified creditors such as land mortgage companies, private mortgage lenders, retired farmers and other farm creditors."

"Examination of the uses made of funds included in the above loans and not used for refinancing shows that 3.5 per cent or $1,120,000 was used for buying farms, constructing or improving buildings and for general agricultural purposes. The remaining 4.7 cents or $1,504,000 was paid for redemption or repurchase of foreclosed land, for paying loan fees and for the purchase of National Farm Loan Association stock."

Louis Hartung, Jefferson county club boy, won $26 on poultry displayed at the State Fair.

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM FOR BETTER POULTRY

The Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association is sponsoring a state-wide program that is adding to farm incomes and putting Kentucky in the front rank of poultry producing States.

Membership in the association includes 1,700 approved flock owners, 16 approved hatchery owners, 80 certified flock owners and two certified hatcherymen.

Accreditation is done by inspectors licensed by the Agricultural Experiment Station, and certification by a field agent who also is a member of the poultry staff at the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station. This field agent supervises the hatcheries and licensed inspectors.

The $4,000 expended annually by the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association to further poultry improvement work is a testimony by the poultrymen of the state of their confidence and interest in the educational program of the extension service of the College of Agriculture. This money is turned over to the college in quarterly payments and is administered in the same manner as other university funds.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETING TO BE DEC. 6-7

The 79th annual meeting of the Kentucky Horticultural Society will be held Dec. 6 and 7 at the Livestock Pavilion, College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky, according to announcement by W. W. Magill, field agent in horticulture.

Among outstanding speakers of the session will be C. E. Dutton, president of the Ohio State Horticultural Society, and one of the largest and most successful fruit growers in Ohio. Mr. Dutton has held the 500-bushel-per-acre medal on a 10-year average of production. He will discuss "Orchard Management Practices."

Ted Cooper, Paducah, is president of the Kentucky organization, and Ben E. Niles of Henderson is secretary. Fruit growers throughout the state are expected to attend the meeting.

FARMERS INSPECT 10 CHAMPION HENS

Ten hens that averaged 261 eggs in a year were a feature of the recent annual meeting of farmers and poultry raisers at the farm of W. E. Pyles in Mason county. Two of the hens laid more than 300 eggs each, and the pen ranked 3rd in an egg laying contest in Michigan. Another hen in the Pyles flock laid 311 eggs in a year. She was in a pen entered in a Florida laying contest.

The program at the meeting consisted of talks on poultry care and improvement, and a tour of the Pyles poultry plant and flocks.

SNOWED ON JULY FOURTH, WOMAN, 89, REMEMBERS

Those whose minds are troubled by freak climatic changes of 1934 should take courage from the stoicism of Mrs. Anna Hemmer, 254 Wenner Street, East End, who celebrated her eighty-ninth birthday, October 25th, and can remember that "it snowed one Fourth of July in the sixties."

Mrs. Hemmer received many good will messages from friends and members of her family of seven children, 22 grandchildren, and 14 great-grandchildren.

She is still active at the hobby of making hooked rugs. She still takes part in the affairs of the Married Ladies Sodality of St. Rose Church, a society with which she has been identified for many decades.

Mrs. Hemmer was born in Hannover, Germany. She came to Cincinnati when she was one year old. Before moving to the home of her daughter, Minnie, and son, John H. Hemmer, she lived for 50 years at 144 Gladstone Avenue.

She recalls vividly Cincinnati during Civil War times. She was married in 1865 to Thomas Hemmer, molder at the Mowery Car Wheel Foundry. He died in 1898.

In 1884, the year in which the famous Courthouse riot took place, Mrs. Hemmer's daughter Minnie was born.

Other members of the family besides this daughter and the son, John, are Mrs. Mayne Wilberding, Bernard H. Hemmer, Jacob W. Fred C., and Clarence. Clarence, the "younger," is 47 years old.

ONLY ONE KIND OF NEWS

At 10:00 o'clock every morning, Eastern Standard Time, and at 6:30 o'clock every evening, those who are tuned in on any one of 118 broadcasting stations hear a five-minute review of the high lights of the day's news. It comes to them without any advertising tagged to it. It is furnished free of cost, by the newspapers of the U. S. through the three great press news associations, the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service. And several times a day "flash" bulletins of important or sensational news developments are broadcast in the same manner.

This news that you get from Press Radio Service is accurate, dependable and reliable news. Why? Because it is newspaper news. There is no other source of news that can be relied upon except the newspapers. A great many people have the foolish idea that newspapers do not give them all the news; that some mysterious forces operate to suppress news. It is often much more interesting to listen to unfounded and sensational rumor than to read the plain facts; and a great many persons are credulous enough to believe rumor in preference to facts.

Many large advertisers have tried to hitch their advertising broadcasts to radio news. They cannot do so unless they gather their own news. Newspaper news, such as is broadcast by Press Radio, is not for sale. Any other kind of news is subject to suspicion; for the gathering, editing and distribution of news on a national scale is a task which calls for a great staff of highly-trained, alert, competent news paper men.

Commenting on the news is another thing. Anyone is at liberty to express opinions on anything which is already public property. A few gentlemen are doing a very good job of news interpretation on the air. But when it comes to the news itself, nothing that you may hear is to be relied upon unless it is definitely the only genuine sort of news there is—newspaper news.

STATE COLLECTS $700,000

On Beer Taxes In Year—Kentuckians Drink 468,569 Barrels

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 30.—Kentuckians have consumed 468,569 barrels of beer in the last year, on which the state collected taxes of approximately $700,000.

The State Tax Commission reported today that from September 26, 1933, when the beer tax act of the 1933 special legislative session went into effect, the $1.25 barrel tax has yielded revenue of $585,711.69. The barrel tax does not apply on beer manufactured for sale outside of the state.

In addition, the license taxes on wholesalers and retailers of beer have yielded approximately $110,000 in the last year. These taxes are certified to the state auditor.

No appropriation for administration of the barrel tax on beer was made by the Legislature and the tax has been collected by the tax commission without additional cost to the state.

Approximately 1,500 tons of Korean lespedeza hay was harvested in Fleming county, as compared with 150 tons last year.

MELONS BRING GOOD PROFIT

How a Powell county man got off relief rolls and earned more than $550 since spring by making himself a job, is told by County Agent W. L. Browning, in his report to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

"I can't find a regular job, so I'm going to make one," the Powell county man declared, and he outlined his plan to the county agent. After getting information on growing watermelons, he rented 5½ acres of waste land from a neighbor and bought $3.20 worth of seed, on credit.

Four and a half acres were planted in melons, and the remaining acre in corn. By the end of September, the watermelons alone had netted him $550.

"It all shows what a man can do when he applies vision to farming," declares Mr. Browning, who says that the business will be much enlarged next year, and methods used to produce earlier melons.

INSURANCE CANNOT PAY FOR FIRE

Many persons take chances with fire and fire hazards because they believe they have complete insurance coverage—that they cannot lose financially in case of fire.

What these people don't realize is that complete fire coverage doesn't exist. It isn't for sale. No company writes such a policy—because none could.

An insurance company can pay for materials destroyed when a blaze damages a home or business. But that side of the destruction is often the least of it. When a factory burns, men are thrown out of work. Their purchasing power is suddenly lowered or destroyed. They are often unable to meet their obligations. They can no longer buy the commodities and services local businesses sell. While out of work, they cannot maintain their homes, properly, or do their part in developing their community.

No policy form could be prepared that would protect a community against those results of fire. Again, every sizable fire destroys taxable property. A blaze may raise a great industry which pays large taxes. With that source of taxation destroyed, taxes on all other property must be increased—and every citizen has to help pay the bill.

In brief, it is the indirect cost of fire, which insurance cannot protect us against, that makes the greatest total. Direct loss runs close to half a billion dollars a year—indirect loss is estimated at two or three times that amount. And finally, if even that doesn't convince you that you should make a determined effort to guard your home and property against fire, think of this: Every year, fire takes around 10,000 lives.

PROFIT SET AT $5,600,000

For First Year's Operation Of Pennsylvania Liquor Stores

Chicago, October 25—(AP)—

Pennsylvania's treasury will net $5,600,000 from the first year's operation of state liquor stores, John H. Ferti, Director of the State Legislative Reference Bureau, estimated today.

Writing in the current issue of "State Government," he termed the first five months' operation of the system satisfactory despite the fact that the estimated initial year's profits will reach only slightly more than one-fourth of the originally anticipated amount.

Among the factors which Ferti said resulted in a lower consumption of liquor than estimated were: illicit liquor traffic, the supply already in the consumer's hands, decreased purchasing power of the people, and the high cost of liquors, due in part to import and Federal taxes.

FATTEN TURKEYS FOR TOP PRICES

The poultry department at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington believes it may pay Kentucky farmers to put a good finish on turkeys this year, since grain is scarce in most of the big turkey producing states.

A few rapid growing and low-set birds should be selected for breeders and not fattened. It is considered a mistake to fatten early turkeys and save the late maturing ones for breeding.

Those to be fattened should be kept in a small pasture of alfalfa, clover or bluegrass. Abundant green pasture during the finishing period will reduce the feed bill by a fourth.

A dry mash is essential to proper finishing. A well balanced poultry laying mash is satisfactory. A simple one is made at the rate of 300 pounds of mill-run wheat feed, and 100 pounds each of ground yellow corn and meat scrap. Add 1 per cent of salt to the mixture.

Shelled corn should be fed in open hoppers or self-feeders along side the mash, permitting the birds to adjust their own proportion of grain and mash. Low grade wheat or wheat screenings may be fed with the corn. Good wheat is worth too much to feed to turkeys.

Finish turkeys on old corn; never on new corn. New corn obtained in a near-by field may not hurt them, however, if their appetite for grain has been satisfied before they are turned out.

THE FARM AND HOME (Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Hogs weighing 175 to 200 pounds are considered best for home killing. Heavier hogs usually have too much fat to yield the best cuts. Keep the hog off feed at least 24 hours before killing, but allow it free access to water.

Due to the need of accurate figures when taking part in the agricultural adjustment program, many farmers will make inventories during the coming winter, and keep books next year. Interested persons should see their county agent before January 1.

The grape is one of the surest fruit crops in Kentucky, because it usually blooms after spring frosts are over. While spring is favored as setting time, still many farmers start them in the fall. New vines may be propagated by bending a cane to be ground and covering part of with soil so roots will form.

Winter is a good time to make home repairs, especially to install additional conveniences. Many kitchens need sinks, work shelves, cabinets and other equipment. Ample closet space is needed in many houses. Repairs and additions often can be made at small cost.

Bananas suitable for eating should be well ripened, of deep yellow color, shaded or specked with brown, with no traces of green on the tips. If green when purchased, they should be ripened at room temperature, not put in the refrigerator.

More than 700 Bell county 4-H club members took part in the annual farm and home products display work.

BRAND NEW EYES!

Don't let improper light damage them

HAPPY little fellow! He probably has perfect eyesight today . . . as most babies do. Yet he has only a sixty per cent chance of avoiding eye trouble by college age, if his is an average case!

The new Science of Seeing has revealed startling facts about eyes and seeing. We know now that our eyes, accustomed for centuries to generous outdoor light, are almost universally deprived of enough light indoors. Is it any wonder that 95 per cent of all people over sixty have defective eyesight?

The kindly service of the eye specialist does much to alleviate eye trouble. But prevention is equally important . . . and adequate light for all reading or close work is one of the first essentials.

Here is an easy rule you can put into effect now. Make sure that every member of your family has his own reading lamp . . . equipped with at least one 100 watt lamp, two 60's, or three 40's . . . according to the number of sockets.

If you will telephone us, we will gladly send a representative to make further suggestions on how the lighting in your home may be improved. There is no charge for this service.

CHAPTER I

Mr. Theodore Gatlin's married life had demonstrated to him the absolute fallacy of the ecclesiastical contention that marriages are made in heaven.

In the beginning he had married Louise Hanchett for a number of reasons, none of them really important. She was of good family; i. e., her parents were prosperous middle-class folk whom scandal had never touched. They were eminently respectable if a trifle bovine in disposition and Louise was their only child, and sole heir to such worldly goods as her parents might have accumulated and which Mr. Gatlin believed they were not likely to dissipate; for which reason he did not contemplate having to support them in their helpless age.

These were the common sense reasons which his self-respect as a business man indicated he should confute to his defense in making this important step; in reality they were merely a sop to his real reason for the step, which was a mad infatuation he mistook for love. Louise Hanchett's cold, classical beauty and Vere de Vere form, which she knew how to dress beautifully and in good taste, had so dazzled him that it never occurred to him to ask himself whether the object of his passion had wearing qualities; if she had common sense; if she was healthy and capable of bearing children; if she was of sound ancestry. However, there was some excuse for this carelessness in Mr. Gatlin's case, as, indeed, there is in the case of all but superman. Engaged as he was in the retail shoe business, he had never heard of Mendel's law, and if anybody, in conversation with him, had mentioned genetics, he would doubtless have thought that they were some new form of athletic contrivance. The only practical information he had on the Hanchett family was that Mrs. Hanchett was a shrew, that Mr. Hanchett was a middle-aged man whose head was bloody and bowed; that Louise was unhappy at home.

In Mr. Gatlin the protective instinct, abundant in all males, was particularly well developed; so he yearned to provide Louise with the happiness he knew she had missed and which he, thank God, was able to provide—for he possessed also the usual amount of masculine ego.

Following two years of married life, during which he strove manfully to accomplish the impossible, Mr. Theodore Gatlin went into a mental haze. Six months of this and he became peevish. He wanted a child—and when at last he realized that, in the phraseology of his times, there was nothing doing, there was born in him the first coherent thought he had ever had on the subject of matrimony. He told himself that he was sick unto death striving to be a good husband and acquiring no merit because of his efforts. He told himself he had a house but not a home; that Louise had "taken after her mother," which meant that he had taken after his afflicted father-in-law!

He gave considerable thought to the subject and finally decided that Louise would be all right if she only had something to occupy her mind. She sought happiness and blamed him because she could not find it. Mr. Gatlin did not know where happiness might be found, but inasmuch as he was moderately certain of peace of mind while attending to his business, he had a hazy impression that happiness is not infrequently found in securing a job and working at it. So when a physician informed him that his hopes of fatherhood were not apt to be realized he had a brilliant idea and broached it to Mrs. Gatlin.

"Let's adopt a baby!" he urged. Louise demurred. She had her doubts as to the advisability of taking over somebody's else troubles—one never knew how an adopted baby was going to turn out—there was no hurry, anyhow—she must have time to consider the idea—her health.

"To h—l with your health!" Mr. Gatlin roared, for the first time in his married life becoming vulgar. "Every doctor you've had tells me you're organically sound. You only think you're sick."

"My nerves," she protested, but he silenced her.

"You think too much about yourself and not at all about anybody else, particularly me. What you need is a baby to fuss with. You'll learn to love it in a month as much as if it was your own flesh and blood."

"I'm afraid you'll not love it, Theodore. You're so cranky and irritable," she defended.

"Listen!" Mr. Gatlin commanded. "I'm at the point where I'm seriously considering suing you for divorce on the grounds that you're a barren woman. In other ways you don't measure up to my idea of a wife and companion. It's no fun for me to come home night after night and have to listen to your tales of woe—"

"You are devoid of sympathy," his wife charged. "You neglect me. 'Maybe I've failed,' said Mr. Gatlin, 'but by jimmie, I've tried, and I'm willing to keep on trying a little longer. Only, from now on, we're going to try my methods, and adopting a baby is one of them. If that fails I'll take the baby over myself and we'll call in the lawyers.'"

She knew she had gone as far as she dared. Even the dullest of married women know when that point is reached; that is, they know when it has been reached for that day.

"Well, if we can find a baby of good, sound, intelligent, healthy parentage," she assented grudgingly.

"I've got one staked out," Mr. Gatlin cried joyfully, "and I know its parents. They're sound as grindstones. I know the grandparents of the child on both sides."

"I don't know them personally," he went on, "but I've had a doctor look up their records. High class people. No insanity and no crookedness in them."

"I'll have to meet these grandparents and parents, Theodore."

"Unfortunately," he replied, "they're all dead."

"What did they die of?"

"The grandparents on both sides, of old age; the father of the baby was an army captain and he got killed in a fight in the Sulu Islands. The mother died in childbirth and the baby is in the infants' shelter in San Francisco."

"Boy or girl, Theodore?"

"Boy."

"I could never stand a boy, Theodore. I must have a girl."

Mr. Gatlin grinned evilly. "I figured you'd try to edge out of it that way. It isn't a boy. It's a girl."

Louise Gatlin was not very intelligent, but she was sufficiently so to realize that for once in his life Mr. Gatlin was due to have his own way. That night as he lay abed, Mr. Gatlin suddenly gave himself a prodigious poke in the ribs. "What a jackass I was not to consult that doctor before I married Louise," he groaned. "When I thought I could father a child of my own I didn't pay any more attention to its ancestry than I would to selecting a necktie. Anything that looked well would fill the bill. But when it came to selecting some other man's baby, I gave the job all the attention I would give to the purchase of a piece of property. I wouldn't think of buying a lot until I had run down the record of the title and satisfied myself there were no flaws in it. If men would only employ that much common sense in selecting their wives—or wives, in selecting their husbands—I know what a nervous, complaining, selfish old shrew her mother was—what's that law the doctor spoke of? Ah, yes. Mendel's law. The law that like shall produce like. Simple! Natural! Any fool should have thought of that—and yet it took an old monk—a celibate—to promulgate the news. Whew—w—w—w—"

"Theodore," said his wife, from the other twin bed, "I should think you might be more considerate of me than to whistle like that and wake me up."

"I'm so happy, darling, I couldn't help it. Forgive me."

"Have you thought of a name for the baby?"

"I have. Penelope."

"A horrid name. Where under heaven did you get that name?"

To her unspeakable amazement he quoted a verse from Henry Herbert Knibbs' poem, "Out There Somewhere."

We'll dance a merry saraband from here to drowsy Samarkand:

Along the sea, across the land, the birds are flying south. And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me. With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

They went by train to San Francisco next day. With the child in his arms and accompanied by his wife and the lady manager of the infants' shelter, Mr. Gatlin repaired to the Superior court and legally adopted the daughter of Capt. Ronald Elliot and Janet Elliot, both deceased.

From the courtroom they went to Grace cathedral and had her baptized in the Episcopal faith—out of courtesy to Mrs. Gatlin's latest religious fancies, Mr. Gatlin having no religious affiliations whatsoever. There was a slight hiatus here. The pastor had just sprinkled water on the little dark head and said: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and give thee the name of—" when Mrs. Gatlin interrupted softly: "Lucrateria."

"Nothing doing," Mr. Gatlin declared. "Lucrateria! Wasn't that the woman that poisoned people—a wop woman? Her name shall be Penelope. I like that name."

The pastor smiled faintly. Having already sensed that all of the enthusiasm for the child was Mr. Gatlin's, he was seized with a perverse desire to please the sentimental fellow, so he said quickly: "—and give thee the name of Penelope."

Mr. Gatlin hugged Penelope to him and kissed her back of the left ear.

"You mustn't kiss her, Theodore," his wife protested. "Kissing is unsanitary. You might give her some sort of disease."

"Oh, lord," Mr. Gatlin murmured, "will I ever cease making hideous mistakes?"

For in that illuminating instant he realized that in adopting Penelope he had made a terrible mistake. His wife didn't want her! At the very moment of the commencement of his experiment he knew it was a failure. However, it was no part of his wife's intention (at least for the present) that he should realize this, so she took the baby from him.

Within a week, Theodore Gatlin, having communicated with the adjutant general of the army at Washington, ascertained that Capt. Ronald Elliot's body had been brought home from the island of Sulu and interred in the national cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco. So he had Penelope's mother disinterred from the Potter's field and reinterred beside the soldier, after which he gave orders for the erection of a suitable monument over them.

Viewing him from every angle, he was a most peculiar retail shoe dealer. For a month all went well with the Gatlins, and then Mrs. Gatlin issued her fiat.

"Theodore," she said, "I must insist on one thing. Penelope must never know that you and I are not her natural parents. I feel that such knowledge might detract from her love for us."

"That won't work any hardship on me, my dear," he replied. "I feel just as enthusiastic about her as if I were her real father."

"Another thing, Theodore. I love Penelope dearly, as you know, but I can't be made a slave to her. Do you realize, dear, how she keeps me tied down?"

He gritted his teeth, and his wife went on: "We simply must have a nurse for her."

"Have two of 'em," he growled. "Whatever she needs she shall have."

"That's right. Start spoiling her immediately."

It was always like that. However, as the child developed, she brought Mr. Gatlin each day closer to happiness than he had ever before. She was his refuge. She was a healthy baby and hence a happy baby, and there was not the slightest chance that she would ever be spoiled by having her own wishes perennially deferred to. If Louise Gatlin accomplished nothing else worth while (and this she accomplished unconsciously) she did nothing to inflate Penelope's ego, which, as everybody knows, is the breeding ground of human selfishness, which, in turn, accounts for the unhappiness of most of humanity. Mr. Gatlin, of course, would have undone, in secret, much of this good work, had not the realization come to him quite early in Penelope's little girlhood that any demonstration of excessive affection on his part was inevitably counteracted by an excessive severity on the part of his wife toward the child.

She was a pretty child, of olive complexion, with very dark blue eyes and rich, shiny, jet black hair. She was unusually intelligent and affectionate, of quick sympathy and winning, gracious ways. She was the apple of Mr. Gatlin's eye, and by the time she was ten years old he no longer cared a snap of his finger for his wife.

If Penelope was Mr. Gatlin's refuge, he also was hers. She never complained to him—doubtless because she feared her foster mother, who had succeeded in inculcating in the child a duty complex quite out of proportion to the lady's deserts. Nevertheless it was understood between them that they were a pair of outlaws; mutual sympathy drew them closer together each day; their mutual love was a sweet and holy sentiment.

Mr. Gatlin's nerves did not improve through the years, although, when Penelope was ten years old, a wandering evangelist came to town and commenced a furious campaign of conversion and curing by prayer every disease that flesh is heir to; and Mrs. Gatlin became "converted." Thereafter, life for Mr. Gatlin and Penelope became almost unbearable.

In a moment of insane fury, Mr. Gatlin performed what he considered a long neglected duty. He took Mrs. Gat-lin's classical countenance in both hands, bumped her head repeatedly against the wall and told her that if she ever opened her mouth again in his presence without his permission he'd just about kill her. She didn't. She sued him for divorce and had Penelope on the witness stand to prove that Mr. Gatlin had beaten her; that he had remained away from home until late at night and refused to reveal his rendezvous. Mr. Gatlin entered a cross-complaint and petitioned to have Penelope allocated to him.

Unfortunately the judge was a pudding-head. He refused to accept Mr. Gatlin's explanation that he had laid hands on Mrs. Gatlin but once, and that only in a moment of frenzy. But he did not state where he had been in the habit of spending his evenings so suspiciously. He couldn't afford to. He was a prominent business man. However, the judge should have known. Probably he did, but even so he was unsympathetic. He granted Mrs. Gatlin the divorce, liberal alimony and the custody of Penelope; whereupon the honorable court was treated to the spectacle of Mr. Gatlin and Penelope weeping in each other's arms. However, Mr. Gatlin was permitted to have Penelope to himself two Sunday afternoons in each month and one-half of each school vacation.

KENTUCKY FARMERS

Vote To Continue Corn-Hog Program

Kentucky farmers, in a statewide poll, voted in favor of continuing the corn-hog adjustment program.

On the question, "Do you favor an adjustment program dealing with corn and hogs in 1935?" 8,313 contract signers voted "yes" and 654 contract signers voted "no." A total of 488 farmers who did not sign corn-hog contracts voted for the program next year, while 138 non-signers voted against it.

On the question of a one-contract-per-farm adjustment program, to become effective in 1936, 6,857 contract signers voted in the affirmative, and 1,360 contract signers voted against it. Three hundred and seventy-one non-signers favored the one-contract plan and 172 non-signers voted against it.

Approximately 24,000 Kentucky farmers signed corn-hog adjustment contracts.

An outbreak of blackleg among cattle in Powell county has been checked by vaccinating all cattle in the community where it started.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Is Taught By Experts of Red Cross

"Training the public in first aid measures is one of the most important tasks of the American Red Cross drive today. The roll call membership enrollment opens on Armistice Day, Sunday, Nov. 11th, and from its proceeds this and other services of the Red Cross are supported."

"Two results have been noted time and again in the groups to which Red Cross training has been given," he continued. "First, there is a marked decrease in the number of accidents, as a result of the accident-consciousness the training has developed; and second, there is a lessening of grave consequences such as death or permanent crippling in many cases where proper first aid measures were used by those near the scene of the accident."

"First aid as interpreted by the Red Cross is the practical application of the age-old habit of neighborliness in time of distress. Accidental injuries have, always been incurred by active people, and doubtless they will always happen. Yet even with modern civilization developing new hazards, the rate of accidents is not commensurate with the increasing danger, because of the modern demand that proper safeguards be provided for all machinery and that carelessness be prevented on the part of the human beings who use the machines."

"All of us who drive or ride in automobiles should also be concerned over the great hazards on the American highways. Approximately 30,000 men, women and children are killed on our highways every year—a terrific toll, a number equal to the inhabitants in a middle sized city. And this doesn't take into account the maimed, the many injured for life, and the suffering and great waste entailed by these accidents."

"The Red Cross is giving much attention to this grave problem. Highway stations are being established so that quick and efficient aid can be given to the injured; members of the highway patrols, fire departments and rescue squads have completed the required Red Cross courses in first aid and they, so frequently the first on the scene after the accident, are able to do what should be done before medical help arrives, giving the injured a much better chance for recovery. The state highway police and members of rescue squads thus prevent needless suffering and danger after accidents have occurred, and they serve also as a check on the recklessness which might result in even more numerous casualties. The daily practical value of Red Cross first aid appeals to practical-minded men everywhere, and a total of 130,900 persons were trained and certified in Red Cross first aid and life saving courses last year.

"The federal government this year called on the Red Cross for instruction for men in Civilian Conservation Corps camps and on Civil Public Works projects. These requests give an official governmental endorsement of Red Cross accident prevention and have been a matter of satisfaction to Red Cross officials that all requests have been promptly and adequately met."

"Sponsored by the National Red Cross, under the instruction of Mr. C. H. Redmon, their representative, a swimming class was held this year at the Bourbon County Y. M. C. A. and certificates and emblems in life saving were awarded to seven seniors and five juniors."

"Funds must be available for similar calls in the next 12 months, and we feel sure that the Boone County Chapter will, as always, respond to the need of enrolling a big membership for the coming year."

MORE THAN 7,000,000 DROUTH CATTLE BOUGHT

Washington, Oct. 30.—The government has bought almost one-sixth of all the cattle in the twenty-four drouth states.

AAA sources disclosed the result of the cattle-purchasing campaign today. More than 7,000,000 have been bought, out of a total of 45,598,050 in the 24 states. The government has paid $90,379,155 out of $101,217,500 appropriated for the purpose. The average price was about $13.

Of the purchases about 1,100,000 were destroyed on the farm as unfit for food. Huge inroads on the cattle herd of several states were noted in the official tabulation.

Texas leads in cattle purchased. There the government has bought 1,388,702 of the estimated 6,603,702 in the state, paying an average of $12.06 per head or a total outlay of $16,744,969.

LIGHT VOTE CAST

IN ELECTION HELD TUESDAY OF LAST WEEK—FIFTH DISTRICT TO BE REPRESENTED BY BRENT SPENCE, PRESENT INCUMBENT.

Tuesday, November 6, was an ideal day. The weather was made for an election and yet a very light vote was cast in the county. It is true there wasn't much to get excited about in this district as there were few offices to be filled and not much doubt about the result of these. The Fifth Congressional District of which Boone is a part cast its vote heavily for the Roosevelt Administration by electing Hon. Brent Spence to Congress by an overwhelming vote. The Northern Kentucky Judicial District elected Judge W. H. Rees, Democratic candidate, to the Court of Appeals by a large and very decided majority. This was about the extent of the voting.

The returns from the election in Boone county for all officers were as follows:

TIME EXTENDED ONE WEEK FOR COCA-COLA BASKETBALL ENTRIES

Independent basketball 11 teams planning to enter the Coca-Cola Senior Basketball Championship will have an extra week in which to file their entries. Because so many of the teams reported that they needed additional time in which to round up the strongest possible squads, the entry deadline has been advanced one week to Nov. 21.

Entry blanks and complete information on the Championship will be mailed upon request to the Secretary, Coca-Cola Championship, 520 E. 5th St., Cincinnati, O.

It is not necessary for a team to have a home gym to enter. Those clubs which are unable to secure a home floor will be entered as traveling clubs, with all games scheduled on floors of nearby rivals.

Prizes for the Coca-Cola Championship aggregate $2,500 in cash and equipment. The season will open early in December.

FLORENCE FIVE

TO MEET CRESCENT SPRINGS FRIDAY NIGHT AT FLORENCE GYM—WILL BE GOOD GAME ACCORDING TO ALL "DOPE" OBTAINABLE.

The strong Crescent Springs basketball teams will appear Friday night on the Florence High School floor to engage the Florence Hi boys' and girls' teams. The public will no doubt remember that Crescent Springs had one of the strongest teams of last season in Northern Kentucky and was a contender at the regional meeting for state honors. It is reported that most of the old players are back this year and that the Florence boys and girls will run up against stiff opposition in their games of this coming Friday night. In preparation for this, Coach Allphin has made several changes in the line-up, especially in connection with defensive and offensive plays. The game will begin at 8 o'clock, fast time.

Principal Davis reports that fine sportsmanship was displayed by the Hamilton teams last Friday night. He also stated that Hamilton boys were entitled to full credit for winning the game, since they outplayed the Florence boys at every angle of the game.

DEMOCRATS SCORE

VICTORY IN KENTUCKY—ONLY ONE REPUBLICAN ELECTED—COURT OF APPEALS ENTIRELY DEMOCRATIC FOR FIRST TIME IN MANY YEARS.

The results of the election Tuesday in Kentucky indicated that the Democratic party is in full swing and that the voters for the most part wished to show their loyalty and support to the National Administration. The only spot where the Democrats did not show a large majority was in the Ninth District which is largely overwhelmingly Republican. The Court of Appeals is now completely Democratic for the first time in many years.

The new Kentucky congressional delegation and the majorities they received in their districts are:

First, V. J. Voris Gregory, Democrat, Mayfield, 6,932; Second, Glover H. Cary, Democrat, Owensboro, plurality over two minor candidates (no Republican nominee), 12,310; Third, Emmet O'Neal, Democrat, Louisville, 11,659; Fourth, Captain R. Carden, Democrat, 1,840; Fifth, Brent Spence, Democrat, Port Thomas, 13,035; Sixth, Virgil Chapman, Democrat, Paris, 12,230; Seventh, A. J. "Jack" May, Prestonburg, 3,520; Eighth, Fred M. Vinson, Democrat, Ashland, 11,238; Ninth, John M. Robison, Republican, Barboursville, 29,693.

In the Appellate Court races, Judge Gus Thomas, Democrat, Mayfield, was returned without opposition in the First; Wesley Vick Perry, Democrat, Russellville, without opposition in the Second; Jas. W. Stites, Democrat, Louisville, in the Third, 3,775, and Chief Justice W. H. Rees Maysville, Democrat, defeated Russell N. Victor, Republican, Erlanger, by 13,832 in the Sixth. Incumbents held over in the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh.

ROSE UNION MEETS AT BURLINGTON

The Rose Union met at the Burlington M. E. church South, Monday, Nov. 12. The Union which was named after Rev. F. D. Rose, the Presiding Elder of the Covington District, is composed of the Young People's Divisions of the Methodist churches in Erlanger, Florence, Walton, Versailles and Burlington.

After devotional services and a business meeting at the church, the group continued its program at the Burlington school. The ladies of the Burlington church had prepared a banquet for the young people. Prof. Norris served as toastmaster. The young people from the various churches responded with songs and impromptu speeches. A good time was enjoyed by everyone.

The Erlanger group with 37 present, had the largest delegation; Burlington was second with 31. The next Union meeting will be held in Florence the second Monday in December.

LARGE NUMBER

OF NEW MEMBERS ENROLLED IN FLORENCE P. T. A. LAST WEEK—ONE HUNDRED NEW MEMBERS IS GOAL OF ORGANIZATION.

The Florence P. T. A. last week had the banner meeting in the history of the organization. This was due to the fact that thirty-six new members were enrolled at this one meeting. There were thirty-four members present. The goal of the P. T. A. this year is to enroll 100 new members and from the great interest shown it would appear that this aim will be realized. There isn't any question but that the Florence citizens have the right spirit toward the improvement and success of their schools.

At the last P. T. A. meeting a fine program was rendered. Mr. Cora Acra, a former principal of schools, gave a most interesting talk. He spoke on the subject, "Relationship that Should Exist Between the Parent and the School." Miss Helen Taylor gave a reading which was greatly enjoyed by all present. There followed community singing of old time songs by all the members. With a finer school spirit could not be shown anywhere.

The program for the next meeting in December will be published in a future issue of the Recorder. It is already announced that an out of town speaker has been secured.

FISCAL COURT MEETS

A meeting of the Fiscal Court which was postponed on account of the election was held at the Court House Tuesday of this week. The meeting was taken up with the regular routine of business. Nothing of special importance was up for consideration, and no new business was brought before the Court. After the bills were approved and paid the Court adjourned.

CONSTANCE GIRL

WINS GENERAL SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST AT RECENT STATE RURAL SCHOOL TOURNAMENT—FOURTH TIME COUNTY HAS WON THIS HONOR.

The Recorder is pleased to make special mention of the fact that the general scholarship honor at the Lexington tournament went to a Boone county girl.

Miss Ruth Kottmyer, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kottmyer, Jr., Constance, Boone County, won first honors in general scholarship at the recent State rural school tournament held at the University of Kentucky, Lexington. The general scholarship honor is the highest achievement honor attained by any individual in the state contest.

Boone County has won the state scholarship championship four times in the last five years, three times the pupil being from Constance school and once a representative of the Burlington school.

By winning in general scholarship Miss Kottmyer aided her county to take first place in scholarship and general efficiency. The Constance school, which Miss Kottmyer attends, made more points in scholarship than any other school in the state. She is in the eighth grade.

TESTING WORK

STARTED ON FEDERAL BANGS DISEASE ELIMINATION PROJECT IN BOONE COUNTY—DR. KENNETH RYLE, VETERINARIAN IS DOING WORK.

Testing work on the Federal Bangs Disease elimination project began in Boone county last Wednesday, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. The testing work is being done by Dr. Kenneth Ryle, Veterinarian, of Burlington, working under the supervision of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Fifty-six dairymen owning 1120 cows have to date requested their herds be tested. Herds will be tested only on request and agreement by the cooperating herd owner. He agrees to sell for slaughter all animals that react. All animals are tested which are six months old or older. The Government will pay for animals reacting and condemned on the appraised value up to $20.00 for grades and $50.00 for registered animals.

The owner receives the salvage or what the animal brings on the market in addition to the Government payment up to the appraisal value.

This project presents a golden opportunity for every dairyman. Boone county herds as in most dairy sections is heavily infected with Bangs disease. Experiments show us that cows or herds do not produce their best when infected with this disease. It is possible to have a clean herd and keep a clean herd.

This is the first time the government has been able to cooperate and pay the owner to clean his herd when it would pay him to do it himself. Many dairymen whose herds have never known to be affected are having their herds tested as a guarantee to themselves and their neighbors. There is no cost for the testing.

BOONE COUNTY TEACHERS ATTEND EDUCATIONAL MEETING IN NEWPORT

The school kids got a break Friday when the Boone Co. Schools were closed to permit the teachers to attend the Northern Kentucky Education Association meeting held in the high school auditorium in Newport, Ky. Practically all the teachers in the county were in attendance and they report a very enthusiastic and worthwhile meeting. The meeting held over through Saturday.

A number of Kentucky's most able schoolmen were on the program as well as speakers from outside the state. These meetings each year are decidedly of great value to the teachers. They are quite inspirational and of much social value. After attending an association of this kind the teachers as a rule return to their work with more courage and better spirit.

TOBACCO DAY

ENJOYED BY TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE AT CARROLLTON MONDAY—EVERYTHING FREE TO VISITORS—GROWERS EXCEEDED ALLOTMENT.

Carrollton was in holiday mood Monday as thousands of tobacco growers and their friends gathered to celebrate the fact one of the finest tobacco crops ever raised in that section is stored safely in the curing barns.

The metropolis that prides itself on being the "City of Beauty and Business" had a gala program ready for the visitors.

Ready also were huge pots of Kentucky burgoo, made as only J. T. Loorey, the "Burgoo King" can make it. There was burgoo for all attending.

A big parade with floats representing more than a dozen business establishments, and the membership of several organizations in the line of march, was a highlight of the festivities. The Carroll county market area's tobacco crop was so great that many growers exceeded their allotment under their government agreement. In these cases the surplus will be spread back on the soil for fertilizer.

IN UNION THERE IS STRENGTH

Too many farmers exist solely as individuals and have no one to speak for them. In brief agriculture lacks centralized authorities of the farmer's own choosing, who could exert continued and aggressive efforts to bettering his status.

That is true of the majority of farmers. But a minority of farm producers have a different story to present. These farmers have joined in creating great organizations. And no one who has watched agriculture during recent years can help but be impressed by the progress these associations have made. Dealing in milk, cotton, fruits and other products, they have met and solved many problems. They have had their ups and downs. While they haven't brought about an agricultural millennium, members of these cooperative farm organizations have had a much happier time of it than have unorganized farmers.

The old saying that "In union there is strength," was never more apt than it is today—and it goes for farmers as well as all other workers and producers.

YOUR BREAD AND BUTTER

The greatest service being rendered to our country today by editors, is their help in awakening the people to the fact that the people are the government, that the constitution which protects them is the greatest document in the world guaranteeing life, liberty and pursuit of happiness in social land business activity, and that encroachments and limitations which are made on it detract from the opportunities of our citizens.

The safety of American property rights lies in a widespread and general understanding of these simple basic propositions.

THE FALL BONFIRE

In every village the fall bonfire is a public institution. The blue tinted smoke curls lazily up to heaven from the smoldering leaves and vines. It is not a wholly popular institution, since the householder often lights the heaped up pile without asking whether the smoke is going to blow on the clothes line next door.

The fall bonfire gets rid of a vast amount of rubbish. If your dead leaves and faded vines and plants go up in smoke, they aren't littering up your home place with their unsightly refuse.

As those cheerful flames begin to dance, the kid element flocks from all quarters. In the good old days, the householder had a way of sticking a few apples and potatoes into the heap. The roasted fruit extricated later from the ashes tasted better than the epicure's food. It made Junior feel as if he were a mighty big chief, living an Indian life amid the wilds.

SUPPORT THE RED CROSS

The Recorder is not informed as to the plans for the Red Cross in Boone county this year. Since Miss Eunie Willis is temporarily absent from the county we assume that other arrangements will be made. In all places with which we are familiar the Red Cross has always done fine work and was a cause which everyone could support 100 per cent.

The Red Cross is in touch with the needs of those who have been affected by the depression of the last few years, and has always given ready response to meet those needs. The organization's program is so flexible that it meets disasters of all kinds and provides means through which epidemics and disasters may be prevented. Boone county needs the permanent structure of the Red Cross as it needs the expert service which is at our command to meet whatever emergencies the coming year may bring.

A strong Red Cross organization should be maintained here. Former members should renew their membership, and urge those who have never hitherto been members to enroll their names with those who are fighting disease, disaster, and need under the banner of the American Red Cross.

Fireside Thoughts

We are willing to publish any letters addressed to the Recorder providing they are signed. We will not publish the name of the author if he prefers that it not be done. We would be glad to include these letters under some such heading as "Our Mail Box." If our subscribers wish to praise or criticize any local movement or organization they are at liberty to do so in these columns. Of course we reserve the right to judge the fitness of any such letters in accordance with what we think should appear in a paper of our type.

We have an interest in all the classes that have graduated from our County High Schools but we naturally have a keener interest in the Class of 1921 of the Boone Co. High School, Burlington. This is due to the fact that this class graduated under our principalship. Four members of this class called on us recently and we are glad to note that all of them have made fine progress in the world. The four were Robert Clore, Clayton Brown, Cora Acra and Mary Bess Cropper.

We have been told by persons outside of the county that it doesn't pay for a law violator to "pull his stuff" in Boone county. That, if he does, he may expect to be handled strictly in accordance with the law and that for this reason most people who have shady deals to put over sidetrack Boone county. We think this is a wonderful compliment to our officials and to the fine citizenship of this county who evidently are backing up the law-enforcing officers.

We often wonder how the younger generation would manage to talk if it were not for the phrase "O. K." At one conversational turn it is "O. K." this and "O. K." that, until we hope we shall never hear the slang phrase again. We never recall hearing one so universally used as this one. The other day we said something or other to a little five-year-old girl. She promptly replied "O. K." She had already gone "modern." Slang is generally used when people haven't the vocabulary to express themselves otherwise.

One of the mysteries of our present existence is how all the gas stations and tourists camps on a through highway keep going financially. On any state or national highway there seems to be more stations and camps than there are farms. However, with 26,000,000 cars cruising around over the face of the UNITED STATES, we suppose there is enough business for everybody. At least we hope so.

Speaking of through highways reminds us of the fact that we stood this week at an intersection of Highway No. 25 in Florence. It was about seven o'clock in the evening. We saw so many cars and trucks speeding by that we thought we would count them for a five-minute period of time. We counted thirty-seven in that given time. We do not know if this number was above or below the average. However, it set us to thinking that perhaps the times are getting better faster than we appreciate. Especially so many trucks would indicate that there was a great deal of business being transacted by somebody.

We attended the basketball games Friday night between the Florence and Hamilton High Schools. The boys' game turned out to be a thriller but we do not wish to comment on the game itself since that will be covered in another column. We do wish to say here, however, that we were most favorably impressed by the fine order that was maintained, by the keen interest that was shown by the citizens of the community, and by the fine spirit and behavior of the student body. It does us good to see young people of high school and grade age enjoy themselves so vigorously in so wholesome an environment. Youth is the greatest period of life and they must be permitted to enjoy it.

Editorial of the Week

THE PRESIDENT AND THE BANKERS

(The Kentucky-Citizen)
President Roosevelt reminded bankers in his address to the American Bankers Association, that "In March 1933, I asked the people to renew their confidence in the banks. They took me at my word. Tonight I ask the bankers of the country to renew their confidence in the people of this country. I hope you will take me at my word."

A pertinent observation indeed and a logical preface to the request that there be increased co-operation from bankers in supplying the credit needs of the nation. Recent developments indicate that the antagonism in banking circles toward the national administration is being allayed, that there is increased reason to anticipate that team work which may be expressed in an "alliance of all forces intent upon the business of recovery."

There are bankers who assert they are making all loans that are secure. Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in addressing the bankers, disputed that contention as he advised making of loans that would "need to be indulged."

The fact that 59 percent of the loans made to banks by the RFC to aid banks and business, stimulate recovery, is being re-paid too fast, according to Mr. Jones. Figures recently given out disclose that since July 1 the RFC has received in repaid loans $126,000,000 more than it has loaned out. The government prefers that borrowers mostly banks, try to find avenues through which the money can be put to work, creating more activity, more employment, stimulating activity.

Mr. Jones paid a deserved tribute to the country bankers, who in the main have been more co-operative than the big financial institutions. There is gratifying evidence of an understanding being reached that will result in a more sympathetic attitude from the big city banks toward recovery activities. As that condition improves it can but have a stimulative effect that will be helpful in hastening the day of better times.

90, Sees First Basketball Game

After waiting 90 years, "Uncle" Jack Rowe last week saw his first basketball game when Fed's Creek high school played Majestic high on the home court. In the short time of one game "Uncle" Jack developed into a fan. He cheered and yelled and asked about the score. His enthusiasm may be explained by the score being 14-11 in the home team's favor.—Pike County News, Pikeville.

Pear Weighs 11-2 Pounds

Mr. J. D. Cooper, who owns a large pear orchard near the city, brought a number of the pears to the Clarion office this week, that tipped the scales at one and one-half pounds. Mr. Cooper had approximately 1,500 bushels of pears in his orchard this year, and has disposed of the greater part of them.—Hancock Clarion, Hawesville.

Should Be Prize Winner

One of the largest sweet potatoes even seen in this section was brought to The Advocate office Tuesday. It weighed a total of 12 1-2 pounds and was grown at Waverly by Aubrey Gray, son of Dr. T. P. Gray.

Gray said no special efforts had been made, nor any fertilizer used to promote growth of the huge potato, and that there were several others in the same hill almost as large as the one brought here. It will be on display at the fall festival in Sturgis.—Union County Advocate, Morganfield.

Another Big Turnip Reported

We are indebted to Mr. Oscar Dunning for a monster turnip, which he, in company with R. A. Rogers, brought to this office last week. The big vegetable resembled a pumpkin, being 7 pounds in weight, and measuring 26 and a half inches in circumference. It was smooth and solid; according to Mr. Turner it was of the Purple Top White Globe variety, and was raised by him on his farm near Pleasant Grove church on Hopkinstown road.—Leader, Princeton.

Everything But Feathers

Miss Maud Wilkerson, of the Beech Grove community, brought into the Record-Herald office Saturday a sweet potato bird. The potato formation is almost complete with the exception of feathers and a beak. With these attachments the potato forms visually a complete bird. The bird is on display in the window of the Record-Herald office.—Record-Herald, Greensburg.

Clean Sweep Without Lights

Dr. R. L. Layman, local bowling enthusiast, performed an unusual feat last Saturday night at the Elizabethtown Recreation Hall. He made a "three-pin spare" in the dark. Of course it may have been luck, but at that it was unusual luck.

Lights at the hall went out for several minutes just as Dr. Layman prepared to bowl. He announced he would play despite the dark, knocking down seven pins on his first roll. After being told the general location of the three remaining pins he rolled again and knocked them down.—Hardin County Enterprise, Elizabethtown.

READ THE CONSTITUTION

It would be interesting to know how many Americans have read the Constitution of the United States, the document upon which the republic was built, since they passed out of school.

The chances are that far less than ten per cent could honestly say that they have read it. They have seen a few quotations from it in articles and editorials; they know vaguely that its purpose is to guarantee liberty and opportunity for all, and to assure stable, representative government, and that's about all they know.

There never was a time when a general study of the Constitution would be so valuable as now. Today it is being criticized, it is accused of the crime of antiquity, and those who would change it say it has outlived its usefulness. The results of these attacks on the Constitution are already reflected in legislation and in governmental procedure—liberties, rights, privileges, for which our ancestors fought and died, are endangered. In other countries, similar constitutional guarantees have been thrown over-board and the final result has been invariably dictatorship. It should be everlastingly kept in mind that the Constitution is the bulwark that stands between us and one "ism" or another.

Read the Constitution, paying especial attention to the sections which compose the Bill of Rights. Those sections reflect all that man has striven for through thousands of years of turmoil—the widest possible liberty, the right to live as an individual, dominated by none. If the Constitution is out-of-date, so is the cause of human freedom.

ANOTHER GANGSTER EXTERMINATED

The ugly career of "Pretty Boy" Floyd, notorious and elusive out-law, was ended by bullets fired by straight shooting, steel nerved agents of the department of justice. The elusive desperado to whom is attributed a dozen murders, more than a score of bank robberies and other major crimes, finally was tracked down like the rat he was and exterminated by relentless agents of the law as he fled after the command to halt had been ignored.

It is just as well that he did not halt, that he was done to death by the same ruthless method he had repeatedly employed in execution of his criminal exploits. It rids the nation of Public Enemy No. 1, saves the government the trouble and expense of a trial and legal execution.

The only possible advantage in having captured Floyd and given him legal trial and punishment, lays in the fact that there is a remote possibility he might have been persuaded to divulge information concerning his criminal associates. That is not likely, however, since it is the code of gangsters to go to death without revealing incriminating information.

There is much cause for gratification over the efficient manner in which the department of justice agents have been operating in recent months to rid the nation of its worst criminals. President Roosevelt's oft repeated pledge to rid the nation of these most dangerous characters is being fulfilled to a gratifying degree.

The department of justice secret service agents has been reorganized. Attorney General Cummings has given much thought to the problem of exterminating gangsters. Upon recommendation of his department federal legislation was enacted by the last congress which materially strengthens the hands of federal agents in their pursuit of outlaws.

We would like for you, Mr. Editor, to send down a delegation to sit up with Cal, Omer Adams and myself. I tell you, another such a land slide, and you will have to bury us instead of sitting up with us.

The young couple have many friends in this locality who desire for them all the happiness attending married life.

It is said that Rev. J. A. Kirtley desires to resign as pastor of the Bullittsburg church in order to move to Union, by which move he would greatly shorten his trips to Big Bone, where he desires to continue his pastoral services. Mr. Kirtley has been a faithful pastor of these two churches for many years and either of them would regret very much to lose him.

The baptism was attended by a large crowd on the 10th inst. The following were baptized: Fred and Chas. Birkle, Kenneth Aylor, Wesley Rice, Albert Snyder, Luther Huey, Leslie McMullen, Alpha Rogers, Nannie White, Arlie Ryle, Clayton Rogers, Ella Scott, Cordie Rice, Grace Sutton, Eva Botts, Pearl Allen, Lury Ryle and Maud Ryle, Miss Grace Rogers and Mrs. Anderson were baptized a few days previous.

J. J. Rucker of the Constance precinct was in town yesterday. He was nominated by the Republicans for Justice of the Peace in the sixth district, but withdrew from the ticket a few weeks before the election, and some one said to him yesterday that if he had remained on the ticket the landslide might have carried him safely through. "Yes," said he "that is the reason I withdrew, because I knew if I stayed on the ticket I would be elected."

Several from Petersburg attended the meeting at Bullittsville last Sunday night, among whom were John Jones, Lena and Blanch Evans, E. A. Stott and Stella and Ella McComas, Wade Tilly, J. S. Evans and your reporter. They listened to a very interesting sermon by Rev. Curry. After church we had the pleasure of forming the acquaintance of the Misses Clore and Stephens.

THE DROUTH

The sun has played havoc upon the ground. The trees are parched, the grass is brown;

No water trickles along the rills, No soil brings forth where the farmer tills.

Amid a whirlwind of dust and a blistering breeze, Both man and beast writhe and seethe,

A drooping shoulder and a swollen eye, Are both the result of a new temperature high.

Alas! a cloud in the Heavens soars! Lightning flashes and thunder roars!

A drop—and then a shower of rain, "Thank God"—The earth's relieved again.

TO GO TO COLLEGE

Raising 1,200 chickens at a profit of $500 is one way of getting to college. That is what Cyril Kelly, a Pendleton county 4-H club boy, did last summer. Now he is a student in the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Kelly rented an old log cabin across the road from his father's farm. In it he put roosts, ventilation and a floor. By using old lumber, he built two Kentucky-type houses at low cost.

"Following the advice of the county agent, Robert White, I purchased eggs from high-producing flocks," he said. "I also fed a balanced ration. We produced most of the feed on the farm. Broilers sold for 75 cents each and fryers for 50 cents. Eggs brought a fair price, too."

"It wasn't such a hard job, because I have been raising poultry for more than 10 years and know the knack of it."

Kelly plans to continue to pay at least a part of his way in college by raising chickens.

INCOME GREATER

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—Income of the federal government was $191,619,189 more the first quarter of this fiscal year than it was in the first quarter one year ago, representing an increase of 31 percent, according to Collector of Internal Revenue Seldon R. Glenn. The announcement was based on recent reports from Commissioner Guy Helvering.

Receipts in the first quarter this year, July 1 to Sept. 30 totalled $804,878,166 as compared with $613,225,977 in the same period in 1933. Corporation and individual income taxes returned $215,809,560 to the treasury as compared with $160,417,304 last year. That increase is construed as reflecting improved business conditions since income tax payments reflect the extent of profits being realized by capital.

Distilled spirits and wines showed an increase in revenue, yielding $38,251,158 this year as compared with $4,958,437 the previous year. Fermented malt liquor taxes produced $68,588,970 as against $44,646,646 in 1933.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

The November egg standard for the farm flock is 6 eggs per bird. Early hatched pullets should lay about 10 eggs each that month, and old hens one or two eggs, and the average for a flock of half hens and half pullets should be about 6 eggs.

Plenty of soft, clean water helps out on wash day. For each gallon of moderately hard water, add two tablespoons of a solution made by dissolving a pound of washing soda in a quart of water. Add water softer before using soap.

Examine hosiery with care before buying, especially noting the size of the foot, length of leg and elasticity of material. Cheap hose often have short measures. Full-fashioned hose has a seam up the back of the leg, at the bottom of the foot and across the toe.

Warm and dry quarters for hogs during winter pay big dividends. Hogs will not do well and make progress shivering about in the mud. They should have a dry floor in a barn, and be supplied with water of moderate temperature as well as proper feed.

While age is only one factor in the quality of seed, all old seed should be regarded with suspicion until it is proved to be good. Clovers are especially affected by age, and all old seed should be well tested before sowed.

HAMILTON HIGHLIGHTS

(Delayed)

Monday—A business meeting of the Honor Club was called to discuss plans for the party to be given at the school the night before Hallow'e'en.

Tuesday—The party was a great success and as everyone was required to masquerade, everything from hideous cripples, side-show barkers and tramps to cavaliers, ghosts and ladies of the gay 90's were in evidence. After prizes were awarded to the best costumed students, game were played, followed by a tempting Hallow'e'en lunch served by the faculty. This wound up the evening and ended the first of many social gatherings that the Honor Club intends to have this year.

Thursday—A contest, sponsored by the English IV class was held to determine the names of the basket ball teams this year. Margie Miller having submitted the names Hamilton "Farmers" and Hamilton "Farmerettes" won the contest and the prizes were awarded to her by Mr. Huey.

Friday—The first basket ball games of the 1934-35 season were held here tonight. The "Farmerettes" inaugurated the season and their new names splendidly, defeating the Independent Girls with a score of 29-22. The Hamilton "Farmers" dehorned the Warsaw "Blue Devils" and came back to Earth with a 30-10 victory. The "Blue Devils" come home again to Hamilton on Jan. 5th to make another attempt to subdue the "Farmers." In the meantime the "Farmers" and "Farmerettes" will journey to Florence Nov. 9th and entertain the "Tomcats" and "Kittens" of Burlington on the home court Nov. 16th.

The Hi-Y held their bi-monthly meeting this afternoon with Mr. Asbury as Club Advisor.

J. Wesley Palmer

Twelve purebred hens belonging to Mrs. E. R. Nowlin of Trimble county laid an average of 200 eggs each in 9 months.

NOW EASY TO MAKE GOOD OLD FASHIONED FARM PORK SAUSAGE

One of the thrills of country life is the rich aromatic smell of delicious country pork sausage as it is prepared for breakfast on a crisp, chilly fall morning.

In the past few years, the consumption of sausage has greatly increased among the good farmers of this county and their town customers, because the art of country sausage making has been greatly simplified, in fact made easy, even for those of little or no experience, by use of a popular blended sausage seasoning now on the market and obtainable at leading grocery stores in this county.

Scientific tests prove that fresh, wholesome pork sausage, properly made and seasoned, is not only easily digested but is one of the most nourishing foods obtainable. The digestibility and food value of pork sausage depends first, upon good meat, and second, upon proper seasoning. The skill and experience necessary to properly season pork sausage in the past, however, has often meant failure to the home sausage maker. But it doesn't anymore. Farmers may now obtain the proper seasoning, ready to use, a flavoring that brings out that good old country flavor and delicious aroma.

This seasoning is scientifically manufactured and blended according to chemical analysis of strength of the different spices. Its not just a mixture, but a scientific blend of spices, including pepper and salt. There is nothing to add. Simply mix the required amount with the meat and you have the most delicious zesty sausage you ever tasted.

This seasoning is approved by Good Housekeeping and each package bears the Good Housekeeping Institute label. Look for this label on the package, it is your guarantee of the best quality.

Hog killing time is here. Farm breakfast tables are inviting with tantalizing flavored pork sausage, eggs, griddle cakes, syrup and coffee. Farmers and town folks alike enjoy such a tasty, healthful, energy building breakfast. You may obtain sample and further information about this wonderful sausage seasoning from any of several leading food stores in this county.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they sat out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Penelope, relieved from business, would Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

The first Sunday afternoon Mr. Gatlin availed himself of this privilege, his quondam spouse had hysterics, for with the malice of a devil Mr. Gatlin announced he was taking Penelope to a ball game. He took her, too, and they had a gorgeous time together until a home run sailed into the bleachers and struck Penelope violently on her pretty little nose. Mr. Gatlin, with the unconscious form in his arms, fled to a hospital, where he was foolish enough to telephone Mrs. Gatlin what had occurred. She appeared on the scene and carried Penelope home at once.

Mr. Gatlin knew what she was up to. She was going to cure Penelope's fractured nose by faith—and he had no faith in such therapy. He followed with a doctor, demanding at the front door to be admitted—a request which was ignored. So he kicked in the panels of the front door, which he had no business to do because it was no longer his, Mrs. Gatlin having acquired it in the property settlement. Thereupon she summoned the police by telephone and had him arrested, and the next morning he was tried, found guilty and placed under bond of a thousand dollars to remain away from the place for one year.

He didn't do it, because he knew what would happen to Penelope if he did. And he could afford a thousand dollars—fifty thousand dollars if need be—to prevent that! He attacked within twenty-four hours—at night, but he was quiet about it. He remembered he had never surrendered his latchkey, so he entered quietly and kidnapped Penelope.

Within two hours he was arrested en route to a San Francisco hospital in a motor car with Penelope. For disobeying the magistrate, he was adjudged guilty of contempt of court, his bond of a thousand dollars forfeited—and he was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail. Mrs. Gatlin preferred a charge of kidnapping against him, which is a felony, and since Mr. Gatlin knew he would be tried on that charge when he emerged from jail he improved the shining hours by swearing to a warrant charging Mrs. Gatlin with insanity. Promptly she was brought before a board of alienists who declared her sane, and in order to avoid investigation into Mr. Gatlin's charge that she was denying Penelope medical attention, she turned her house over to an agent and disappeared—with Penelope.

From his cell in the county jail, Mr. Gatlin issued orders to his attorneys to find Penelope and take legal steps to prevent his ex-wife from removing

She would have what was coming to her or know the reason why.

When six months had passed, Mr. Gatlin decided that he had never been acquainted with her, for she failed to make any demand upon him for her alimony; hence he realized she preferred, by keeping Penelope from him, to cause him the maximum of suffering rather than reveal her whereabouts by making a claim for the alimony due her. A year and a day from the date of the granting of her interlocutory decree, her attorneys petitioned for the final decree, which was granted. Mr. Gatlin thereupon discovered she was living in Paris.

This news brought him no comfort. She was beyond reach of United States law. However, he had detectives place her under surveillance. They reported her as living alone, so Mr. Gatlin concluded she had placed Penelope in a school.

One day the detective agency sent him a very good snapshot of a little girl and asked him if this was the child he was seeking. The agency was unable to recognize in her the original of the photographs he had sent them.

When Mr. Gatlin gazed upon that photograph, he wept. Mrs. Gatlin's faith cure, as he had suspected it would, had proved wholly ineffective. In his agony, the words of the poem came back to him:

And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth.

He sold his retail shoe business and placed all of his assets in a trust fund, the income to be paid to him during his lifetime and to Penelope after his death. He saved out of this trust fund, however, ten thousand dollars, with which he purchased a letter of credit and a ticket to Cherbourg.

In the interim Mr. Gatlin's detectives had ascertained that Penelope was in a school in Switzerland; he planned to go to that school, abduct Penelope and—his plans were a trifle hazy, but he intended to mature them as he crossed the Atlantic. Once in possession of Penelope, he would see to it that she should never know unhappiness again, if any effort of his could prevent it. He was worth half a million dollars—half in cash and the remainder in real estate that was rapidly appreciating in value. He could afford to retire. They would go somewhere and lose themselves.

En route to the station—the first leg of his journey—the automobile in which he was riding was struck by another car and turned over. Mr. Gatlin was thrown out and suffered a basal fracture of the skull, from which he died six hours later.

CHAPTER II

Stephen Burt, M. D., was the sort of man whose waiting room always would have been crowded, even if he had not been one quarter as capable as his colleagues knew him to be. He was a man of sweet simplicity, absolute honesty and overwhelming sympathy; in short, he possessed the ideal personality for a successful physician.

Miss Lanning was his office nurse. In training schools for nurses—at least it was so in the hospital where Miss Lanning was trained—nurses and interns develop the sort of democracy and comradeship which delights in nicknames—and in dispensing with formality. Quite early in her professional career, therefore, Miss Lanning became known as Lanny. She was a not very good looking, capable, tremendously intelligent, forceful, driving person, exactly the type that would inevitably become an old maid.

When Lanny was thirty years old and Stephen Burt was sixteen, she had him for a patient. He had measles. "What a nice, well-mannered boy!" she thought, the first day she had him. "What a dear, indeed!" she reflected the second day. "What a good, kind, considerate patient!" she exclaimed to the doctor on the third day. "He must have had a sweet, sensible mother."

"Perhaps," the doctor had replied. "I never knew her and neither did the boy. She died at his birth. He's mar-raised. His father is an old friend and patient of mine."

"Has he a stepmother?" Even then, Lanny realized she would be a victim of a pang of jealousy if the doctor answered in the affirmative, for already the boy had aroused her maternal instinct. She was relieved to learn that his father had foisted no such trial upon the boy.

On the fourth day of his illness she called him "dearie." On the fifth day, when she proffered him castor oil, he rebelled; but when Lanny said: "Now, darling, I'll feel bad if you refuse to obey me," the boy had been instantly contrite.

"I'm sorry, Lanny," he apologized. "I'm a pig to oppose you." And then he groaned and took it—and Lanny kissed him and wanted to weep over him because he was such a dear and hadn't any mother—not even a step-mother!

"Lanny," he said to her on the seventh day, "do you know I love you a lot? I wish dad would marry you, so you could be with me all the time."

Lanny's heart swelled with the poignant grief of her baffled maternity at that honest boyish avowal.

On the eighth day he developed double pneumonia, as a sequel to the measles. He almost died—and so did Lanny. The doctor swore—and so did Stephen's father—that nothing but Lanny's devoted nursing brought him through. She wept the day she realized if she drew another day's salary as his nurse, she would be accepting money under false pretenses; and she wept on two counts. First, because she was leaving Stephen, and second, because Stephen's father insisted on being too grateful for her services.

"There is a reward due you, Miss Lanning," he told her, "over and beyond the trifling remuneration given you in exchange for your devoted services. That's a debt Steve and I can never repay, but the boy thinks we ought to make a pretense at payment and so do I." And he opened her hand-bag and slipped an envelope in it.

When she got back to the nurses' home, where she lived between calls, she discovered he had given her five thousand dollars! Young Stephen had already given her his photograph, indorsed: "To my dear Lanny, with love from Steve."

Nursing is the most personal and impersonal profession in the world. Lanny never expected to see Stephen Burt again, but she sent him at Christmas a four-ounce Fairy fishing rod from Hardy's in London. It cost her a month's wages. She knew his father was a fishing enthusiast and would probably inculcate the same enthusiasm in his boy. Steve had sent her roses on her birthday; and his love, by telephone, Christmas eve, together with an exquisite little watch to replace the dollar timepiece she used to count pulse beats. On New Year's day, a year later, he made a formal call and she was out on a case; so the day she was relieved she called upon him.

"Hello, Lanny," he said—and kissed her. "I wanted to see you to get some advice. Do you think, Lanny, that I'd make a half decent doctor?"

"God made you for a doctor," Lanny assured him. "You'll not have to be more than a mediocre doctor to be financially successful. You were born with the ideal personality."

"Thanks, Lanny. I want to be a doctor, but I want to be a good one, too, so you tell me what I am to do about it. I've just graduated from high school. Made the honor roll," he confessed shyly.

"How far up the honor roll?" Lanny's query had almost a fierce quality in it.

"Number one."

"And you were out of school two months of your last term. I'm proud of you, Steve."

"Where shall I go to college, Lanny?"

"Right here, in San Francisco."

"In that event you should attend a local university. You'll go to Stanford university," Lanny decided. "If you graduate with honor there you're bound to get an internship in Stanford University hospital. About two years of that and you'll know what you want to specialize in, so off you'll go for a post-graduate course in Berlin, Vienna and London for four years. Then you'll return and I'll be your office nurse and manager. How's that for a program?"

"Just dandy, Lanny."

"It means ten years of grind, Steve, but don't let that frighten you," she warned anxiously. "Once you know what you know and know that you know it, others will not be long discovering it also, and you'll be years ahead of the half-baked medical dunces this medical world is cursed with."

He flattered her immensely by taking her to luncheon and the matinee.

For the next four years Lanny did not see her boy, but he wrote her and remembered her at Christmas and on her birthdays. He was an honor graduate from the Leland Stanford Junior Medical school and was immediately given an internship at the University hospital in San Francisco. Inasmuch as Lanny frequently had patients at that hospital, they met several times a year. Lanny kept her ear to the ground, harkening to reports of his progress from worthwhile sources, and learned that he was regarded as a young doctor of distinct promise.

One day, after he had been two years an interne, they met in the corridor. "I've been wanting to see you, Steve," Lanny began without any preliminary fencing. "It's time for your postgraduate course in Europe."

"Impossible, Lanny! My father has had a frightful reversal of fortune. He's done a father's full duty by me and I'm not going to graft off him and perhaps sacrifice him in his old age. I'm self-supporting now and even saving a little from my salary. In a few years I shall be able to afford a modest office and go in for general practice."

"You've followed my program thus far and you'll continue until it's finished," Lanny announced. "I'll loan you the money. The five thousand dollars your father gave me has grown to seventy-five hundred dollars—and I've saved two thousand more, so I'm going to bank you, and you shall pay me six per cent on the money you borrow, and secure me by life insurance." She was thoughtful for a few moments. "Well, perhaps three years abroad will benefit you more than four years would an ordinary man. So we'll cut the program to three years. After all, you must have some comforts; you've got to live like a gentleman. You will resign here today and I'll have the money for you tomorrow."

"Oh, Lanny, you dear old sport, I can't do that!"

Thereupon Lanny struck him in a vital spot. Her stern and lonely soul was touched. Not often did she indulge herself in the weakness of tears, but they flooded her eyes now and her breast heaved.

He was always touched at the sight of suffering; the vast underlying sympathy in his nature would never have it otherwise. Abruptly she left him! She knew he would seek her out later, to protest at greater length, to avow himself her eternal debtor for the offer and again decline it.

He called upon her at her lodgings that night—and Lanny won. It was a hard battle, but when Lanny, so to speak, lowered her head and went in to win, usually she succeeded.

HOLDS KENTUCKY SHOULD UTILIZE NATIVE TREES TO BEAUTIFY ROADS

"Kentucky, so rich in lovely native trees, shrubs, and bluegrass, should utilize these to beautify the highways of the State," says the Greensburg Record-Herald.

"Redbud and dogwood, together with our other native trees, should be used in planting, while native vines and grasses should be put on the roadsides and banks adjoining the highways—in an effort to beautify the roadsides and add to their earlier charm and loveliness."

"Last spring hundreds of pleasure-seekers enjoyed the dogwood and redbud through Muldraugh Hills."

Plans of the American Legion and women's clubs in various Kentucky counties to participate in road beautification are noted by the Greensburg paper, and extension of this movement is urged.

A lime crusher in LaRue county crushed 900 tons of limestone last month, and 30 farmers are now waiting to use it.

A poultry show in Meade county with 250 entries, was attended by 300 farm men and women.

WIFE GAINS DIVORCE.

CUSTODY OF CHILDREN

Mrs. Henrietta Bell, Erlanger, was granted a divorce from Walter C. Bell by Judge Johnst Northcutt in Kenton Circuit Court Friday. Mrs. Bell charged her husband with cruelty. She also obtained custody of their two children and $5 a week for maintenance.

Judge Northcutt also awarded to the wife real estate in Elsmere and the defendant's interest in a note for $1,100 due them on other property.

The divorce case was filed Monday with Bell entering his appearance and agreeing to immediate action on the case.

TO RECEIVE $3,649.96

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 12.—Boone county will receive approximately $3,649.96 from the first quarterly distribution of that portion of revenues derived from the sales tax which is divided among the 120 counties of the state. The first distribution is expected to be made not later than Nov. 15th, and will be distributed thereafter every three months.

One third of the money collected from the new revenue measure is divided among the counties. The money apportioned each county is figured three different ways. One third of the money due counties is divided equally among the 120 counties of the state. One third of the sum is divided in the ratio of each county's area to the state's area. One third is apportioned in the ratio of each county's population to the population of the state.

A table has been worked out by State Inspector and Examiner Nat B. Sewell by which sums due counties can be readily computed. It is pointed out that approximately $1,800,000 will have been collected from the sales tax the first quarter of its operation when the money is apportioned. Of that, one third, or $600,000 is to be distributed to the counties.

As an illustration it is pointed out that Adair county will receive from the approximate sum of $600,000 to be distributed, about $4,912.23. Jefferson will receive about $30,775.04.

Floyd county farmers say that Korean lespedeza has trebled the value of their old pastures.

Hart county farmers have planned a series of meetings to promote a cooperatively-owned creamery.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

The Burlington school has added a class in Physical Education for girls as a regular part of the school program. Our girls demonstrated their interest in the class by buying material and making their own Gym suits. The school colors were used, thus adding more of the spirit of B. H. S. to the work. Each suit cost about forty cents. A modern physical education program is being followed by the director, Mrs. Fowler. Much of the time is used with exercises and drills to the accompaniment of music. Better physical bodies which mean better health together with gracefulness are leading objectives of the Physical Education program of our school.

We have organized a Public Speaking and Debating Club for the ensuing year. Elmore Ryle, Harry Cook, Howard Garrison, Leslie Voshell, Donald Kirkpatrick, Boyd Snow, and Albert Weaver reported at the first meeting held last week. Many other students should be members soon. Much of the material has been received, and those in the club plan an interesting and profitable program of public speaking activities.

The Tomcats and Kittens are getting regular practice for the coming season. Mr. Moore is in charge of the Tom Cats while Mr. Kirkwood is training the girls. We are happy to know that more students are taking part in these practice periods, thus allowing the real purpose of athletics to be carried out. Basketball is maintained in the schools in order to provide as many boys and girls a game that they enjoy as it is possible to reach. Too much emphasis has been placed on the special training of a few players in the past to the neglect of other worthy students.

The Kittens have chosen Lou Ella Berkshire as their captain for the season. With the experience she has had, she should make an excellent leader for the team. As the season nears, we feel that B. H. S. will have two good teams again representing her on the hardwood. Our opening game is with Hamilton at Hamilton, Nov. 16. A printed schedule will be found in a later issue of the Recorder.

The girls of the various Boone County Girl Reserves Clubs were invited by our Club to visit with them and participate in a Play-Day Program Saturday, Nov. 10th, at the School Auditorium. Promises of many Boone County girls to be present which help, which symbolize the fine spirit created by the work of Girl Reserve Clubs in the various schools.

Leslie Voshell was chosen Captain of the boy's team at the election held Thursday, Nov. 8. Leslie is a Senior, and having played throughout the three years previous to this, he should be able to lead his team to victory. The Burlington schedule follows:

Nov. 15—Hamilton There.
Nov. 23—Verona boys only, Here.
Nov. 28—Piner Here.
Dec. 4—Newport boys only There.
Dec. 8—Florence Here.
Dec. 14—New Haven There.
Dec. 21—Erlanger boys only Here.
Jan. 4—Hebron Here.
Jan. 11—Piner There.
Jan. 18—Open.
Jan. 25—Hamilton, Here.
Feb. 1—Florence, There.
Feb. 8—Florence, There.
Feb. 8—New Haven, Here.
Feb. 15—Open.
Feb. 22—Hebron, There.

The Play Day exercises at our school were highly enjoyed by all present. Approximately 75 girls and their leaders were present. The forenoon was spent in games and singing. At noon the girls assembled in the dining room for lunch. Each club brought some articles of food which was served in plate lunches. The dining room had been decorated for the occasion by the Burlington Club. Following lunch the various clubs contributed to the program from the stage. This consisted of music and plays of a dramatic nature. Following this the girls divided into groups and played games. Winning teams were awarded prizes for their skill.

The girls went home with pleasant memories of the day, and with a sincere hope that again next year a Play Day may be enjoyed in some school.

HEBRON SCHOOL NEWS

The teams will play at Mason, Ky., on Friday night, Nov. 16. They then come back here and play Walton on Saturday night, Nov. 17. Come out and support your team.

Thirty members of the Girl Reserve Club attended Play Day at Burlington on Saturday, Nov. 10. Mrs. Fowler proved a very capable leader of the games. At noon a delectable lunch was served. After lunch a program was given by girls from New Haven, Burlington and Hebron. After the program games were again played. We want to thank the Burlington girls for giving us such a delightful time.

Friday, Nov. 9th, was a holiday due to the teachers attending N. K. E. A. held at Newport, Ky.

4-H CLUB MEETS

The Hebron 4-H club held its last meeting of the year on Thursday, Nov. 8th at the school house.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Robert Elkin, and the secretary, Betty Crigler. All of the record books were turned in at this meeting. As this was the last meeting we elected the officers for the coming year. They were: President—Robert Elkin. Vice President—George Casper. Secretary—Louise Elkin.

The meeting was then adjourned hoping to have a bigger and better club next year.

SERIOUS CHARGE

IS PLACED AGAINST FLORENCE MAN AS RESULT OF WOUNDING OF COVINGTONIAN—HEARING WAS HELD MONDAY IN COVINGTON.

Charged by Kenton county authorities with shooting with intent to kill Russell Mitchell 35 years old, Florence, Ky., was at liberty under $4,000 bond Sunday, while Everett Kanatzar, 25, 1218 Wheeler Street Covington, was confined in St. Elizabeth Hospital, a bullet wound in his abdomen.

The wound was inflicted Saturday when Kanatzar was hunting three miles west of Independence. Kanatzar's conditions was fair Sunday night, hospital attaches said.

Mitchell appeared before Judge John B. Read in Kenton Circuit Court, when an effort was made to thresh out the truth from a maze of conflicting stories which have been told concerning the shooting.

Interview at the hospital Sunday, Kanatzar told Louis Vogt, Kenton County Sheriff, that Mitchell shot him. He said he would swear to the warrant charging shooting to kill.

Mitchell was with G. K. Kindred, 69, Independence, when the shooting took place. Kanatzar and Kindred own adjoining farms, Vogt said.

Mitchell told Vogt he was shooting at a target.

Others present told Vogt an argument started over the ownership of land occupied by the hunting party. Kanatzar and Kindred, on one side and Mitchell on the other.

Mitchell surrendered to Albert Behmer, Deputy Sheriff, Saturday night. Later he accompanied Behmer to Covington, where he was charged formally and placed under bond, which was posted immediately.

GOV. LAFFOON

HAS AUTHORITY TO OUST HIGHWAY CHIEF—COURT RULES—JOHNSON LOSES INJUNCTION FIGHT.

Frankfort Ky., November 13—Governor Laffoon, in effect, today was assured he was authority to remove Ben Johnson, Bardstown, Chairman of the State Highway Commission, from office.

The Court of Appeals upheld the constitutionality of an act of the 1934 Legislature, giving to the Governor the power to remove summarily appointive state officials and affirmed the decision of a lower court that Johnson, political enemy of the Governor, was not entitled to an injunction to prevent the Governor from ousting him.

Johnson, once a political ally of the Governor, brought the injunction suit against the Chief Executive after the Governor publicly threatened to remove him.

FOUR CHARGES

FACED BY ERLANGER MAN—FIVE SHOTS FIRED AT COMPANION, WHO ESCAPES—WAS ATTEMPTING TO STEAL GASOLINE FROM CAR.

Charges of petit larceny, carrying concealed weapons, being intoxicated and disorderly, and resisting arrest were placed by Chief of Police Jess Courtney, Erlanger, against a man registered as John R. Boyce, Florence Court, Elsmere. Boyce was lodged in Covington jail in default of $1,000 bond.

Chief Courtney charged Boyce attempted to steal several gallons of gasoline from an automobile parked on Graves Avenue, Erlanger.

Courtney said that while making his rounds he noted two men near the automobile. Driving around the block he returned and threw a light on the car. He said the men had a large hose, through which they were syphoning gasoline from the car.

When Courtney appeared the men jumped into another automobile. Chief Courtney ran this to the curb. One man escaped, although Chief Courtney fired five shots at him.

Edward Taylor, Deputy Kenton County Sheriff, aided Chief Courtney in removing Boyce to the Covington jail. A warrant charging Boyce with the various offenses was sworn to before Erlanger Police Judge James C. Rogers. The charge of carrying concealed weapons was filed after two guns were found in the automobile said to be owned by Boyce.

SIGN AAA CORN-HOG COMPLIANCE FORMS

The Boone County AAA Corn-Hog Board of Directors and Control Committee met at Burlington Monday to certify for the second adjustment payment on all corn-hog contracts where compliance had been met.

One hundred and seventy-six contracts were completed to submit to Washington for the next payment due in the next few days. Forty-four contracts or 20 percent of the 220 signed AAA Corn-Hog contracts were delayed until after December 1st when a second check on compliance can be made. A second check on compliance is required on all farms coming under certain classes. A twenty dollar per head penalty will be assessed all farms on which more than the allotted number of hogs are found on the second count. Partial penalty will be assessed in most cases where the corn acreage allotment has been exceeded.

FIRST GAME

OF SEASON ON LOCAL COURT WILL BE PLAYED FRIDAY NIGHT WHEN VERONA WILL DO BATTLE WITH THE LOCAL HOOPSTERS.

The first basketball game of the season on the local hardwood is scheduled for Friday night, November 23 at 7 o'clock slow time. At this time the local school will be host to two boys' teams from Verona. At present there is no game scheduled for the Kittens.

Reports have it that Verona has some nice material for the ensuing season. Our Tomcats are anxious to get started at home, and feel that they are ready to tackle the best that may present itself in the form of opposition. Advance information points to a successful season on the part of the local teams. Support from those who like the game naturally add pep to any team. Let us not disappoint the boys and girls by not being present. School spirit is fine, but it should be supplemented by community spirit to give the zest to a team necessary to pull out in a pinch.

The admission prices have been purposely held to last year's low price of ten and twenty cents. If it were not necessary to financially support the teams for equipment and transportation and other items of expense, we would be happy to play all games free of admission prices. No tax money is used for athletic equipment or transportation; so of a necessity we must make a door charge. Be present Friday night and let's help the Blue and White colors remain high.

The Tomcats and Kittens divided honors with the Hamilton Farmers and Farmerettes last Thursday night. The boys came out on top of a 23 to 16 score. A nice game was played by both teams with comparatively few fouls for so small a floor. The game was fast from the start which always gives the spectators a thrill.

The Hamilton girls held their defense sufficiently tight to prevent the Kittens from overcoming several points lead by one point which served as their margin of victory.

Both games point to two more even more thrilling games which are to be played on the Burlington floor later in the season. A fine crowd of sportsmanship roared greeted us at Hamilton and gave all of those from the local school a pleasant visit at their school. We hope that these favors may be returned when Hamilton comes to our school.

WILL RECEIVE TOBACCO ONE WEEK PRIOR TO DATE OF OPENING SALE

P. M. Williams, President of the Big Burley Warehouse Company, Carrollton, Ky., was a business caller at the Recorder office Monday. While here he placed an advertisement for his company.

The Big Burley Warehouse will receive tobacco about one week before the opening sale, which is slated for Tuesday, December 4. Mr. Williams stated that most Boone county farmers were acquainted with the Big Burley Company since a great number of them have already sold their tobacco there. Senator Perry B. Gaines, was formerly interested in this company and for that reason a large amount of Boone county tobacco has been sold on this floor.

Mr. Williams also said that the Big Burley Warehouse Co., has handled more Boone county tobacco than any other Carrollton house. Also, that a special effort has always been made to make the Boone county farmers feel at home on this floor. Mr. George W. Baker, a Boone county man is now connected with the Big Burley Co., as an active director and will be on the floor during most of the season. Charles Highfield will be the auctioneer. He has been with the company for several years in the same capacity and has just returned from the Greenville, N. C., market.

UTOPIANS TO INITIATE NEW MEMBERS

Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 will initiate seven new members into the organization Thursday night of this week. The club will meet at the Modern Woodman's Hall in Burlington for the meeting. This is the second meeting of the new year and a good turn out of members is expected.

FOUR-H PROJECTS

COMPLETED. ARE VALUED AT 11,334.00 ACCORDING TO COUNTY AGENT, H. R. FORKNER—CREDIT GIVEN MEMBERS FOR SPLENDID WORK.

Boone County 4-H Club Members came through 1934 with a record of 337 projects completed with a valuation of $11,334.00 according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. This is an all time record for number of projects completed by club members in the county.

The above organized 4-H project included: Ninety-three tobacco, 27 garden, 53 poultry, 82 sewing, 27 canning, 3 room improvement, 11 rabbit, 4 pig, 15 dairy, 7 potato, 3 tomato, 5 sheep and 7 cow projects on which systematic work and complete business records were kept. The projects were conducted by 299 members which is one less than the 300 record member completion of last year when 344 projects were completed.

Credit for the splendid work done by the members goes to the unselfish spirit and leadership of the 25 adult men and 18 adult women leaders who have carried on the work. These leaders deserve more credit this year than ever before in that the AAA program and other work has permitted only limited help from the County Office. Those adult leaders who have served one and two years will receive special leaders' pins of award from the College of Agriculture in recognition of their service. Those who have served three or more years will receive special certificates of service.

AAA TAX WARRANTS

Tax exemption warrants or poundage allotment cards will be issued all Boone county farmers who have signed AAA tobacco contracts in the near future, according to the County Agent.

Many growers realizing the 25 percent tax to be collected from all tobacco sold this year had been getting anxious to know when the warrants will be issued. All growers signing contracts will receive 25 percent tax exemption warrants and will be notified of their warrants before the warehouse sales open. There will be no need to call for the exemption warrants until notified.

Mrs. Oscar Murray, who has been suffering with an ulcerated tooth for several days was taken to Cincinnati Monday, where she was treated by Dr. Becker.

INJURED FATALLY

PETERSBURG BOY KILLED SUNDAY WHILE LOADING A REVOLVER—LIVED ONLY A FEW MINUTES—WAS A SON OF JAMES HOLT.

A very regrettable accident occurred in Petersburg, at about 11:30 A. M. Sunday when Charles Holt, aged 14, young son of James Holt of that place accidentally shot and killed himself while loading a pistol. The accident took place in the town and young Holt survived but a few minutes.

The accident was a shock to the community and the sympathy of the entire town is with the bereaved family.

Funeral services were conducted in the Baptist Church, Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 with Rev. Dunaway presiding.

FLORENCE TO MEET DAYTON HIGH FRIDAY

The Florence basketball teams will play the Dayton High School basketball teams Friday night, Nov. 25 at Florence. This should be one of the best games of the season. Much improvement was shown by the Florence teams Friday night when they played Crescent Springs, especially in the boys' team. The boys lost by a score of 24 to 13 to the Crescent Springs lads, but from all dope available this is one of the best clubs in Northern Kentucky, having been defeated only by three points by the Covington Bull Dogs in the regional tournament held at Dayton last year. Coach Allphin has made some changes in his line-up and will make some more before the Dayton game. Collins Scott, one of the athletes to be picked on the all-tournament district team last year was out of the line-up Friday night due to illness. The team was strengthened much by the return of Charlie Higgins to his regular position with the team. He was high point man for Florence, and his guarding was outstanding. Grayson played a nice game at center, holding Noll to only two field goals. Good sportsmanship prevailed throughout the entire game and the best team won. But we believe by the time of the next game with Crescent Springs, the story will be different.

Coach Allphin has been handicapped thus far due to the fact he has had only one regular string man from last year in the line-up. It takes time to develop a team out of new material, but this is gradually being done, and we firmly believe that they will defeat Dayton next Friday night.

The Florence girls lost their first game of the season. The score was 16 to 10 in favor of Crescent Springs. Sullivan was outstanding for Florence, while Bain and Kuhlman were outstanding for Crescent Springs.

Don't forget the Dayton game Friday night at Florence. This will be the last home game until Dec. 7. The Florence teams will play New Haven Wednesday, Nov. 28.

TO SERVE CHICKEN SUPPER

ACREAGE CUT

FROM 2,823.7 ACRES TO 1,730.2 ACRES—TOBACCO EXPECTED TO BRING HIGHER PRICE DUE TO A-A-A TOBACCO PROGRAM.

Boone County AAA base contracted tobacco acreage was reduced this year from 2,823.7 acres to 1,730.2 acres and from 2,003,493 base pounds to an allotment to sell of 1,228,142 pounds or an average of 37.7 percent for both acres and pounds according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner.

The base acres and base pounds signed under the AAA tobacco contract computed by Mr. John E. Crigler, Secretary of the County Association are as follows:

|                      | Acres   | Pounds    |
|----------------------|---------|-----------|
| Beaver               | 228.1   | 182,213   |
| Erlington            | 260.9   | 172,709   |
| Florence             | 217.7   | 142,018   |
| Grant                | 256.7   | 194,192   |
| Hebron               | 266.2   | 170,949   |
| Hamilton             | 339.4   | 205,629   |
| Petersburg           | 167     | 120,560   |
| Union                | 260.9   | 168,031   |
| Verona               | 315.3   | 237,950   |
| Walton               | 395.7   | 315,206   |
| Late Contracts       | 115.8   | 128,123   |
| Incomplete 1933 lbs. |         | 51,900    |
| Total                | 2,823.7 | 2,003,493 |

The above figures show that Boone county is one of the larger burley tobacco producing counties of the state. While a number of counties produced a considerable larger acreage and poundage tobacco is of sufficient importance to be a major source of cash income to the county. Due in large part to the AAA Tobacco program, tobacco is expected to bring a much better price than in recent years.

KENTON LOOSE LEAF TOBACCO WAREHOUSE

OPEN FOR BUSINESS

RED CROSS ROLL

CALL UNDER WAY IN BOONE COUNTY—PRECINCT CHAIRMEN CHOSEN—WELFARE WORK IN COUNTY DEPENDS ON NUMBER ENROLLED.

One American out of every five was helped by the Red Cross in the last five years of drouth, disaster, unemployment, and increased needs of ex-service men. At least one American out of every five ought to pay the dollar membership fee in the Annual Roll Call which began on Armistice Day and will continue until Thanksgiving Day.

Public Health nursing, instructions in nutrition and home hygiene, and first aid and life saving courses make up the health conservation program of the American Red Cross. Disaster relief is recognized everywhere as the responsibility of the American Red Cross. Your membership dollar will give you a part in this work.

American Red Cross membership dollars are still keeping the promise made to American men who went to war. You as a member are still ministering to the needs of those for whom the war has not yet ended; you are helping his family, his children; and through your membership you are also serving all American sailors at sea and all soldiers, marines or coast guardsmen wherever their parts or posts may be.

The Roll call organization in Boone county is now at work asking you to join. All precinct chairmen have been appointed with the exception of Florence and that appointment will be made at once. The precinct chairmen are as follows:

Belleview—Mrs. C. E. McNeely
Beaver—Mrs. J. F. Cleek

COMPLIMENT PAID

RAY C. EDWARDS, BROTHER OF MRS. GARNET TOLIN—FINE SURVEY OF HOUSING CONDITIONS RECENTLY MADE IN JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

In a recent editorial in the Jacksonville, Florida Journal very high praise was given the local authorities there by the U. S. Government for the fine survey of housing conditions recently made in that city. L. V. Smith, of Wilmington, Delaware, representative of the National Association of Housing Officials, stated this survey is the most comprehensive he has seen, excepting only that of Cleveland, Ohio. The article also said that this is a very high compliment for the local group, headed by Ray C. Edwards, who had charge of the survey.

This is of local interest since Mr. Edwards is a brother of Mrs. Garnet Tolin, of Burlington.

UNDER YOUR OWN VINE AND FIG TREE

The American people are looking ahead more-at this particular time than they have in years.

Henry Ford says, "That they would get by if the relief work stopped, that they know how to work if they have to." The Americans came into the forest of the United States, established colonies, cleared land and builded a nation the richest in the world, and what they did once, they can do again, when they get interested to the right point.

Americans have realized that it is better to live under their own vine and fig tree and live at home on the fat of the land.

DON'T STAY BURIED

This story isn't ours, but nevertheless it is a good one:

A farmer had an old blind horse which had outlived his usefulness. One day he fell into an old well. The farmer looked in and saw him standing deep in the water. There seemed to be no way to get him out, as he was quite useless, and the well abandoned and dangerous, the farmer ordered his men to fill up the well and leave the horse buried in it.

The men began to shovel dirt into the well. But the horse was not willing to be buried. When the dirt began to pour in upon him he began to shake it off and tread it under food. As the well was filled up the horse came nearer and nearer the surface, and when the men finished their task the horse walked out into the pasture.

The very things which conspire to bury the lionhearted these days, are used by them to lift themselves out of difficulties and into the light. The very last thing one should do is to agree to stay dead and buried.

THE GOOD CITIZEN

It used to be frequently said in smaller towns that it is the business of a good citizen to mind his own business, keep out of debt and avoid breaking laws. It was commonly thought that if he did that, it was about all that could be expected of him, and he was conforming to the ideals of good citizenship.

But a community or county's development can not be promoted in these times on any such limited basis. The fact that so many small town people still have this spirit, and expect to get along without doing anything particularly to boost community movements, is one of the principal reasons why some towns do not get ahead faster.

Some must take hold and carry on the work of churches and fraternal societies. Some of the men with a special head for business need to work in some organizations for the commercial and other needed development of the community. Some need to work in clubs for educational purposes, and for more interesting social activities. There is something that each one should do and we must all take hold to do something in these public lines, if we expect that our town is going to keep up with the game.

People should not act as if they were making a great sacrifice if they devote a little of their time to such purposes. We should love our home town so much, and should be ambitious to see it get ahead, that we would willingly devote some time each week to helping to forward the worthwhile enterprises that need attention.

Fireside Thoughts

We have often thought what good judges of human nature the store clerks are in small town stores. This of course includes the proprietors. These fellows know us better than our pastors. They know if we pay our debts or whether we are slow pay; they know whether or not we are reasonable; whether or not we are hard to please. They know whether we are proud, or humble, or in between. They know whether we are stingy or liberal. They know all about us.

The other day we mentioned something about the use of slang. There is one thing that is worse than slang and that is bad grammar. One of the champion users of incorrect grammar is the modern-day average high school graduate or student. Just why this is true we are unable to say. They are taught the use of good English for twelve years in school but like vaccination it oftentimes does not take. We have come to believe that good home influences have more to do in this respect than what they are taught. At any rate there is something radically wrong. The other day we overheard two ex-graduates speaking. The first asked the other why he wasn't at a certain party. His reply was that "he would have went if he had known it." Young people should watch their English. We older ones have our habits already formed.

We have seen a great many famous people in our time. Most of them did not look the part. Some of the most famous were the most ordinary and insignificant looking of all. From looking at them we wondered why they were so great. Of course their greatness was inside of them and not a surface indication. Then again, we have seen quite a number of superficial individuals who assumed greatness on account of their appearance. They were generally large, tall, portly persons who looked down on us with a sort of superiority complex. One of the candidates for Governor in Ohio this fall was of that type. We know of another in this Congressional District who spreads himself with a turkey gobble strut but who is quite shallow when you scratch below the surface. One thing is certain, you cannot judge the intellectual caliber of a man by his outside appearance, altho his keenness and personality are likely to be noticed in his facial expressions.

Most people talk too much. We have noticed that the more important or the higher an official is the less he has to say. We are sure we talked too much when we were younger and probably do yet, altho we do try now to put on the break in this respect. We were cured somewhat of this habit years ago by a certain occurrence which we will relate.

We were sitting one day in the lobby of a large hotel in New Orleans. Beside us sat an old but very pompous looking gentleman. We had no reason whatever to start unnecessary conversation with him but we had no more sense than to do so. It just happened that we had visited a few days before the Louisiana Salt Mines, the largest in the world. We weren't there over thirty minutes. However, we proceeded to tell this gentleman all about the mines. What we did not know we brought forth from the depth of our imagination. The old gentleman said nothing but just looked at us. After we had finished our description of a subject about which we knew practically nothing we asked him if he had ever visited the mines. He replied "Yes, I own them." And we later found this to be true. Of course we found excuse at once to go elsewhere. It taught us a lesson.

Editorial of the Week

THIS AUTUMN MADNESS
(Kentucky Post)

There are two kinds of men: Those who like to hunt and those who don't. If you had watched them going afield as the hunting season opened, you couldn't divide the hunters by age, wealth, profession or station in life.

Hunting is something that has no practical use in these times, and it cannot be defended by logic. It combines the delights of shooting, tramping and getting into the open air, with the tortures of aching muscles, disappointment (when one gets no game), and the loss of valuable time from pursuits more profitable than bringing a few rabbits to bag.

Those who don't like hunting can't quite understand how otherwise sensible men lose their reason on Nov. 15. Fellows who live quite normally the rest of the year suddenly yield to an uncontrollable urge to put on heavy boots and rough clothes and go tramping all day with a heavy gun, all in hope of getting a few cottontails purchasable at a market for a tenth of the cost and a hundredth of the trouble of a hunting trip.

That's how the man who doesn't hunt looks at it. The man who likes to hunt doesn't care what anybody thinks of him. His ear is deaf to the argument that, if it is the air and exercise, he's after, he could get just as much strolling in a park. He doesn't attempt to defend hunting with logic. When a man wants to go hunting he just wants to go, that's all.

The rabbit season opened Nov. 15, but the hunter must remember that the quail season is not open this year until Nov. 24 in Kentucky. He must remember also that waterfowl may be hunted only on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, from now until January.

The hunter should remember the primary rules of safety and courtesy:

Be sure your gun is in good order, and don't load it until you are in the field. Carry it with the safety turned on. Unload it the moment you cease hunting.

Never point a gun loaded or empty, at any living thing you do not want to shoot, including yourself. Never grasp a gun by the muzzle to pull it through a fence.

Don't shoot over the tops of hills or into hollows where you can't see the full course your shot will take, for fear of killing a person or livestock.

If you are a city man, remember the farmer's land is private and that you have no more right there without permission than the farmer would have in your front yard in the city. Ask permission to hunt, and if you're lucky leave the farmer a rabbit or two.

BIG BURLEY WAREHOUSE CO.

(INC.)

CARROLLTON

R. N. "BOB" GREENE, Sales Manager

There are many reasons why you should sell your tobacco at Carrollton. All of which are of an advantage to you as a grower. The following eight reasons are all important, read them, weigh them carefully, then bring your tobacco to the BIG BURLEY at Carrollton and we will convince you after your sale that you did the right thing, and then you will be our regular customer.

1. Two sets of buyers insure average of two or more sales per week at BIG BURLEY. No long delays between unloading and sales.

2. Located at Carrollton is the R. M. BARKER TOBACCO COMPANY, one of the largest independent burley tobacco buyers in the U. S. Mr. Barker this season has the largest order, including all grades, in his company's history. This of course, makes strong competition insuring a high market. This is worth thinking about.

3. It cost you less to sell at Carrollton because your expenses are less. You can often unload and sell the same day at the BIG BURLEY. This is also worth thinking about.

4. Expert graders for your tobacco. If you have one or twenty baskets in your crop when unloaded and graded, you may be assured that you will have the same number of baskets exclusively for your crop when it is sold. Positively no mixing of crops on baskets.

5. Of interest alike to growers and truck owners is the fact that—BIG BURLEY has the largest unloading space of any Carrollton Warehouse. No delay or long waits with your tobacco standing on trucks or wagons.

7. BIG BURLEY WAREHOUSE COMPANY sold more tobacco than any other Carrollton Warehouse last year. Again we call attention to the fact that our facilities for unloading are the best in Carrollton, which with efficient service, courteous treatment and personal attention to each grower has made the BIG BURLEY the most popular warehouse in Carrollton.

8. You are among friends and neighbors on the Carrollton market.

9. BIG BURLEY is proud of its organization, which includes George W. Baker, of Boone county, a director, and R. N. Greene, known to most of you as "Bob." He comes from Owen county and rates as one of the best sales managers and starters in the State.

BIG BURLEY sold more tobacco than any other Carrollton Warehouse last season.

HEBRON SCHOOL NEWS

The chapel program was held Friday afternoon. We were glad to have so many parents present, as this shows that they are interested in the work of our school. This program was planned around our need for a library. It consisted of:

Origin of Library—Kenneth Whitley.

Play—"A Complete Library," Seventh and Eighth Grades.

Book Review—Carlyle Landrum.

Play—"A School Boy's Dream," High School.

This play, "A School Boy's Dream" was written by a sophomore, Miss Betty Walton. Betty has shown her talent for writing by this play.

We were glad to have Supt. D. H. Norris with us, who spoke for a few minutes on "School Libraries."

The P. T. A. held its monthly meeting at the school building on Tuesday night, Nov. 13. As the president and vice-president were absent, C. V. Lucy took charge. The meeting was opened by group singing. A short business meeting was held after which the Glee Club gave some special numbers. Edgar C. Riley, former Boone County Superintendent and now connected with the Midway Female Orphan School, spoke on "New and Old Schools." Mr. Riley gave a history of the education in Kentucky. The Glee Club then gave another number. The meeting closed with a few remarks from Mr. Lucy.

The Jr. Girl Reserve met last Wednesday. The president, Mary Lou Lucy, and vice-president Virginia Riemer took charge. Thelma Arnold, Louise Mahorney and La Verne Bruce were appointed to work on a constitution. Mrs. Moore spoke on "What It Means to be a Girl Reserve" and "The Girl Reserve Triangle."

The Cardinals motored to Mason, Friday night when the girls lost the first game to Mason Kittens. The score was tied at the end of the game 18-18; resulting in an overtime period of three minutes. The Mason girls made three points untangling the score. The final score was 21-18 in favor of the Kittens.

The boys patterned after the girls by tying the score at the end of the game 18-18, but were luckier than the girls in the end by winning by a score of 25-18.

The tables were turned Saturday night by the girls winning over Walton girls by a score of 30-5 and boys losing by a score of 24-26.

The Cardinals will go to Hamilton on Friday, Nov. 23 to play them. On Wednesday night, Nov. 28 Crescent Springs will come to play a return game. Come out and cheer for H. H. S.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

At the present time the boys and girls of the Burlington school are making plans for the Thanksgiving season. The rooms are being decorated for the season and the various groups are preparing programs for the occasion. These programs will be given in the home rooms of the grades from I to VI. The upper grades and high school will have their regular chapel program on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 28 instead of Friday because of the holidays on Thursday and Friday. This program will be presented by the Sophomore class. This group has the material for the program assigned to the various members who will take part. The school wishes that many patrons and friends may find it convenient to be present for this and all other chapel programs of the year. The hour is two-thirty.

A pleasing and entertaining program was rendered by the fifth and sixth grades Friday, November 16. This was their first chapel program for the year. It consisted of a dramatization of class room work and clever musical numbers. No better type of school program can be given than those which naturally grow out of the regular work of the school. Group singing permitted all present to participate and contribute to the enjoyment of the chapel.

Much interest is being created in our high school by the use of a part of the class time for the study of current events. It is very important for those who live today to know something of the important events that are making modern history. If such study leads to a more informed group of students and creates the habit of reading newspapers and periodicals profitably, it will have served its noblest purpose. Knowledge of the present helps us to understand the past.

The boys and girls in the lower and intermediate grades are having some thrilling experiences while they study Drawing and Art. Clay modeling is giving the children something to do with their hands, and at the same time permitting them to develop artistic ability. What boy or girl does not like to make something from clay. We hope that this may become a part of the seatwork of all our boys and girls who like to make beautiful things from what is commonly called ugly clay.

The local Hi-Y Club is sponsoring a go-to-Sunday-School Campaign for the members of our Club. This certainly should be profitable and worthy. We hope that the community will help in making the Sunday School work helpful to the boys, and that this campaign may go on not only among the boys but throughout the community where these boys live.

The Freshman General Science class has installed electric bells in our school as part of the laboratory work of the class. These bells are to be used for dismissal instead of the well-cracked rattler which, had it not been used for signalling the time to go home from school, would have been classed by all who heard it as a necessary evil. Instead of this, it had been classed with another famous cracked bell, as the "Liberty Bell" of Burlington School.

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Sunday, Nov. 25, Bible School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt.

On Sunday evening at 8:00 the Women's Missionary Society will give their annual public Thanksgiving Service, entitled, "Sing a New Song." The congregation and friends are cordially invited to attend.

HI-Y CONFERENCE

IS HUGE SUCCESS

The Older Boys Conference, which was held at New Liberty Nov. 16, 17, and 18 was acclaimed the best ever, by our boys who attended.

Leslie Voshell, Ivan Norris, Donald Kirkpatrick, Franklin Bethel and Albert Weaver attended with their Advisors, Mr. Moore and Mr. Kirkwood. We feel that the high purpose of Hi-Y was carried out in this Conference. It was an inspiration because most of the programs were presented by young men who were boys only yesterday. Our school had a representative part in the various programs. Ivan Norris and Donald Kirkpatrick were appointed to speak on the value and purpose of Hi-Y in two of the churches. Leslie Voshell, Albert Weaver and Donald Kirkpatrick were allowed to play on the Conference basketball teams against Owenton high school. Mr. Moore and Mr. Kirkwood were in charge of two of the discussion meetings.

Aside from the regular programs a delightful banquet was given by the good people of the community and a social hour by the Girl Reserve Club. The fine interest and hospitality of the New Liberty and Wheatley people was highly appreciated.

THANKSGIVING

PROCLAMATION

"Wise And Reverent Custom" Washington, November 15—In a Thanksgiving Day proclamation, President Roosevelt today called upon the American people to "dedicate themselves anew to work for the betterment of mankind."

"This should be done, he said, 'with gratitude in our hearts for what has already been achieved.'"

The text of the proclamation follows:

"I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-ninth day of November 1934, as a day of thanksgiving for the people of the nation."

"Thus, to set aside in the autumn of each year a day on which to give thanks to Almighty God for the blessings of life is a wise and reverent custom, long cherished by our people, it is fitting that we should again observe this custom."

"During the past year we have been given courage and fortitude to meet the problems which have confronted us in our national life. Our sense of social justice has deepened. We have been given vision to make new provisions for human welfare and happiness, and in a spirit of mutual happiness we have cooperated to translate vision into reality."

"More greatly have we turned our hearts and minds to things spiritual. We can truly say, 'What profiteth it a nation if it gain the whole world and lose its own soul.'"

"With gratitude in our hearts for that has already been achieved, may we, with the help of God, dedicate ourselves anew to work for the betterment of mankind."

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed."

"Done in the City of Washington this fifteenth day of November in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-four and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-ninth."

BANGS TESTING WORK

PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

The Bangs disease testing work in the county is progressing rapidly according to Dr. Kenneth Ryle, of Burlington. Several hundred head have been already tested and new herds are being tested each day.

The number of reactors to date has been surprisingly small. The small number to date to react no doubt, is due to the large number of dairymen most interested in their herds and already having clean herds but want to be sure and have listed their herds to be tested. This is another important feature which gives the owner the assurance that his herd is free from the disease.

STUDENT TESTS

ARE CONDUCTED—NORTHERN KENTUCKIANS WIN HONORS IN ANNUAL EVENT AT STATE UNIVERSITY—TWO ERLANGER STUDENTS ARE AMONG HIGH

COUNTY BANKERS

CONFERENCE WITH COVINGTON CHAMBER OFFICIAL RELATIVE TO HOUSING SURVEY—PLANS LAID FOR SURVEY IN BOONE COUNTY.

A meeting of the Boone county bankers was held at the Chamber of Commerce in Covington last Thursday evening at which time a dinner was served and Forrest J. Alvin, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce explained the National Housing program as being carried out in Kenton county.

Plans were laid for a housing survey in Boone county similar to that now in progress in Kenton county. Mr. Alvin, who is secretary of the Kenton County Better Housing Program Committee, said loans aggregating approximately $196,000 under the housing act have been negotiated in Kenton county.

The following bankers were present at this meeting: C. F. Blankenbaker, J. G. Renaker, E. O. Rouse, representing Florence Deposit Bank; Claude Davis and William Collins representing Dixie State Bank of Walton; Charles W. Riley, representing Hebron Deposit Bank; N. E. Riddell and A. B. Renaker from the Peoples Deposit Bank, of Burlington. Those present regretted that more Boone county bankers did not attend this meeting as a very instructive talk was made by Mr. Alvin on the Housing Plan. In addition Mr. Alvin stated that the facilities of the Covington Chamber of Commerce were always available to adjoining counties and civic organizations and that he hoped that all such bodies would not hesitate to call on him for any assistance possible.

TWO GAMES

OF BASKETBALL TO BE PLAYED AT FLORENCE FRIDAY NIGHT—DRY RIDGE WILL BE THE VISITORS—IS THOUGHT TO BE ONLY GAME IN COUNTY.

On Friday night, November 30 the Florence High School boys and girls' teams will play the Dry Ridge High School teams on the Florence floor. The first game will start promptly at 8 o'clock, fast time. It is not customary for the Florence school to schedule games during a holiday. However, there was a demand for holiday games on the part of the public and former students now in college who will be home for the week-end. The Florence-Dry Ridge game was scheduled to meet this demand and to furnish some form of amusement for those remaining in town. It is believed that this game will be the only one in the county on this night and for that reason a large crowd is expected. Jimmie Vest from Walton will call the games.

Altho Dry Ridge lost several players on account of last year's graduation, their teams are still strong enough to give Florence boys and girls a good battle. Coach Allphin expects to use about the same line-up as formerly but expects the teams to be stronger as their team work is developed by experience.

N. E. Riddell, J. R. Eddins, and O. S. Eddins went to Bardstown Sunday and returned by way of Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Mattox and Mr. and Mrs. Less McBee were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cotton Saturday night.

The Petersburg Circle will present the play "Where's Grandma?" in the Petersburg School Auditorium Saturday night Dec. 1, at 7:30 p. m. Be sure and come. 25% of proceeds given to the school.

HOLIDAY CHEER

IS SIDETRACKED—1068-GALLON ALCOHOL CARGO IS CONFISCATED AFTER TRUCK HALTED—BOONE COUNTY PATROLMEN ON JOB.

Because the owners overloaded a truck bringing 1068 gallons of alcohol to Cincinnati from New Orleans, that amount of potential Christmas cheer has become merely contraband in the hands of government agents.

State truck inspectors stopped the truck Wednesday night at Florence, where it appeared to be loaded heavier than Kentucky's law allows.

The officers ordered the truck to be driven on W. R. Huey's scales to be weighed and while the patrolmen were looking after another truck, the driver fled. The patrolmen then discovered that the cargo was alcohol, said to be consigned from New Orleans to a Cincinnati bootlegger.

Clyde Smith, Howard Balser and E. C. Campbell, federal revenue agents stationed in Cincinnati, took possession of the alcohol after they were notified by the state patrolmen.

State patrolmen working in Boone county are enforcing the state's truck law by making overloaded trucks unload enough of their cargo to come within the weight limitation.

ANOTHER BOOK

COMPLETED BY JOHN URI LLOYD—NORTHERN KENTUCKY FOLKLORE IMMORTALIZED BY AUTHOR—STORY ENTITLED "OUR WILLIE."

At 85, Prof. John Uri Lloyd, patriarch of Cincinnati's men of letters has published a new book.

"Our Willie" was placed on the bookstore shelves Tuesday to supplement the wealth of Northern Kentucky folklore contained in "Stringtown on the Pike" and other earlier volumes.

"Our Willie" was started shortly after the publication of "Stringtown," and was designed as a companion volume. It was laid aside when Professor Lloyd abandoned Boone county history and legend in favor of his scientific pursuits.

Thirty years later, Professor Lloyd took the manuscript from its repository in the Lloyd Library Museum and completed it. In an introduction, the author explains that his wife, a few days before her death, requested that the story be published.

Wife's Request
Mrs. Lloyd, born in the "Knob" section of Boone county, had a special interest in "Our Willie," since she had been familiar since childhood with its locale. Photographs that she took for the story were filed away with the manuscript and now appear in the book.

"Our Willie" opens at a date before the beginning of the Civil War. Involved in its plot are the sacrifices of a father and mother to provide their son with an "education;" the battle of wits between a former slave-trader, who seeks to defraud them of their farm, and their friend the judge; a haunted house, a murder and the confusion which the outbreak of war brought to Kentucky.

Mysticism in Story
Mysticism, as well as adventure and a love story, has its part in the tale.

"Our Willie" is Professor Lloyd's first book since the publication in 1930 of "Felix Moses, The Beloved Jew," which also dealt with "Stringtown" (Florence, Ky.)

Besides being the author of the novels which sprang from his interest in the dialect, superstitions and folklore of Northern Kentucky, Professor Lloyd has been a prolific writer of scientific works.

DOG LAW

AIDS BOONE COUNTY. SEWELL SAYS. PRAISING ENFORCEMENT—REVENUES PAY STOCK CLAIMS—RIGHT-OF-WAY STAND LAUDED.

"Boone county enforces the dog law," Nat B. Sewell, State Inspector and Examiner, emphasized Monday in a report on the county's financial condition for the period from January 1, 1933 to November 1, 1934.

"As a result of this rare accomplishment," the Inspector commented, "almost wholly at variance with the prevailing custom of counties throughout the state," the county "is able to meet the claims filed against the live stock fund for damage done by dogs."

Since the first of this year, Sewell said, the county has collected $1,992 in licenses on 1,631 dogs and five kennels, or "an average of one dog for every six people in the county."

As a contrast, Sewell cited the case of Boyle county, which, he said, has a population nearly twice as large as that of Boone, but collected less than one-third as much in taxes and "showed a ratio of one dog for every 28 people."

The Inspector said Boone county "not only has the distinction of being an exceptional enforcer of the dog law, but its records show that it has taken a firm stand against the right-of-way racket and has not permitted the county treasury to be drained needlessly, or extravagantly, for so-called, but usually mis-called right-of-way damage."

The county's affairs, he concluded, "are in sound condition and are being handled wisely," and "the people of the county are to be congratulated that neither the present officials nor their immediate predecessors have engaged in the wild orgies of spending public funds promiscuously, as unfortunately has been true in many of our counties that are now struggling to carry the burden of previous follies."

The county's total net indebtedness was listed by the Inspector at $365,000 on October 31, with net cash of $115,204 on hand.

LOCAL FARMERS

WILL BE CALLED UPON TO VOTE ON THE SMITH-KERR ACT—DESIGNED TO PROTECT THE GROWER WHO HAS SIGNED TOBACCO CONTRACTS.

Boone county tobacco growers will be called upon in about ten days to vote whether or not the Smith-Kerr Act will be effective in the marketing of the next year's crop or the crop to be grown in 1935 and to be marketed next winter in the 1935-36 marketing areas.

The Smith Kerr Act is designed to protect the grower who has signed the AAA tobacco reduction contract. The growers are protected first through the benefit payments and second through the Smith-Kerr Act which places a 25 per cent tax on those growers who refuse to reduce their acreage or attempt to benefit on the outside by the contracting growers acreage reduction.

The question of whether or not the Smith-Kerr Act is carried through next year is left to a vote of both contract signers and non-contract signers. All growers should cast their ballot for or against when the vote is called.

THANKSGIVING

For all that God in mercy sends;
For health and strength for home and friends,
For comfort in the time of needs,
For every kindly word and deed,
For happy thoughts and pleasant tears.

For guidance in our daily walk,
For all these things give thanks.

For beauty in this world of ours,
For verdant grass and lovely flowers,

For songs of birds, for hum of bees,
For the refreshing summer breeze,
For hill and plain, for streams and wood,

For the great ocean's mighty flood,
For all these things give thanks.

For the sweet sleep that comes with night,

For the returning morning's light,
For the bright sun which shines on high,

For stars that glitter in the sky—
For these and everything we see,
O Lord, our hearts we lift to thee,
And give thee hearty thanks.

—Ellen Isabelle Tupper

HIGHER EDUCATION

Any enormous sum is spent annually on the colleges and other higher schools of education. What actual results, beneficial to the nation, are obtained to compensate parents and benefactors for all this vast expenditure?

It is complained that many young people go through such institutions, but that afterwards they show no sign of college culture. Their contact for four years with the world's wisdom, has seemingly run off their minds as water runs off a duck's back.

While many of them would be better off in some more practical school, yet if a boy or girl really studies history and science well enough to pass in a good college, he has probably got something out of it. He may show no familiarity with books, but probably he is not so easily fooled by the shams of life. If he has learned to size up the bunk of shallow thinkers, his course was not wholly in vain.

BUYING AND READING THE BIBLE

Statistics seem to show that nearly 11,000,000 copies of the Bible were issued in various tongues last year. The British and Foreign Bible Society reports translations into eleven new languages, bringing the list to six hundred and seventy-eight.

These figures move a British thinker to ask whether in spite of the number of Bibles distributed, we possess it? He says the English Bible is today neglected by great masses of the people who "perceive no beauty in its literature, no guidance in its teachings, no power in its message."

We might ponder these remarks. In how many of our homes does the Bible rest undisturbed while members of the family bestir themselves about everything except religion? How many children are growing up in our midst without being taught the great value of the Bible?

Aside from its religious significance, which no individual should overlook, the present English Bible is undoubtedly a great monument of language. Many of its phrases are in common speech, used every day although oftentimes the speaker is not aware of their origin.

HORSESHOES

Two thousand years ago a Roman slave tossed a horseshoe in emulation of the aristocratic discus thrower, and thus the ancient honorable game of horseshoe was born. Never in the twenty centuries that have since elapsed has the game been out of favor although it has had its lapses from universal popularity. And today it is enjoying a revival resembling in proportions the midget golf craze.

For this revival two things are chiefly responsible; the depression imposed need for inexpensive amusements, and expanding waistlines. In fields, backyards, parks, playgrounds and vacant lots summer evenings find men of all ages tossing horseshoes to get out of doing something that costs money or to keep the waistline under control.

The health value of this homely pastime is not generally understood. In an evening of horseshoes one will walk several miles, do bending exercises equivalent to a week's morning calisthenics and work most of the muscles of the arms, shoulders and back. It is effective but not strenuous exercise.

Strange as it seems, man's gambling instinct has never shown itself in this game. Nor has it ever been commercialized. These facts may help to explain the long popularity of the game.

Fireside Thoughts

The present depression has served to bring out the fact that good credit is a fine thing to have. People who were careful of their credit in good times are in better position now than those who were negligent and unwise in conducting their financial affairs. Especially should young folks protect their credit even in small transactions. We have known young men thoughtlessly to abuse their credit even in one or two years so that it took many years of correct living to restore confidence in them.

—O—

We have often wondered what personality is. It might be called personal magnetism but that doesn't define it. Some people have it and others do not. Furthermore, it is an inherited quality and cannot be acquired. William J. Bryan had it to a marked degree. We remember attending a political gathering in the Cincinnati Ball Park at which he was scheduled to speak. There were twenty thousand of us there. Mr. Bryan was late in arriving and certain governors and congressmen present tried to hold the crowd with speeches but to no avail. We refused to listen to them. When Bryan did arrive he held the vast audience spellbound for two hours. That was magnetism, personality, or whatever you wish to call it. However, it would be useless for anyone to try to define it.

—O—

Students who do not master textbooks readily should not be discouraged. Lack of this ability does not necessarily mean that they will be failures when they grow up. We have lived long enough to judge the success or failure of many of our schoolmates. We have in mind one classmate of our grade school days. He had seemingly the thickest mentality in the class. He didn't seem to be able to learn anything and we all felt sorry for him for his apparent dullness. The last time we heard from him he was general manager of an automobile plant and the efficient boss of ten thousand men. At that time we were a superintendent of schools and couldn't manage successfully ten women teachers. We won't mention the vast difference in our salaries, for the comparison would be embarrassing.

—O—

As the cool nights of the winter season come on, the family used to gather about the dancing flames on the open hearth. Do they do so today in these times when so much is going on in the average town, with so many pleasant homes to take people out of the home?

Certainly some of the families do, as one hears people tell how much they enjoy the good old custom of sitting around a fire on the hearth, exchanging pleasant thoughts in their own circle, or with neighbors. If you could know what the home folks said under the firelight in these informal meetings, you could get an idea of the future of the nation.

Through those flickering embers, we can see the scenes of youth, the friends of former days. Memory grows sweet as reflection is thus promoted, and people value the home that has such a center of rest and thought.

RECOVERY PROGRAM SUPPORTED BECAUSE OF RESULTS
(McFadden Weekly)

The evident determination of a vast majority of the people to vote for nominees who they are convinced beyond doubt will support the Roosevelt recovery program is based primarily upon their knowledge that the program is accomplishing its objectives.

They had been told by the President at its inception that there would be ups and downs, and they are perfectly willing to make allowances for errors of judgment in the administration of the huge temporary mechanism it required. But they have seen and felt, personally, the cumulative results obtained through the various legislative measures which it may be recalled they urged their representatives in Congress to enact, by unprecedented petition.

The people comprehended thoroughly that these measures are first, last and all the time in the public interest, and that they depend for ultimate success upon public cooperation. They have heard each measure discussed over the radio by the man to whom they turned in their dire distress in a manner without comparison in our entire political history.

Far more than the spokesmen for what is left of the Old Guard that brought the nation to the brink of ruin, the average man and woman in America understands the purposes to be attained. Because a well-balanced legislative program that does not neglect a single segment of our society, but provides for the recovery of all, is not only a novelty, it is just so epochal that all who are not concerned with the selfish interests of a favored few are determined that it shall be carried through to a happy conclusion.

The fear that produced the despair of two years ago was re-emphasied by the same selfish interests that tried this year to hamper and retard the recovery program. And they came back with no more to offer than this revived fear.

The Roosevelt administration has complied with the spirit and the letter of the people's mandate. It has given to each and every problem confronting it an honest and sincere devotion to duty. It has recognized that true government has the dual function of sound and efficient administration and the protection of the social needs of the people. For the record it has made in that respect, it has the active support of an intelligent and thoroughly aroused and appreciative public opinion.

This May Be Overproduction

James T. Flora believes he has a hen that is something to brag about. Flora owns a small White Rock biddie that recently surprised him and his neighbors by laying two eggs in one day. Even the hen seemed impressed by the performance and cackled more than the prescribed two times over the event.—Corbin Times.

Cornstalk 16 Feet Tall

At Eureka, on the land of the Warfield Gas Company, R. C. Leard company superintendent in this field, recently found and brought to the Times office a cornstalk measuring 16 feet and 9 inches. The ear was seven feet and four inches from the ground. If that doesn't sound like a long cornstalk try standing alongside this one.—Floyd County Times, Prestonburg.

Large Potatoes Grow at Waverly

Last week we boasted about the 12½ pound sweet potato which was grown at Waverly by Aubrey Gray, and now we find that huge Irish potatoes also are grown at that place. Saturday Frank Higginson brought to the Advocate office a half dozen Irish cobbles, which will average around one and one fourth pounds each.—Union County Advocate, Morganfield.

Man Sets His Watch By Scales

Things will come and things will be but curiosities will go on forever.

The other day a man staggered into the Reynolds Cafe. He marched up to the six-foot platform scales and pulled out his watch. Grundy Reynolds, proprietor of the establishment, walked over to him and inquired, "Do you want something mister?"

He replied, looking at the scales, "No, sir, I just wanted to set my watch. Is this clock right?"—Pike County News, Pikeville.

We understand that B. C. Calvert whose dwelling burned at Rabbit Hash, a few weeks since, has commenced to rebuild on the same ground.

Westbay's and Sandford's coal wagons were pretty busy last week, replenishing the supply of coal. Some have not yet provided their supply of fuel for the winter.

John Carpenter says he was held up in Lawrenceburg, one day last week and relieved of his tobacco, a nickel and a pint of whiskey, and that the highwayman took his hat and gave him an old cap.

East Bend Methodist Church which suffered so much damage by a wind storm in July last, has been thoroughly repaired and painted, and is now one of the handsomest churches in the county.

In the County Court last week Jas. F. McCormack was appointed administrator of Pat McCormack. The town of Walton filed a petition to condemn a strip of land belonging to W. L. Norman, and to be used for sidewalk purposes. W. R. Rouse, John McHatten and J. T. Booth were appointed to appraise said strip of land.

Prof. McKinley, of Emporia, Kan. the short-method Mathematician, of whom mention was made in this column last week, has organized a school here, and named it the Petersburg Commercial School and among the scholars are both young and old persons.

Winter is a good time to spread manure on the garden, provided the land is level. If not level, rains may wash the fertilizer value of the manure off the garden plot. Unless known to be already rich, spread manure now, and plow under late in January.

ACTIVE WORK WAS HEALTHFUL

The young men in the Citizens' Conservation corps who have been working in the forests, have averaged to gain 12 pounds while thus employed. Probably many of those young men began their strenuous work without being used to such muscular tasks. Probably many of them had doubts as to whether they could perform these very active stunts. Yet the work proved very beneficial.

Almost anybody who has no serious physical weakness is benefited by active work in the open air. The student who has stooped in a poorly ventilated office, would be new men if they could get out and swing an axe or guide a plough. Don't be afraid of working with your hands, boys!

BETTER DAYS AWAITS THEM

We are now entering into the third winter struggling with our unemployment problem. The final solution of this problem is not and will not be an easy one. The people of the Nation are to be congratulated for their liberality in helping those who are less fortunate, and the unfortunates are to be congratulated for their spirit of patience and calmness during the patience-testing years of the depression. Since "hope springs eternal in the human breast those separated from their positions did not lose faith, the result that thousands have returned to their former or other positions. The remaining idle crowd, too, that a better day awaits them. Their hope shall yet be rewarded.

INDIVIDUAL INDEPENDENCE

America is changing her ways, and in the changing charity for able-bodied men is being weighed in the balances and found wanting. Experience and common sense have taught us to exchange food and money for work. This does not imply a change in our spirit of helpfulness; it does not represent a Shylock attitude; but it is a realization that our citizens are happiest, healthiest, and most contented when their minds and hands are occupied. It is a harking back to the spirit on which America was founded, a spirit of individual independence—that fundamental heritage for which the American people have willingly shed their blood, and which is not offered at a price.

GUNFIGHTERS

In reading about the present day methods of gangsters and kidnapers the Editor agrees with Eugene Rhoads who writes very much to the point when he says:

"In the old days we said 'gunman'—a word exactly comparable with 'swordman.' Because of the modern gangster, the word gunman now carries the implication of coward, or baby-killer. It brings up the idea of seven against one; of helpless victims 'taken for a ride' or 'put on the spot'; of time-fuse bombs and steel vests, armored cars and machine guns; the safe and shameless!

When you read these stories of the oldtime gunmen, you will see that for even the worst of them, such deeds were unthinkable. If they were criminals—and some of them were—at least they were present at the scenes of their crimes, at their own proper peril... They set no dynamite to kill an enemy as he opened his garden gate. They killed armed men—not men unarmed and bound... It is impossible to imagine the worst and lowest of them, even if he were crazy-drunk, killing children or women. And the thought will come to you that if some of these oldtimers could come to life now, Chicago and New York could use their courage and skill, thanking God!

Fireside Thoughts

We were pleased to receive a letter from B. A. Floyd, the correspondent for Gunpowder and Hopeful. Mr. Floyd says he has written his neighborhood news for the Recorder for forty-five years. We believe this record will entitle him to be designated as the correspondent with the longest record. We wish him many more years of service.

We were very favorably impressed with the article appearing last week in which State Examiner Sewell complimented Boone county and its officials for the fine manner in which the county was managed. Mr. Sewell is one state official who doesn't praise unless it is deserved. During the prosperous years undoubtedly these same officials were criticized because they were considered too conservative. The present depression has served to prove that their actions were wise.

We believe that too few people are gifted with the ability to keep things in their places. Too many are inclined to drop things where they were last used. There should be a designated place for each article or tool. Some homes or business houses look as if they had been struck by a passing wind storm. It is a pleasure to observe one where everything is in order. The difference between success and failure is often due to shiftlessness.

We cannot help remarking what a fine record Boone county has in regard to her banks. During the worst depression in all history every Boone county bank has kept open and weathered the financial storms that were breaking all around us. You cannot drive in any direction without encountering vacant buildings which once housed prosperous banks. Not so in Boone. It is a record that all should be proud of and those in charge of our nine banks are to be congratulated for their good banking judgment and business foresight. While practically all banks now are under U. S. government supervision and depositors everywhere are protected by insurance, still it was not always so. The one fact stands out that at a time when other sections were in financial distress our local county banks held firm like the proverbial Gibraltar. Too much praise cannot be given our county and its financial institutions.

Editorial of the Week

RELIGION AND INTOLERANCE
(News-Herald)

The basic principle of the Christian religion is tolerance. Christ in all of His teachings stressed tolerance. He told us to love our neighbors as ourselves; to do unto others as we would be done by; to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and bind up the wounds of the afflicted. He urged everyone to be kind, considerate and thoughtful of others and charitable in thoughts and acts. We believe everyone who has studied the teachings of Christ will admit that He was the greatest teacher and exemplar of tolerance that ever lived.

While this is true it is true also that from the birth of the Christian religion to the present time the most intolerant persons have been men and women who claimed to be devout worshippers of Christ. Wars have been fought in His name, between nations because they could not agree how He should be worshipped. One sect of professed followers of Him have persecuted another sect of His followers. Some of the most cruel and barbarous acts of all history have been by persons claiming to be the only true disciples of Christ. Inhuman methods have been used by one denomination to force members of another denomination to accept Christ in a certain form and a certain way. Even today we believe the most intolerant persons in countries which accept the Christian religion are the most ardent and in their judgment most devout members of religious denomination. We do not believe there is a Christian religious denomination that does not have some members who, if they had the power, would not force all other persons to worship Christ in what they are convinced is the only true way.

These intolerant persons think they are devout Christians but they have not the slightest conception of His teachings. They are hard and cruel while Christ taught them to be kind and loving. They hate all who do not agree with them in regard to religion. Wherever they have the power they persecute those who disagree with them. Where they do not have the power they subtly persecute members of other denominations; do them injury whenever possible.

It is a strange situation. Every person thinks he should have the privilege to worship God in the way he desires. He is jealous of this privilege. Feeling this way you would think everyone would want every other person to have the same privilege. But there are many who want this privilege for themselves but also want to force others to worship God in what they think is the only proper form.

Personally we are convinced that the form in which a person worships God is of no importance and we think Christ made it plain that this is true; that how one acts and his feelings toward others is the only true test of whether he is a Christian. In our judgment anyone who is intolerant and bigoted is not a follower of Christ and there have been times when we have wondered if intolerance is not the unforgivable sin.

Turkey Brings In 14 Young Turkeys From Stolen Nest
Mrs. Marcel Combs, of Carrollton Route 2, had a turkey hen to bring in 14 young turkeys one day last week. The remarkable part is that the hen stole her nest.—News Democrat, Carrollton.

More Big Vegetables
Arthur Blevis brought in a turnip this week that weighed 7½ pounds. Not bad. Mrs. Casey Naylor brings in a dandy cshaw that weighs 4½ pounds. Take a look at them in our window.—Central-Recorder, Lancaster.

1933 Squash Well Preserved
T. H. McCord of Paris brought to our office this week a squash of the Pie Variety that he had saved from a lot grown in 1933. It was well preserved in every way without blemish or unsoundness of any kind. Mr. McCord stated that he had wrapped it carefully in paper and placed it in a barrel which was kept in the house.—Kentuckian-Citizen, Paris.

Who Can Beat This One?
James A. Mains, living about two miles west of Augusta, on the railroad, says he has been reading in the Chronicle "about the immense sweet potatoes grown by Bracken county farmers, weighing 5½ lbs." and he says he dug two sweet potatoes from one hill. One weighed 7½ pounds and the other 6 pounds. Mr. Mains invites the entire county to produce larger sweet potatoes.—Bracken Chronicle, Augusta.

An Unusual Accident
Last Saturday morning Nora Lee the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pres Eversole at Typo happened to a rare accident. She had an empty glass fruit jar clasp in her arms and in running with it, she fell, breaking the jar. The broken fragments cut in her abdomen and it was necessary to perform an operation, which was done at the Hurst-Snyder Hospital by Dr. Dana Snyder. She is doing fine and will be able to go home in a few days.—Leader, Hazard.

Nine-In-One Ear of Corn
N. G. Boswell of Horse Branch, produced a "9 in 1" ear of corn and brought it to The News office as proof. All nine ears are grown together at the base. The center ear is of ordinary size, while all others are small with four rows of grain each. The corn is of the Hickory King variety and was grown on hill land.—Ohio County News, Hartford.

Sweet Potato Inside Corn Cob
Mr. Other Whitlock, of Fry, Green county, brought into the Record-Herald office a sweet potato which was grown in a corn cob. The potato has a shape resembling an icicle and is about three inches long. The small end of the potato has grown completely through the cob from end to end and the cob is approximately the same length as the potato.—Record-Herald, Greensburg.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Files of The Boone County Recorder
ISSUE OF NOVEMBER 28, 1894

40 Years Ago—Dec. 5, 1894
The rain came at last—appearing very modestly.

Lee Gaines gave a turkey dinner last Thursday.

Miss Theresa Lassing will spend the winter in Cincinnati.

A Alloway will move into Mrs. Brendel's house on Broadway.

W. L. B. Rouse is down with rheumatism again.

A. Hempling's oldest boy fell and dislocated his elbow.

John Rucker and family, of Hebron, were visiting here last Saturday and Sunday.

W. J. Weindel and Ed. Keim spent their Thanksgiving at Utzinger.

F. P. Walton, of Utzinger, was among the Thanksgiving visitors in Petersburg.

The front of Krutz's store is to be torn out, and a glass front substituted.

Miss Mary Huey, of the Waterloo neighborhood, is the guest of Miss Katie Huey.

Miss Rose Dempsey was visiting her sister, Mrs. G. G. Hughes, several days last week.

Walter Reed, brother of Joseph Reed, and Miss Ida Smith, of Covington, will be married this evening.

Mrs. Darnell, of Cincinnati, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Rouse, last Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. A. Corbin, of Bellevue, passed through town Saturday, enroute to Union to attend his church on Sunday.

Frank Rue has found a fellow who can beat him killing rabbits, but he cannot beat Frank eating them.

Stanley Clutterbuck and wife were visiting in the Rabbit Hash neighborhood, last Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Roberts and son, of Texas, and Mrs. H. C. Robinson, of Riverside, Ohio, were the guests of Mrs. C. F. Sprague, Tuesday.

It is hoped it will be many long years before another long drought will be experienced in this county.

W. H. Harrison, Chris Barlow and others in the North Bend neighborhood, have lost nearly all their hogs of cholera.

D. E. Castleman, formerly of Warsaw, spent Sunday with his brother, T. B. Castleman, of Florence. He was enroute to Burlington, where he expects to make his home.

Mrs. L. C. Cowen and niece, of Rabbit Hash, Elza Harper and wife and daughter, of Hebron, took Thanksgiving dinner with Mr. Samuel Cowen and family.

F. F. Robinson, of the Richmond neighborhood, has lost 35 or 40 of his fine hogs of cholera. How the disease got started among his hogs is a mystery.

Misses Minnie and Kate Crigler and Robt. Bradford and William Crigler, of Hebron, were the pleasant guests at R. L. Ransom's Saturday and Sunday a week.

When all the new metal, now ready for spreading, is put on the Burlington and Florence pike, it will be a great impediment to travel, but it will ultimately put the road in excellent condition.

The scarlet fever is causing considerable uneasiness here, and the school has closed on that account until after Christmas. Two of Jas. Thompson's children have the dreadful disease.

J. D. Moore, one of our enterprising merchants, is making arrangements to prize tobacco here this winter for the farmers. This will be a valuable addition to the business of Big Bone.

The dry weather knocked out Berkshire's fox hunt, planned for last Thursday. The light shower that would have made Thursday a splendid day for the sport was twenty-four hours behind time.

C. L. Crisler has bought and put up a pair of the latest improved Fairbank's scales. W. J. Rice's workmen put them up in good style and Cy is now ready to ascertain the exact weight of your produce.

A strange disease has made its appearance among the hogs in some localities. It attacks the animal in the head, and it is not long after the first symptoms appear that the hog is ready for the bone yard.

The old toll house on the Lexington pike, near Elder E. Stephens, was totally destroyed by fire one morning last week. All the effects of the occupants were saved. There was no water at hand, and no effort was made to save the building.

A most delightful party was given on Thanksgiving night by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Gaines, at their elegant residence near Utzinger. They have a lovely home and two very charming daughters to assist them in entertaining. Among those present were Wm. K. Chambers, who is at ending dental college in Cincinnati, and Harry and Cleve Collins, of Covington.

It is thought that a wild cat is at large near Limestoneburg. While out hunting, one day last week, Alonzo Beemon heard it screaming. He answered it, and the cat came near to him, then his dogs started after it, but refused to take hold of it. Mr. Beemon gave the same animal a chase a few nights before, but did not see it.

AN INTERESTING CHARACTER

(Condensed from "Carry Nation")

The saloonkeeper was busy digging his own grave during the 1890's and the early years of the present century. About all that was needed to complete his downfall was the wave of public indignation which Carry Nation provoked at an auspicious moment. In less than six months she had done more to enforce the prohibition laws than had been accomplished in 20 years by the campaigns of churches and temperance organizations.

Carry Nation was the most industrious meddler and busybody that the Middle West has ever produced and one of the most extraordinary characters in American history. For the most part she confined her destructive attention to saloons, but there was scarcely any phase of human life from kissing to eating, into which she did not poke her disapproving nose. She was enormously proud of the devastation she left in her wake, yet a verbal attack by Carry Nation was almost as disturbing as one of her celebrated assaults with her hatchet and iron bar, for she possessed a flow of invective and an assortment of billingsgate that would have paralyzed a fishwife. She was violently opposed to extravagance in dress, and scathingly characterized well-dressed women as "manikians hung with the filthy rags of fashion." She saw clubmen as "diamond-studded, gold-fobbed rummies whose bodies are reeking masses of corruption," she addressed a judge as "your dishonor," policemen as "rum-soaked, whiskey-swilled, saturn-faced rummies," and she customarily saluted a jail-keeper and his wife as "Ahab and Jezebel." She boasted that "I never saw anything that needed rebuke exhortation or warning, but that I felt it my duty to meddle with it."

There were sound reasons for Carry Nation's peculiarities. Her mother had been obsessed for years by the splendid delusion that she was Queen Victoria. Her first husband, Dr. Gloyd, was a heavy drinker. She loved him to distraction, but she had been married only six months when she was compelled to leave him because of his drunkenness and failure to provide for her. Six months after the birth of their afflicted child he died a drunkard's death. The shock and the hardships that followed, and continual brooding over a long period brought her to the unalterable belief that all the sorrows of the world were due to the saloon. From that conviction it was but a step to the obsession that she was created of God to destroy the institution with her own hands.

For days at a time she fasted, and sometimes when she felt particularly discouraged she put ashes on her head and wrapped her body in a bizarre garment of sackcloth. For years she had been so radically addicted to the practice of bibiomy. She improved upon the usual method by opening her Bible, and, with eyes tightly shut, jabbing a pin at the page, and attempting to read encouragement in the verse impaled. When the pin quivered in the first verse of the 60th chapter of Isaiah, "Arise, the glory of the Lord is risen upon shine; for thy light is come, and thee," Carry interpreted this to mean that at last God was ready to send her forth. She went to sleep, and heard an assurance of support, clear and distinct, followed by another command: "Take something in your hands and throw at those places and smash them."

She discarded her sackcloth for the costume which she wore almost as a uniform during the remainder of her career—a black alpaca dress fastened by a row of dark pearl buttons extending up the side from hem to yoke; a bow of white ribbon at her throat; heavy square-toed shoes, black cotton stockings, a black poke-bonnet with a silk ribbon tied under her chin, and a heavy cape of navy blue, which she replaced in warm weather by a linen duster or a long crash coat. Thus attired, she boarded the train for Wichita, Kansas, to inaugurate the smashing campaign which brought her international renown and drove Kansas to the verge of civil war.

Her age then was 54 years. She was almost six feet tall and weighed between 175 and 180 pounds. A lifetime of physical toil had caloused her hands and hardened her muscles. Often the combined strength of several men was scarcely sufficient to control her, and she delighted in wrenching the arms of policemen and shoving them about. Her favorite method of resistance however, was to seize his head rapidly back and forth, and from side to side, meanwhile fairly blistering him with a torrent of fiery invective.

Her father, a man of little learning, had written her name in the family Bible as "Carry." Her middle name was Amelia. So long as she was Miss C. A. Moore, and later Mrs. C. A. Gloyd, her name was a matter of no great importance; but when, after marrying David Nation, she began to achieve renown, she saw clearly that her father's unconventional spelling had been one of the Lord's mysterious performances. "C. A. N. are the initials of my name," she wrote, "Carry A. Nation."

Scouting about Wichita for a saloon wherein to cast the first stone, she beheld the voluptuous contours of Cleopatra on the walls of the Carey, the show place of its kind. She confronted the bartender and pointed a quivering finger at him. "Young man! What are you doing in this hell hole?" "I'm sorry, Madam," said the bartender, "but we don't serve ladies." "Serve me!" shrieked Carry Nation. "Do you think I'd drink the hellish poison you've got there? What is that naked woman doing up there?" "That's only a picture, Madam." The embarrassed bartender continued to polish the glass.

Next morning, with an iron rod concealed beneath her cape, and half a dozen large stones wrapped in a newspaper, she entered the Carey again. Without saying a word she threw two stones which splintered the glass that covered "Cleopatra at the Bath" and lacerated the canvas. The half-dozen drinkers winced; the bartender cried out in protest, but before he could interfere Carry whirled and with a shout of triumph sent another stone hurling against a mirror valued at $1,500. The glass tumbled in fragments to the floor, and she shrieked, "Glory to God! Peace on Earth, good will to men!" She raced madly back and forth, failing at everything within sight.

Trailed by a score of curious persons, a detective strode into the saloon. Carry made an ineffectual swipe at his head, but he held her firmly and said, "You are destroying property, Madam. I must arrest you." Carry faced the throng in the doorway and cried dramatically: "They are going to put me in jail! But I'll make it hot for the other saloons when I get out! I came here to stop the joints and I'm going to make trouble!" As the heavy steel doors of the jail clang behind her she grasped the bars, crying loudly, "You put me in here a cub, but I'll go out a roaring lion, and I will make all hell howl!" As yet the saloonkeepers of Wichita saw nothing in the raid but the amusing spectacle of a foolish old woman on a rampage with an iron rod. But all over Kansas wires hummed with the story. And the more zealous of the temperance advocates, especially the women, were seized with excitement. Letters came inviting Carry to other Kansas towns. No sooner was she released, after several weeks, from the jail than she proceeded, now armed with hatchet as well as iron bar, to carry out her threat in Wichita and in other Kansas towns. Topeka, the state capital, she regarded as one of the major objectives in her campaign to sweep the saloon off the American continent. The entire state soon blazed with prohibitionary fervor and from Holton to the north to Arkansas City in the south excited men and women armed themselves and marched singing and praying against the saloon. From Maine to California her exploits were reported and commented upon editorially. During the first year of her career, Carry Nation competed, as a source of news, with the death of Queen Victoria and the assassination of President McKinley, but not even these events could keep her name off the front pages.

After leaving Topeka, Carry Nation's route led her, on lecture tours, through southwestern Iowa. It was a triumphal procession. Enormous and friendly crowds greeted her in the towns, and as she leaned from the train platform, women held up their babies to be kissed and men fought for the privilege of shaking her hand. This trip was but the beginning of the travels which, with interludes of imprisonment on old charges in Wichita and Topeka, took her in almost every state of the Union, even into Canada and the British Isles and made her one of the best-known figures of her time. During the next months Carry Nation Clubs and Law and Order Leagues were formed in innumerable towns and cities; the miniature hatchet almost superseded the traditional white ribbon as the emblem of temperance; and dogs and cats, and children were named for her. In Missouri and other states which bordered the battleground there was so much talk of the crusader that the children abandoned their games of Indian and played saloon smasher. The boys piled up boxes and called the edifice a saloon and the little girls swooped down upon it with the family hatchet. But the complacent saloonkeepers greeted her exploits with roars of ribald laughter, decorated their bars with extravagantly ornamented hatchets, posted such signs as "All Nations Welcome

But Carry!" and named drinks in her honor.

Publicity was Carry Nation's most important contribution to the cause of prohibition, for it inspired other women to emulation and the temperance hosts to bellicose thinking and talking about the liquor traffic; it compelled almost immediately a tightening of law enforcement; it was responsible for the passage of many new regulatory statutes, and it attracted attention, as nothing else had, to the abominations and corruption surrounding the saloon. It was the wave of public indignation which Carry Nation provoked that enabled the Anti-Saloon League to become the dominant political power of the United States.

Carry Nation's travels and adventures during the remainder of her life differed only in detail from those of the six months which had followed her debut on the lecture platform. Time could not wither nor custom stale her infinite variety, and wherever she went and whatever she did she aroused excitement and commotion. Before the infirmities of age had compelled her to retire to her farm in Arkansas, and thereafter to make only occasional public appearances, she had instigated a score of riots of varying degrees of seriousness, she had been beat by a dozen saloonkeepers and other enemies, she had scandalized politicians high and low by attempting to investigate the personal habits of the President of the United States, and she had been arrested no fewer than 25 times. At a final foray against the liquor traffic, she made her last public appearance at Eureka Springs near the Missouri border. In a slow, painful whisper, she spoke her valediction: "I-I have done what I could."

Her unmarked grave was discovered in a tangle of underbrush at Belton, Missouri, in 1923, and on it was erected a granite shaft by the Carry A. Nation Monument Association.

AN UNSIGNED LETTER

"Yesterday morning I saw a boy, a very ordinary and quite ragged boy, down on his knees alongside a concrete highway near Hope, Arkansas. He was sobbing and crying. Alongside the boy was the limp remains of a big white dog. The picture threw me off my stride for the entire day. Throwing me off my stride is not important, but it is not pleasant to recall that a boy's heart had been broken.

"Of course the boy will get over it, and there are lots of dogs, but the older I grow the more I realize that it is not a little thing to break a boy's heart, even temporarily. I am a grown man and in 1926 I lost a pointer. Whenever I think of Micky and his great brown eyes, my own eyes fill up. They are doing it now, and I wouldn't be a darned bit ashamed if there were ninety-seven million people watching me.

"A lot of dog killings are avoidable. Of course some cannot be avoided, but a lot of them can. I have driven nearly forty thousand miles a year for some years, and I have never hit a dog. At the expense of a couple of dented fenders and maybe a few feet of brake lining, I have always avoided hitting them. They respond to the tooting of a horn very well, and I have slept better because I have no brokenhearted boy on my conscience.

"If I were a writing man and had a page or two to fill with editorials, I would write an editorial about driving so as to avoid hitting dogs. If you had been with me, you would have written two editorials. I know what you must think about dogs and boys' hearts."

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Fenelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Fenelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Fenelope retired from business, and Fenelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even then, the doctor's faithful once nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

That smile melted her. "It always did. For five years she had been trying to bully him, and his smile had always defeated her, for which reason she often had a brainstorm and threatened to resign his service. And she would have done it, too, for she was a forceful woman, only for the fear that he might replace her with a nurse who didn't understand him—a la-della young thing, half-baked professionally, who would fall in love with him and make him marry her. He was so kind and sympathetic Lanny knew he would marry her, just to keep her from feeling bad.

"I'm his sympathy," she growled, as she prepared the drinks in an inner room. "That's why he's worked to death. He'll die young—overwork—angina, the young fool! That big, fresh, heavy-footed cop! How dare he force his way in—the big bum! And getting a drink for his dirty work!" She sniffed and served the highballs. "You're mighty sweet, Lanny," Doctor Burt told her. "Now, run along home."

Lanny did not go. She knew that big moocher of a chief of police would praise such old liquor and his host would offer him a second helping.

"I've got a girl down at Central station," Dan McNamara was saying. "Shoplifting detail picked her up in a department store where she'd plinched a dozen and a half silk stockings. Pet it larceny and caught with the goods. I sent a good man around to try to square the case with the department store people, but they insist on pressing charges and that's too bad because she's got a couple of priors against her. Out on probation—suspended sentence, you understand, Doc. And now she'll do two years in the Big House. 'S tough on the girl.'"

"What's your interest in her, if she's a confirmed thief?"

"Well, maybe she wouldn't be a thief if she had the breaks," he defended. "Somebody must have given her a sweet boost on the nose, because her back's been broke and nothing's left of it but a saddle."

"Is she tough?"

"Is she tough? Doc, she's so tough I know it ain't natural. A girl as tough as her must be looney. But there ain't nothing tough about her eyes or her mouth—and that's where you can always find toughness that's been bred in the bone. There's something about this girl that's different. Doc. I don't know what it is but I know this much: she wasn't always tough. I want you to give her the once over."

"I understand there is a psychologist and psychiatrist—Doctor Blethen—who does all of the medico-legal work for the department, Chief. I wouldn't care to examine the girl except on his invitation."

"Yes, I know. Question of ethics, and while the question is being debated this girl gets hauled into court and takes the rap on the old charge of grand theft. I know Blethen. I've tried him and he says this girl is a natural hoodlum, and mentally and physically healthy. He says she's got more intelligence than any ten girls in Vassar. She must be smart, too, because she told him he was a fool, and I agree with her."

Doctor Burt was silent, for he was intensely ethical and would not criticize a fellow doctor.

"I've heard a lot about you," the chief of police continued. "You're regarded as the best psychiatrist and neurologist in San Francisco. So don't talk to me about the capable Doc Blethen. I want you to look this girl over."

His huge face brightened as he summoned a thought that would bolster up his plea. "She don't cuss me, Doc. I've asked her all about herself, and

"She's Ugly When You Look at Her the First Time, Doc."

I'm sure she tells me all she knows, but she don't know anything. She's bound to like you, Doc, and when she likes anybody—now, Doc, I've got a notion you can get her confidence to such an extent you can prong down into her soul and locate the trouble. I hear men like you do things like that nowadays."

Doctor Burt smiled. "Sometimes we uncover complexes or mental reflexes; frequently we do not. And when we have uncovered them we cannot always cure them. You say this girl has a ruined nose? Does it affect her appearance greatly?"

"She's ugly when you look at her the first time, Doc, but after you've talked with her and looked some more the shock sort of wears off. I got a notion that if her nose could be straightened up she'd be a goodlooking girl. And maybe if her mind could be straightened, she'd be a good girl."

"Know anything about her antecedents, her background?"

"I don't know and I can't find out. She won't tell me."

"It may be," Doctor Burt suggested; "that she doesn't know. Has Blethen finished with the case?"

"Yes, sir. He told me not to bother him about her no more."

Doctor Burt indicated his telephone. "Call him up, Chief, and ask him if he has any objection to having me give her an unofficial examination."

McNamara did so. Following a brief conversation, he turned the telephone over to Stephen.

Stephen took the telephone. "Doctor Blethen?" Burt speaking. The chief came to my office about that girl he has at the central station. Notwithstanding your report he has asked me, as a personal favor to see the girl. You understand, however—"

"Yes, I understand. Burt, she's a bad lot."

"Something the chief said has mildly aroused my curiosity. If you would care to invite me to discuss her case—understand I have no desire to intrude—"

"I'm through with her, Burt. Help yourself, old man. However, take a tip from me and don't let that fellow McNamara sell himself to you. If you do he'll keep you busy. I doubt if any man on earth can run a criminal down as promptly as McNamara; he has a photographic brain and never forgets a face or a fact; but after he's landed a yegg in his cooler he develops an abnormal yearning to find out what made him act that way. Mac's a softy."

"Exactly. Thank you, Blethen. Still, a blind pig will sometimes find an acorn, and something he said—Good-by."

Lanny entered. "There's a young woman in the waiting room," she announced. "She said to me, 'Where the h— is that bonehead of a chief gone?' Lanny looked at Dan McNamara severely over the rims of her spectacles. 'Friend of yours?' she queried witheringly."

"Yes," McNamara admitted, "and Doc's new patient. Bring her in and he'll give her the once over."

But Lanny shook her head. "This nut shop is closed for the day," she told him. "Bring her around at one o'clock tomorrow. The doctor has fifteen minutes then."

"Lanny!" Stephen reproved her. Then to Dan McNamara: "Do you mean to tell me you left her out there unguarded? How would you explain her escape—if she had chosen to disappear?"

"I don't think she'd duck, Doc. But even if she tried it, I got a plain clothes man on guard."

"Please bring the patient in, Lanny," Stephen pleaded. "And then you might—"

he glanced eloquently at their empty glasses. Lanny glared at him, so he smiled—and she ceased to glare. But she went on mumbling.

Dan McNamara shook his head sagely. "Nothing wrong with that woman's thinking apparatus," he informed Stephen.

And then Lanny ushered the new patient in. She paused just inside the door, swept the room with a slow glance and permitted her gaze to come to rest on Stephen Burt, who rose and bowed to her. Instantly the frozen hostility in her glance faded and she smiled. "Reminds me of a gargoyle," Stephen reflected.

"Meet my friend, Dr. Stephen Burt, Nance," Dan McNamara introduced her airily. "Doc, this is Nance Belden, alias Dorothy Case, alias Fay Barham, alias Elizabeth Vernon."

Stephen said politely that he was delighted to make her acquaintance, and Nance replied with acrid directness, "Why?" Whereat Stephen Burt laughed and set a chair for her. Nance plumped herself down in it with a weary sigh, jerked off her jaunty hat and threw it on Stephen's desk. "All right, Steve. Shoot! What's the idea of the big convention? Another fishing expedition?"

"Now, Nance," Dan McNamara soothed her, "you cut that out. You're not talking to Doc Blethen. Doc Burt's a gentleman."

Nance remembered her manners. "My error," she apologized.

From the doorway leading into the waiting room, Lanny gazed upon the girl with frank disapproval. Over Nance's shoulder she caught Stephen's eye and shook her head sorrowfully.

"The old girl's shocked!" Nance laughed softly without looking around, while Lanny disappeared.

"How do you know, Miss Belden?" Stephen inquired.

"Mirror," and Nance Belden pointed. "Close your eyes," Stephen commanded, "and describe this room to me."

CHANGE IN TAX RULE ON HOME KILLED HOGS

A ruling effective Nov. 1 relieves farmers of liability for paying the processing tax on hogs which they butcher and sell to commercial handlers or dealers, but makes such dealers liable for the tax.

As a result of this new ruling, says a statement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, farmers are liable for the processing tax only with respect to hog products sold direct to consumers in excess of the exemption allowed under the tax regulation.

No tax is required to be paid by producers who slaughter their own hogs and sell direct to consumers not more than 300 pounds of meat.

If more than 300 pounds are sold, then there is a tax on the excess up to 1,000 pounds. If more than 1,000 pounds are sold in one year, the 300 pounds exemption is lost and the tax must be paid on all hogs slaughtered.

The 300-pound exemption does not apply to farmers who slaughter hogs not of their own raising.

Tax forms are obtainable from the Collector of Internal Revenue, Hog Processing Division, Custom House, Louisville.

RADIO PROGRAM FOR KENTUCKY FARMERS

NOW AT 12 O'CLOCK

The radio program of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has been changed from 12:45 to 12 o'clock, in order that more farmers may listen to it.

Each day except Saturday and Sunday the college broadcasts over WHAS discussions of problems of interest to Kentucky farmers, covering every phase of farming and homemaking. On Friday, questions are answered by L. C. Brewer, of the College of Agriculture.

The new time will enable many more farmers to hear the programs, it is thought. Letters received at the College indicate that these radio talks are heard daily by thousands of farmers in Kentucky and other states.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

B. C. Smith of Whitley county made a 30-bushel per acre increase in corn yield by following suggestions of the county agent. He put half a ton of lime and 125 pounds of phosphate on land that formerly gave a 15 to 20 bushel yield, and averaged 50 bushels per acre as a result.

Eighty-three Meade county farmers and their families spent a day inspecting the $75,000 farmers' cooperative creamery at Orleans, Ind. Ways of shipping better cream and the new cream regulations were discussed. Patrons are to be paid 2 cents refund for each pound of butterfat shipped last year.

Fred Smith of Todd county sold lambs and wool at a profit of $209, a demonstration inventory shows. Fifty-one ewes raised 67 lambs and produced 380 pounds of wool. Total sales of the lambs and wool amounted to $404, and expenses were $195.

Mrs. John Grainger, of Warren county canned 402 quarts of fruits and vegetables, reports John H. Finch, agent in charge of Negro work in the county. She stored 50 bushels of potatoes, 80 pounds of dried fruit, 10 gallons of "brine" corn, 38 gallons of sorghum molasses, and has 200 chickens and six 300-pound hogs.

Approximately 15,000 acres of lespedeza were seeded in Allen county last spring, 20 percent of the improved land. When County Agent J. H. Atkinson began his work in 1928, not more than 5 percent of the land was planted in any kind of legume.

Reports of foods leaders sometimes sound like "true confessions," meetings, says Sunshine Golley, Bell county home demonstration agent. Fruits and leafy vegetables make up a large part of menus and money spent for medicines is now used on home improvement projects.

TEST BREEDING FLOCKS FOR PULLORUM DISEASE

Flocks of chickens to be used for breeding purposes should be blood tested for pullorum disease, the reactors sold at once, and the premises thoroughly cleaned and disinfected to prevent spread of the disease to clean birds.

The elimination of this disease, formerly called bacillary white diarrhea, results in a big saving in baby chicks. Where farmers once started two to three times as many chicks as they planned to raised, since testing became general they now often raise 95 percent of the chicks obtained from tested stock.

Eggs from tested flocks are in demand by hatchery operators, who pay 6 to 15 cents a dozen above market prices.

Farmers desiring to have their flocks tested should confer with hatchery men to whom they hope to sell eggs, see a county agent or write to the College of Agriculture University of Kentucky, for further information.

TURKEY CROP DROPS

BELOW THAT OF 1933

The number of turkeys to be marketed this year is only about 93 percent as large as last year, according to the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

This fact, together with the reduced supplies of other poultry and the higher prices of meats and foodstuffs generally, should make turkey prices higher than last year, says a statement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Shortage of feed in many sections may result in a greater proportion of the crop than usual being sold at Thanksgiving time. If this does occur, turkeys may bring better prices at Christmas and later in the winter.

Storage holdings of turkeys are a little larger than last year but smaller than the five-year average.

SUGGESTS RATIONS FOR BREEDING HOGS

Good pasture simplifies the feeding of breeding hogs. Where it is not available, alfalfa hay makes a good substitute. The second or third cutting, cured green and with fine stems, is best. Gilts

MEETING IN GEORGETOWN

The officials of the Federal Land Bank, of Louisville held a meeting Wednesday at the Lancaster Hotel in Georgetown, and invited all officers of local National Farm Loan Associations to meet with them for a business session and luncheon. A. B. Renaker, Secretary-Treasurer, and Directors, E. A. Martin, J. H. Grimes, Karl Rouse and Thomas Hensley, of the Boone County National Farm Loan Association, attended this meeting. It was not convenient for the other director, B. E. Aylor, of the local association to attend.

During the past year the local association has made over a half million dollars in loans to farmers of Boone county, the most of which loans went to pay off loans in banks. This places the banks in a highly liquid condition and enables them to advance new loans to their customers.

4-H TOBACCO MEMBERS

HOLD SHOW AND SALE

Northern Kentucky 4-H tobacco club members will hold their second annual show and sale at Covington on December 14th and 15th. The tobacco will be delivered on the 14th and sold on the morning of the 15th.

Ninety-three Boone County 4-H Club members this year have raised approximately forty thousand pounds of tobacco in their club projects. Premiums will be awarded best crops, best baskets of the various grades and best crops record books. The county and district tobacco champions will also be selected.

The show and sale this year is expected to be far more successful than the first show held last year. The members have produced a much better quality of tobacco and the price is expected to be considerably higher.

SOME CHANGES IN

NEXT YEAR'S CORN

AND HOG PROGRAM

The corn-hog adjustment program of the AAA for the next year calls for a production on the part of the contract signers of not more than 90 per cent of the average corn acreage and number of hogs produced in 1932 and 1933, according to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Payments next year will be $15 per head for the number of hogs reduced and 35 cents a bushel for the estimated yield of corn on the land removed from production.

Payments this year were $5 a head on the 1934 allotment, signers being permitted to produce 75 per cent of their base period production; and 30 cents a bushel on the estimated amount of corn that might have been produced on the land not used.

While corn production this year was reduced 20 to 30 percent from the base period, the limits will be 10 to 30 percent next year.

Unrestricted use will be permitted of land removed from corn production next year.

Only corn-hog contract signers will be eligible for the contemplated corn loan program next fall.

Growers who did not sign contracts this year will be eligible to sign next year.

COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

CHRISTMAS SEAL

CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY

Mrs. William Rudicill, chairman of the Boone County Christmas Seal Committee, announces that arrangements are under way for the 1934 campaign. The campaign will be conducted from Thanksgiving to Christmas. The seals will be sold by the school children and others at 1c each. The county will receive one half of the proceeds and the same will be turned over to the local Red Cross to be used as they see fit. The fund is generally used in the aid of needy children.

A silver loving cup is awarded to the school selling the largest number per pupil. Last year the cup was won by the Florence school which now has the cup. No doubt the county schools will take an active part in the Christmas Seal Campaign this year. They will do this not in anticipation of winning the cup which is a distinct honor in itself, but because the movement is such a worthy cause.

The public should keep this sale in mind, buy as many seals as possible, and thereby give aid to the needy children in our county. Mrs. Rudicill and her committee ask for the hearty and generous cooperation of all citizens.

DON'T FORGET THE ## BIG MINSTREL SHOW

The P. T. A. organizations of the various County High Schools as well as the members of the Boone Post, No. 4, American Legion ask that the public do not forget the big minstrel and entertainment which will be presented in the different school auditoriums in the very near future. The show will be full of clean fun while the actors will be local members of the American Legion. $73,740 AAA TOBACCO*BENEFIT PAYMENTS

Boone county farmers will receive more than $73,740.00 in benefit payments for 1934 reductions alone according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner.

If conservative information from well informed tobacco men in Boone county is taken the 1,228,142 pounds allotted crop of this year through improved prices should bring at least $45,279.00 more than the 2,089,480 pound base crop of 1933. If the later figures are correct the tobacco income this year will be increased through the AAA program a total of $119,119.00.

The above calculations are made from the rental payments of $21,870.00 already received on 735 AAA tobacco contracts. The first adjustment payment based on the 500 checks already received should bring an additional $21,870.00 and the second adjustment payment on a minimum estimate of $30,000.00 which in all probability should be close to $40,000.00. This year's crop is expected to bring more per pound than last year's crop.

If the above figures work out as well as they look at the present time the AAA tobacco program should prove a boom to Boone county farmers.

AAA ALLOTMENT CARDS*READY; MUST HAVE CARDS OR PAY TAX

AAA Tobacco Allotment cards for the 25 per cent tax exemptions under the Smith-Kerr Act have been received and will be ready for distribution on Friday of this week, according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner.

Contract signers and non-contracting growers allotted tax exemptions must sign their marketing cards at the County Agent's office before allotment cards will be issued. These allotment cards must be attached to the sales ticket when the crop is sold at the warehouse where a special representative of the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will write a tax-payment warrant covering the tobacco represented on the warehouse ticket. He will make a notation on the allotment card showing that pounds covered by the warrant and the value of the tobacco.

The County Agent's office will make every effort to serve the growers in the issuing of the allotment cards. However, certain regulations have been laid down that must be followed. Beginning Friday growers may obtain their cards on any day except Sundays until the warehouse season closes. Growers are cautioned that they must secure their allotment cards before selling their crop or else the warehouse will be required to deduct the 25 per cent tax on the value of the crop.

HOG SLAUGHTERING*AND AAA CONTRACT

Farmers Not Limited in Number of Hogs They May Kill For Home Use

Some farmers have misunderstood certain features of the corn-hog adjustment contract dealing with the butchering of hogs, says a statement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

The contract places no limitation upon the use or sale of hogs produced in the base period, and therefore, hogs which were reported on the contract as "to be sold, kept on the farm or butchered for home use without any way affecting the contract."

The limitation in the contract deals with the number of hogs in excess of the hog allotment which farmers may produce this year, and states that this excess number shall not exceed the average number of those slaughtered or kept for home slaughter during the past two years.

It does not limit the number that may be butchered this year, if the farmer wishes to butcher some of his allotted hogs, purchased hogs or older hogs carried over from the base period.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hauser, Pastor
Sunday, Dec. 2, Bible School at 10:00 A. M. Mr. John Surface, Supt. On Sunday evening at 8 o'clock the Young Women's Missionary Society will sponsor a public Thank-Offering service at the church. This will be in the form of a song service, entitled, "Sing a New Song." The congregation and friends are cordially invited to attend.

The Luther League will hold its business and social meeting at the church on Tuesday evening, Dec. 4, at the church at 8 o'clock. This will be in the form of a Christmas party and each one who attends is requested to bring a 10 cent gift for exchange.

Choir rehearsal will be held Wednesday evening, Dec. 5th at 8 o'clock at Hebron church.

TEAMS WILL MEET WITH OFFICIALS THIS WEEK

Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky independent basketball clubs enrolled in the Coca-Cola $2,500 Prize Championship will meet with officials of the tourney late this week to arrange schedules and settle details of organization. It has been announced officially that the Championship season will open on Saturday, December 8.

To the winning clubs in the Coca-Cola Championship will go substantial cash awards well worth shooting for. In the thick of the fight for the Kentucky Championship will be a top-notch team representing Petersburg, composed entirely of local stars.

The Coca-Cola Championship represents the first successful attempt to organize independent basketball on a basis of clean play comparable to the game played in the schools. Heavy restrictions as to eligibility have been placed upon competing teams to insure balanced leagues and a closely-fought campaign. In many instances, teams in the Coca-Cola Championship are under the active direction of school authorities and civic leaders; and in every case the teams are composed of former high school stars and college players.

Prime object of the Championship is to encourage outstanding scholastic players, now graduated, to continue playing in carefully organized leagues. Officials of the Championship are confident that, under this system, the fans will see a vastly improved brand of independent basketball. Throughout the circuit, admission prices will be kept extremely low to encourage popular interest.

Schedules for the three Coca-Cola leagues will be announced immediately after the meetings this week-end. Ohio teams will gather at Blanchester on Friday afternoon; Kentucky teams at Williamsburg on Saturday afternoon; and Indiana clubs at Dillsboro on Sunday afternoon.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

The program furnished by Mrs. James R. Huey's room was enjoyed by all. The pupils were well trained. Congratulations to Mrs. Huey.

The basketball game Friday night between Hebron and Hamilton was enjoyed by all, as it was a close game. The Hebron girls won, but the Hebron boys went down to defeat at the hands of the Hamilton five.

Ivan Walston and family spent the week-end with his relatives at Pete.

James Huey and wife spent the week-end with his father Willie Huey, of Bellevue.

Bruce Ryle and wife spent Sunday with S. B. Ryle.

THE FARM AND HOME (Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

It is not advisable to sell unfattened turkeys at Thanksgiving time. They often bring a good price later in the winter, and are more profitable when properly finished. Sell only the best finished ones at Thanksgiving and the others as they are ready.

Farmers who sign adjustment contracts are entitled to a "Farm Record Book," published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in which they can keep records of expense, receipts, productions of crops, and other valuable information.

Pruning of trees may be done any time during the winter. While enough thinning should be done to let sunlight into the tops, this can be overdone. Care should be taken not to cut out too much fruit-bearing wood. All parts of the tree should be given consideration and a moderate amount of thinning and heading back done.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Lee county farmers bought 850 tons of ground limestone in October, the largest amount ever used in the county in one month. Much of the corn-hog money received from the Government is being used to lime and fertilize the soil and make other farm improvements.

C. O. Graves, of Scott county, made the first entry from Kentucky for the 1934 International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago. He is fitting 10 purebred Herefords for the big show. Several other entries have been made from this state.

Kentucky farmers are eligible to enter a national contest being conducted by the Northern Nut Growers Association, Geneva, N. Y., in which cash prizes are offered for the best black walnuts, hickory nuts, etc. The association is endeavoring to discover and perpetuate the best native nuts.

The Kentucky Seed Improvement Association has issued a list of certified seed producers, including corn, lespedeza, soybeans, tobacco and wheat. Interested persons should address the association at the Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington.

The Korean lespedeza seed crop in Kentucky is placed at a little more than half of last year's production of 12,000,000 pounds. Tennessee and North Carolina have normal crop, and Missouri a small crop of seed.

The 13 grade Jerseys owned by Robert Creekmore, a member of the Warren-Simpson County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, averaged 39.6 pounds of butterfat last month. P. B. Gaines' herd of 61 purebred Jerseys in Carroll county averaged 37.8 pounds of butterfat.

MILLION FARMERS BORROW OVER BILLION DOLLARS

Washington—One farm out of every six in the United States is now mortgaged to, the Government.

Latest figures announced by the Farm Credit Administration show 1,057,000 direct loans made to farmers for a total considerably in excess of $1,000,000,000.

W. I. Myers, governor of the FCA announced the total sum involved in loans to farmers, and W. Forbes Morgan, deputy governor, announced the number of loans. It was stated officially that the direct loans were made to individual farmers in all except a few instances.

The 1930 census showed 288,648 farms in the United States. Using these figures as a basis of calculation, it is apparent that approximately one farm out of every six is now mortgaged to the Government, through the FCA and its allied organization.

FARES TO AND FROM CINCINNATI TO BE KEPT AS THEY ARE

Carfares from Cincinnati to northern Kentucky remain at 5 cents. Fares from Campbell county to Cincinnati remain at 10 cents or two fares for 15 cents.

All Kenton county passengers going to Ohio, except those boarding cars at a few stops determined by the Ludlow and "Rosedale" contracts will pay 7½ cents for tokens or 10 cents cash. Passengers who board cars at those designated points will pay only 5 cents to go to Cincinnati.

That is what P. G. Vonder-smith, general manager of the Green Line, said today will be the effect of a street car fare decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court.

CHILL THE HOG CARCASS

Chilling is an important part of home hog butchering, points out Grady Sellard of the College of Agriculture University of Kentucky. Killing should be done when the temperature is near or below freezing. Proper curing and preservation of pork cannot be had unless the carcass is completely freed of animal heat. Well finished hogs weighing around 200 lbs. are most satisfactory for home butchering. They have consumed less feed per pound of pork produced and are easier to handle than heavier hogs.

Parents who constantly restrain a child in wholesome activities, or who go to the other extreme and allow him to do as he pleases and give him every wish and desire, are developing a disobedient spoiled child who will have to be punished to correct his faults.

Approximately 250,000 pounds of Korean lespedeza seed was saved in Pulaski county.

A PROBLEM OF YOUTH

Who is it that thinks crime will pay? Who believes that it offers "short cut" to independence and prosperity? The answer is the young men of the nation.

Two-thirds of all arrests for crime are of persons between the ages of 15 and 24 years. Those 19 years of age exceed all other ages in the number of arrests. This proves that crime entices the young rather than the mature.

The Department of Justice, which sponsors the above figures, has also indicated that their reports demonstrate that native-born whites, which also includes immediate descendants of foreign-born, commit more crimes than the foreign-born element in our population, comparative to the number of each.

Another fact found by the figures of the Department of Justice is that in the crimes of burglary, robbery, and assault the number of negroes arrested far exceed the number of whites, even allowing for the difference in the number of the respective groups in our population.

ALLOTMENT CARDS

FOR TAX EXEMPTION UNDER SMITH-KERR ACT NOW READY—GROWER MUST SIGN FOR CARD—MAY SELL TEN PER CENT MORE THAN ALLOTMENT

Boone County AAA tobacco allotment cards for tax exemption under the Smith-Kerr Act are now ready at the County Office in Burlington according to County Agent H. R. Forkner.

Every grower who has signed a contract and is growing tobacco this year is eligible to receive up to the amount of his allotment to be sold this year. It is necessary that the grower sign for the allotment card at Burlington before the card can be issued. Special cases where growers can not call for their cards will have to be taken up individually.

Growers may sell up to ten per cent in excess of their allotment with their tax paid by warrants. If for any reason more than 10 per cent excess is sold their contract will be violated. Payments are reduced for each percent over the allotment sold and unless the crop will bring an exceptionally high price then the added penalty because of a lowered benefit payment will not make this profitable except in a very few cases. The proposed penalty for the selling of the excess allotment up to 10 per cent will reduce the second adjustment payment as follows:

| Percent Sold in excess of Allotment | Percentage Basis of Second Adjustment Payments |
|-------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| Up to 2                             | 34                                             |
| 2.1 to 4                            | 33                                             |
| 4.1 to 6                            | 32                                             |
| 6.1 to 8                            | 31                                             |
| 8.1 to 10                           | 30                                             |
| 10.1 to 12                          | 29                                             |
| 12.1 to 14                          | 28                                             |

The general regulations for use of the allotment cards are as follows:

- Read the following instructions and keep for future reference:
- In case any Allotment Card issued to you is lost, the Secretary of Agriculture is not obligated to replace such lost card, nor to issue tax-payment warrants for the tobacco allotment covered thereby.
- If tenants or share-croppers grew any part of the tobacco in 1934, the producer agrees that he will apply the tax-payment warrants (Kerr-Smith Act), without discrimination between the producer, tenants, and share-croppers in proportion to the amount of tobacco produced by each; and the producer agrees to keep records of the same. For failure to carry out this provision, the producer shall be required to refund the amount of the tax involved.
- No tobacco grown under your contract may be sold unless such sale is recorded on your Allotment Card. The total number pounds of 1934 crop sold cannot exceed the number of pounds allotted without violating your contract.
- If, for any reason your total sales should exceed your allotment, the rate of your SECOND ADJUSTMENT PAYMENT will be REDUCED or your CONTRACT will be TERMINATED. In case your contract is terminated, you will not receive further payments and may be required to refund any previous payments in addition to an amount equal to the value of tax-payment warrants issued to you.

5. In selling tobacco under your contract, the person making the sale will be required to present the Allotment Card to the Agent of the Secretary of Agriculture at the warehouse in order to obtain a tax-payment warrant.

6. Warehousemen are required to collect the tax at the time of sale, therefore, it is necessary that your Allotment Card be presented when the sale is made.

7. After each sale, the producer should check the following:

- Warehouse statement to see if number of pounds is added correctly.
- Allotment Card to see if number of pounds is entered correctly.
- Check subtraction of number of pounds to determine remaining "unsold allotment."

When nearly all of the production allotment has been used, the producer should determine, before making another sale, that the quantity of tobacco prepared for sale is not more than the unsold allotment.

8. THE ALLOTMENT CARD MUST BE RETURNED TO THE COUNTY OFFICE when all the sales have been made, before the second adjustment payment can be approved. All entries on Allotment Cards will be checked against copies of tax-payment warrants. The Marketing Card for the sales of the 1934 crop will be prepared in the county office from duplicate copies of tax-payment warrants.

CIRCUIT COURT

TO CONVENE NEXT MONDAY—HEAVY DOCKET, BUT SHORT TERM IS EXPECTED DUE TO FARMERS BEING BUSY STRIPPING TOBACCO

Circuit Court will convene next Monday with a fairly heavy docket, but according to all reports it will be a very short term due to the fact that farmers are very busy at this time stripping their tobacco and getting the crop ready for market. However, this report is not official and the term may last longer than anticipated.

According to a report from the Circuit Clerk, A. D. Yelton, jurors will probably be paid at the close of the term of court. This practice has not been in effect heretofore, and was only made a law at the last session of the Legislature.

TOMCATS LOSE THRILLER

One of the most thrilling basketball games of the season was played by the Newport Wildcats and the Burlington Tomcats at the Newport Gym. Tuesday night, Dec. 4. Although Newport came out on top of a 28 to 30 score, the game was anybody's game all the way through with neither team ever having more than a four point lead at any time. Throughout the game first one and then the other forged ahead only to go behind in a few moments of play. The game was played before a capacity house which must have had the thrilling spirit of basketball thoroughly inculcated into their veins sufficient to carry them to games throughout the season. Teamwork showed throughout the game which was shown by the well-distributed scoring honors. Sebree, Voshell and Snow divided honors with 11, 9 and 6 points each for the Tomcats while Yeager and Rothe lead for the victors with 10 and 6 respectively. The game was fast and demonstrated the highest type of clean athletics. There were but few fouls made by either team, an honor to be coveted by any basketball squad.

TO NEWPORT

Burlington will be host to the Florence basketball teams Saturday night, Dec. 8. This will be two good games. Don't fail to attend.

WEED RECEIPTS

ARE LIGHT BUT PRICES ARE UP—FEW THOUSAND POUNDS ON COVINGTON FLOORS; AVERAGE QUOTED AT NEAR NINETEEN DOLLARS HUNDRED

The Covington tobacco market opened this morning with what warehousemen said was the lightest supply in the history of the market on the floors of the two warehouses.

The Tristate house, Front and Russell streets, had first sale. A total of 2902 pounds was sold for $511.50 an average of $18.31 a hundred pounds. High basket sold for $28.50 a hundred pounds and low basket sold for $4.

The Kenton house, Second and Scott streets, had approximately 5000 pounds on the floor shortly before the opening sale.

Weather conditions have prevented farmers from bringing in their crops so far, it was reported. Very light sales were general throughout Kentucky as the various markets opened this morning, it was reported.

The Lexington market, always the first to open, began sales yesterday. Opening prices held forth a promise that returns to the growers this season will be the highest since 1929.

The Lexington price average was nearly $20 a hundred pounds. If this price continues farmers stand to make millions of dollars more in the burley producing states.

FLORENCE BAPTIST CHURCH

IS BENEFICIARY IN WILL

The Florence Baptist church is a beneficiary in the will of Owen Bradford who died recently. After requesting that all debts against the estate be paid and bequeathing $500 to each of two parties he willed the remainder both real estate and personal property to the Baptist church of Florence of which he was a member. While the amount of the estate was not given it is thought that the church will receive a substantial sum. J. G. Renaker was named as executor.

LOCAL GIRL PRAISED

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Grant received a letter recently from Eastern State Teachers College of Richmond, Ky., congratulating them on the splendid record their daughter, Helen, is making in her college work, thus placing her on the student's honor roll.

Miss Grant is a graduate of the Hebron High School, Class of 1932.

LOCALS TO MEET

FLORENCE TEAMS ON BURLINGTON FLOOR SATURDAY NIGHT—HAVE BEEN KEEN RIVALS FOR SEVERAL YEARS—LOCALS MEET ERLANGER DEC. 21.

When Florence Boys and girls come to Burlington Saturday night Dec. 8, local supporters will have an opportunity to see two good games. These schools have been keen rivals for the past years for net supremacy, and always draw a nice crowd. The friendly spirit existing between the communities will further add to the interest and enjoyment of those who follow the teams. Both schools have faced strong opposition already this season with success, but facing each other is another side of the question. It is believed that Florence will be the victors along the Dixie, but in Burlington—well, why should anything else be said? This will be the only Boone county game Saturday night which will afford many an opportunity to see the games who otherwise could not. The fact that both communities have so much interest in the scheduled battles on the hardwood will place a premium on good seats. Those wishing choice seats should be on time and ready to enter heartily into the spirit of the battles on the side of their favorites. This will be the last home game until Dec. 21, when the local teams meet the Erlanger fives.

Mr. and Mrs. Edson Maurer and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Maurer, Robert, Ralph and Mrs. Josie Maurer, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Rogers and family, of Bellevue.

PLAY IS HUGE SUCCESS

The play presented last Friday night by members of Boone Post American Legion of Boone county, was quite a success in every particular—each member performing his part exceedingly good.

Quite a crowd was present and each one attending was loud in his praise and hope that it will be repeated in the near future.

The play was presented at Florence Tuesday night Dec. 4th to another very large and appreciative crowd, Thursday night Dec. 6 at Hebron, Hamilton, Dec. 7th and New Haven Tuesday Dec. 11.

The members of Boone Post have devoted much time to make this play a success, and they certainly have succeeded in doing so. Doors open at 8:00 P. M., and the admission is 15 and 20 cents.

Christmas Seals are the ammunition in the war against tuberculosis. The enemy is on the run, but is not vanquished. Tuberculosis is still the leading cause of death in the first decade of maturity.

She was the daughter of the late Thomas A. and Rebecca Johnson. She had been a resident of Boone county for a period of five years. She was a member of a family of twelve children, of whom only one survives.

LEAVES FOR FLORIDA

Harold Conner, who owns the Blue Grass Kennels, left for Florida a few days ago. He will enter his dogs in the races, starting Dec. 1 at Miami. Harold writes that Florida and Miami have more people there now than at any recent time. That all the large hotels have opened ahead of time in order to take care of the unusual number of tourists. He says that it is a difficult matter to obtain room or board in private quarters since practically all such places have already been taken. Florida was one of the first places to feel the depression but it seems to be about the first to recover.

WALTON YOUTH

SHOT BY WATCHMAN—DEAF MUTE WAS MISTAKEN FOR ROBBER, IS EXPLANATION—WAS ON WAY HOME FOR THANKSGIVING HOLIDAYS.

West Liberty, Ky., Nov. 29.—Ignorance on the part of a deaf and dumb youth who unknowingly sought shelter at a bank and the apparent mistake of a burglar-conscious bank watchman were believed to be the contributing factors in the death of the mute here early this morning.

Letters from his mother and sister in his pocket indicated the victim, Robert Youell, about 17 years old, a student at the Kentucky School for the Deaf at Danville, was on his way to spend Thanksgiving at his home at Walton, in Boone County, where the women folks promised to "have something fixed up" for him. The letters also directed the school master to read the missives to the youth, who was unable to read or write.

Deputy Constable William McKenzie, Sr., the watchman, said someone rattled the back door of the Commercial Bank, and falling to get in, went to the front door and rattled it. McKenzie said he went out, taking a pistol and shotgun, and the person at the door ran. Supposing the intruder was a member of a gang bent on robbing the bank, McKenzie said he called to the fugitive to halt, but when he continued running, he shot him in the back.

The youth died two hours later. Officers said they learned the youth was hitchhiking home for Thanksgiving and he reached here about 1 o'clock this morning, when most of the town was dark. The watchman had a light burning in the rear room of the bank, and, they theorized, he thought he could find someone awake to take him in. Sight of the watchman's weapons is supposed to have caused him to run.

McKenzie had been night watchman at the bank since it was robbed of $1,294.18 two weeks ago by safe crackers who burned open the vault but failed to open an inner safe.

McKenzie surrendered after the fatal shooting and was charged with murder. He was released under guard until examing trial at 10 o'clock Saturday morning before Magistrate J. B. Wells, who is County Judge pro tem.

Officials at the Kentucky School for the Deaf at Danville said Youell had been a student there about ten weeks and was a good boy, "except for being unconsciously rowdy."

Chambers & Grubbs, of Walton, had charge of the body, and returned it to the home of J. W. Carpenter, his grandfather. The funeral was conducted from Florence Christian church on Saturday at 2:30 p. m., by Bro. Runyan, in the presence of a concourse of friends and relatives, after which his remains were laid to rest in the Carpenter cemetery. He leaves a father, Frank Youell, a mother, Lena Carpenter, two sisters, one brother and a host of relatives to mourn his going.

SUCCESSFUL WEEK

FOR FLORENCE HOOFSTERS—LUDLOW WILL FURNISH OPPOSITION FOR FLORENCE FRIDAY NIGHT, DECEMBER 7—GAME WILL START AT 7:00

The Florence Ball clubs will meet the Ludlow Basket Ball Teams Friday Dec. 7, at Florence. The teams have a pretty good average for last week. The Girls won both of their games, having defeated the New Haven girls by a score of 23 to 15. They defeated the Dry Ridge girls by a score of 22 to 11. This is sure a good record up to date having lost only one game. The boys in last week games lost to the New Haven boys with the score of 20 to 12. They defeated the Dry Ridge boys with a score of 24 to 21. We are expecting a real game Friday night between Ludlow and the Florence teams, as this is one of the outstanding games of the year. Edward Schmeil will call the game. There will be a considerable change in the line-up since a num-

ACTIVE WORK WAS HEALTHFUL

The young men in the Citizens' Conservation corps who have been working in the forests, have averaged to gain 12 pounds while thus employed. Probably many of those young men began their strenuous work without being used to such muscular tasks. Probably many of them had doubts as to whether they could perform these very active stunts. Yet the work proved very beneficial.

Almost anybody who has no serious physical weakness is benefited by active work in the open air. The student who has stooped in a poorly ventilated office, would be new men if they could get out and swing an axe or guide a plough. Don't be afraid of working with your hands, boys!

BETTER DAYS AWAITS THEM

We are now entering into the third winter struggling with our unemployment problem. The final solution of this problem is not and will not be an easy one. The people of the Nation are to be congratulated for their liberality in helping those who are less fortunate, and the unfortunates are to be congratulated for their spirit of patience and calmness during the patience-testing years of the depression. Since "hope springs eternal" in the human breast those separated from their positions did not lose faith, the result that thousands have returned to their former or other positions. The remaining idle king, too, that a better day awaits them. Their hope shall yet be rewarded.

INDIVIDUAL INDEPENDENCE

America is changing her ways, and in the changing charity for able-bodied men is being weighed in the balances and found wanting. Experience and common sense have taught us to exchange food and money for work. This does not imply a change in our spirit of helpfulness; it does not represent a Shylock attitude; but it is a realization that our citizens are happiest, healthiest, and most contented when their minds and hands are occupied. It is a harking back to the spirit on which America was founded, a spirit of individual independence—that fundamental heritage for which the American people have willingly shed their blood, and which is not offered at a price.

GUNFIGHTERS

In reading about the present day methods of gangsters and kidnapers the Editor agrees with Eugene Rhoads who writes very much to the point when he says: "In the old days we said 'gunman'—a word exactly comparable with 'swordsman.' Because of the modern gangster, the word gunman now carries the implication of coward, or baby-killer. It brings up the idea of seven against one; of helpless victims 'taken for a ride' or 'put on the spot'; of time-fuse bombs and steel vests, armored cars and machine guns; the safe and shameless!"

When you read these stories of the oldtime gunmen, you will see that for even the worst of them, such deeds were unthinkable. If they were criminals—and some of them were—at least they were present at the scenes of their crimes, at their own proper peril. They set no dynamite to kill an enemy as he opened his garden gate. They killed armed men—not men unarmed and bound. It is impossible to imagine the worst and lowest of them, even if he were crazy-drunk, killing children or women. And the thought will come to you that if some of these oldtimers could come to life now, Chicago and New York could use their courage and skill, thank-ing God!

Fireside Thoughts

We were pleased to receive a letter from B. A. Floyd, the correspondent for Gunpowder and Hopeful. Mr. Floyd says he has written his neighborhood news for the Recorder for forty-five years. We believe this record will entitle him to be designated as the correspondent with the longest record. We wish him many more years of service.

We were very favorably impressed with the article appearing last week in which State Examiner Sewell complimented Boone county and its officials for the fine manner in which the county was managed. Mr. Sewell is one state official who doesn't praise unless it is deserved. During the prosperous years undoubtedly these same officials were criticized because they were considered too conservative. The present depression has served to prove that their actions were wise.

We believe that too few people are gifted with the ability to keep things in their places. Too many are inclined to drop things where they were last used. There should be a designated place for each article or tool. Some homes or business houses look as if they had been struck by a passing wind storm. It is a pleasure to observe one where everything is in order. The difference between success and failure is often due to shiftlessness.

We cannot help remarking what a fine record Boone county has in regard to her banks. During the worst depression in all history every Boone county bank has kept open and weathered the financial storms that were breaking all around us. You cannot drive in any direction without encountering vacant buildings which once housed prosperous banks. Not so in Boone. It is a record that all should be proud of and those in charge of our nine banks are to be congratulated for their good banking judgment and business foresight. While practically all banks now are under U. S. government supervision and depositors everywhere are protected by insurance, still it was not always so. The one fact stands out that at a time when other sections were in financial distress our local county banks held firm like the proverbial Gibraltar. Too much praise cannot be given our county and its financial institutions.

Editorial of the Week*RELIGION AND INTOLERANCE
(News-Herald)

The basic principle of the Christian religion is tolerance. Christ in all of His teachings stressed tolerance. He told us to love our neighbors as ourselves; to do unto others as we would be done by; to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and bind up the wounds of the afflicted. He urged everyone to be kind, considerate and thoughtful of others and charitable in thoughts and acts. We believe everyone who has studied the teachings of Christ will admit that He was the greatest teacher and exemplar of tolerance that ever lived.

While this is true it is true also that from the birth of the Christian religion to the present time the most intolerant persons have been men and women who claimed to be devout worshippers of Christ. Wars have been fought in His name, between nations because they could not agree how He should be worshipped. One sect of professed followers of Him have persecuted another sect of His followers. Some of the most cruel and barbarous acts of all history have been by persons claiming to be the only true disciples of Christ. Inhuman methods have been used by one denomination to force members of another denomination to accept Christ in a certain form and a certain way. Even today we believe the most intolerant persons in countries which accept the Christian religion are the most ardent and in their judgment most devout members of religious denomination. We do not believe there is a Christian religious denomination that does not have some members who, if they had the power, would not force all other persons to worship Christ in what they are convinced is the only true way.

These intolerant persons think they are devout Christians but they have not the slightest conception of His teachings. They are hard and cruel while Christ taught them to be kind and loving. They hate all who do not agree with them in regard to religion. Wherever they have the power they persecute those who disagree with them. Where they do not have the power they subtly persecute members of other denominations; do them injury whenever possible.

It is a strange situation. Every person thinks he should have the privilege to worship God in the way he desires. He is jealous of this privilege. Feeling this way you would think everyone would want every other person to have the same privilege. But there are many who want this privilege for themselves but also want to force others to worship God in what they think is the only proper form.

Personally we are convinced that the form in which a person worships God is of no importance and we think Christ made it plain that this is true; that how one acts and his feelings toward others is the only true test of whether he is a Christian. In our judgment anyone who is intolerant and bigoted is not a follower of Christ and there have been times when we have wondered if intolerance is not the unforgivable sin.

Turkey Brings In 14 Young Turkeys From Stolen Nest
Mrs. Marcell Combs, of Carrollton Route 2, had a turkey hen to bring in 14 young turkeys one day last week. The remarkable part is that the hen stole her nest.—News Democrat, Carrollton.

More Big Vegetables
Arthur Blewins brought in a turnip this week that weighed 7½ pounds. Not bad. Mrs. Casey Naylor brings in a dandy cushaw that weighs 4½ pounds. Take a look at them in our window.—Central-Record, Lancaster.

1933 Squash Well Preserved
T. H. McCord of Paris brought to our office this week a squash of the Pie Variety that he had saved from a lot grown in 1933. It was well preserved in every way without blemish or unsoundness of any kind. Mr. McCord stated that he had wrapped it carefully in paper and placed it in a barrel which was kept in the house.—Kentuckian-Citizen, Paris.

Who Can Beat This One?
James A. Mains, living about two miles west of Augusta, on the railroad, says he has been reading in the Chronicle "about the immense sweet potatoes grown by Bracken county farmers, weighing 5½ lbs." and he says he dug two sweet potatoes from one hill. One weighed 7½ pounds and the other 6 pounds. Mr. Mains invites the entire county to produce larger sweet potatoes.—Bracken Chronicle, Augusta.

An Unusual Accident
Last Saturday morning Nora Lee the three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pres Eversole at Typo happened to a rare accident. She had an empty glass fruit jar clasp in her arms and in running with it, she fell, breaking the jar. The broken fragments cut in her abdomen and it was necessary to perform an operation, which was done at the Hurst-Snyder Hospital by Dr. Dana Snyder. She is doing fine and will be able to go home in a few days.—Leader, Hazard.

Nine-In-One Ear of Corn
N. G. Boswell of Horse Branch, produced a "9 in 1" ear of corn and brought it to The News office as proof. All nine ears are grown together at the base. The center ear is of ordinary size, while all others are small with four rows of grain each. The corn is of the Hickory King variety and was grown on hill land.—Ohio County News, Hartford.

Sweet Potato Inside Corn Cob
Mr. Other Whitlock, of Fry, Green county, brought into the Record-Herald office a sweet potato which was grown in a corn cob. The potato has a shape resembling an icicle and is about three inches long. The small end of the potato has grown completely through the cob from end to end and the cob is approximately the same length as the potato.—Record-Herald, Greensburg.

I look at the Christmas Seal and say:
"This friend who rememberth me,
Hath also the thought of the sick today,
Wherever they chance to be,
And he giveth not only to cheer his own,
But to all who hath need is his mercy shown."

It is hoped it will be many long years before another long drought will be experienced in this county.

W. H. Harrison, Chris Barlow and others in the North Bend neighborhood, have lost nearly all their hogs of cholera.

D. E. Castleman, formerly of Warsaw, spent Sunday with his brother, T. B. Castleman, of Florence. He was enroute to Burlington, where he expects to make his home.

F. F. Robinson, of the Richmond neighborhood, has lost 35 or 40 of his fine hogs of cholera. How the disease got started among his hogs is a mystery.

Misses Minnie and Kate Crigler and Robt. Bradford and William Crigler, of Hebron, were the pleasant guests at R. L. Ransom's Saturday and Sunday a week.

When all the new metal, now ready for spreading, is put on the Burlington and Florence pike, it will be a great impediment to travel, but it will ultimately put the road in excellent condition.

The scarlet fever is causing considerable uneasiness here, and the school has closed on that account until after Christmas. Two of Jas. Thompson's children have the dreadful disease.

J. D. Moore, one of our enterprising merchants, is making arrangements to prize tobacco here this winter for the farmers. This will be a valuable addition to the business of Big Bone.

A strange disease has made its appearance among the hogs in some localities. It attacks the animal in the head, and it is not long after the first symptoms appear until the hog is ready for the bone yard.

The old toll house on the Lexington pike, near Elder E. Stephens, was totally destroyed by fire one morning last week. All the effects of the occupants were saved. There was no water at hand, and no effort was made to save the building.

A most delightful party was given on Thanksgiving night by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Gaines, at their elegant residence near Utzinger. They have a lovely home and two very charming daughters to assist them in entertaining. Among those present were Wm. K. Chambers, who is attending dental college in Cincinnati, and Harry and Cleve Collins, of Covington.

It is thought that a wild cat is at large near Limaburg. While out hunting, one day last week, Alonzo Beemon heard it screaming. He answered it, and the cat came near to him, then his dogs started after it, but refused to take hold of it. Mr. Beemon gave the same animal a chase a few nights before, but did not see it.

POULTRY RAISING OUTLOOK FAVORABLE

The outlook for the winter is favorable for poultry raisers who have good flocks and provide proper feeding and general care thinks Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry work at the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Eggs are selling well enough to pay farmers to feed their flocks. Home produced feeds should be used where possible, however, in order to reduce costs. Make liberal use of skim milk or buttermilk, if it is to be had. A gallon per day per 25 to 30 birds helps to balance the ration and to produce more eggs. If this much milk is not to be had, then feed a dry mash containing at least 10 percent of meat scrap or tankage; or feed 20 percent meat scrap where there is no milk.

If feed must be purchased, then it may be profitable to feed only well matured pullets that will lay well before the first of the year. Old hens should be culled, and nothing kept except late layers, which are the September, October and November molters. These will take two or three months of vacation and be back in production after the first of the year.

Other timely suggestions are:

Avoid overcrowding. A house 20 by 20 feet provides just enough room for 100 hens and 10 to 12 male birds.

Keep the litter in the house dry, as dampness tends to spread colds and diseases.

Plenty of clean water, slightly warmed in winter, p.ys.

Allow ample feeding space. Each hen requires 6 to 8 inches of space at the hopper.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Russell county farmers are threshing approximately 3,000 bus. of korean clover for seed, and plan to use much of it within the county. Dr. M. M. Lawrence has threshed 750 bushels and the Woolridge Bros., will have about the same amount. County Agent O. B. Travis has had several demonstrations of its value.

Bullitt county farmers think so much of lime as a means to soil improvement that they are having it hauled 20 miles to them from the quarry. Costs of the material and hauling amount to $1.10 per ton. S. O. Armstrong spread 40 tons on a field to be seeded to alfalfa.

County Agent George Insko reports that Anderson county dairymen are negotiating with the Lexington Producers' Association to run a truck to the city market. Inspection and improved equipment requirements must be met.

Charles Healy of Elliott county made a profit of $187 on a flock of 100 purebred pullets, with an average production of 203 eggs per bird. Mrs. L. C. White of the same county made a profit of $99 on 75 pullets. Balanced rations fed to high grade stock helped give the profit.

Agricultural and industrial fairs held in Jessamine and Warren counties show an improvement in farm, orchard, garden and hand-made products, reports A. C. Burnette, agent in charge of Negro work. Large crowds in attendance testified to the value of the work, Mr. Burnette says.

One hundred seventy-five farm men and women attended the poultry field day held at the Pyles Farm in Mason county. Plans were made to start demonstration flocks and talks on improved feeding methods were made by J. Holmes Martin and James E. Humphrey of the Experiment Station staff.

We were glad to receive a call from C. L. Griffith, of Florence. Mr. Griffith has lived in Boone county for many, many years and knows the history of the county for a generation or two. He related to us many instances of the past and we were sorry that his lack of time would not permit him to tell us more. He stated that his maternal grandfather came to Boone county from Virginia in 1804 and helped build Hopeful Lutheran church where the present church now stands. We understood him to say there have been built four churches on the present lot including the present one. We are always glad to have the opportunity to talk with old residents of a community. They possess first hand knowledge that will be soon lost to us.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Fenelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they sat out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Fenelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Fenelope retired from business, while Fenelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nancy Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a reasonable criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Then, however, the doctor, faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nancy's hard-boiled exterior.

"All right. There are two empty highball glasses on the telephone stand back of you," she sniffed. "Bourbon. The stand's three feet high and the telephone book is in the compartment under the top of the stand. The telephone is one of those combination receiver-mouthpiece things like they use in English stage scenes, and the telephone cord is white. The desk is solid walnut, I think, flat-topped and clean. You have a bronzé combination inkwell, pen-rack, and pin-tray. There is a blue crayon pencil and a red crayon pencil and a black, gold-banded fountain pen on the pen rack. The fountain pen has green ink in it. I know because on the calendar pad on the desk, which is opened at November 23—although this is the 24th—you've written something with the pen very recently. You're sitting in a walnut swivel chair, brown leather upholstered, and a high back up to your shoulder tops. The chair's back is an over-stuffed rocker, and if you give him another drink he'll fall asleep in it. On the wall back of you, there is a framed diploma in Latin, issued to Stephen John Burt by Leland Stanford Junior University Medical school, and about four feet from it is the Oath of Hippocrates in a black frame, like the diploma. The print is old English and done in black and red. Across the room, in back of the chief, is a walnut bookcase, built in detachable tiers, and there's a white washstand in the corner close by it. The rug is beige colored and Chinese, and on the wall in back of me, where you can look at it readily, is a framed photograph of your father. It must be a photograph of your father because he looks a great deal like you. In back of me a door leads into the old lady's den and—here Nancy opened her handbag, took out a small mirror, held it up and opened her eyes an instant—"yes, I thought so. That door is ajar and the old lady is listening to every word I say."

"Now, I'll describe you. You're a darling. You're tall and you haven't started to grow a tummy yet. You're about thirty-two or three years old, your hair is dark brown and your eyes dark blue, and you have nice teeth, and they show when you smile. You have nice hands and your nails were manicured this morning, but you have a dirty spot on the finger-nail of your right index finger—no, it isn't dirt. It's iodine. Pardon! My error. Do I win first prize, Doc?"

"In a walk, Miss Belden. You are absolutely the most amazing person I have ever examined. You are one in a million—one of those rare persons who not only see everything at a glance but take a mental photograph of it. And remember it. Yes, you win a prize."

"I'll have a highball with you boys," said Miss Belden composedly.

"You'll not, you little—this and that," Lanny countered from behind the door. "The very idea!"

"Then the party breaks up here and now," Miss Belden informed Stephen.

"Lanny," Stephen called. "I hope you aren't forgetting the laws of hospitality."

"Come on, kid," the girl entreated Lanny. "Buy me one and I'll get the chief to do something nice for you in return."

"What influence has the likes of you with the chief of police?" Lanny was emerging with two highballs.

"Do you drive a car, Miss Lanning?" Nancy Belden whistled sharply to Dan McNamara.

"Get out your card, Dan. Here's the fountain pen. Write as I dictate. Ready? To all traffic officers: The bearer, Miss Rebecca Lanning, has the freedom of the city. She has my authority to park where she pleases and she shall not be tagged. She cannot be arrested for anything except murder and even then she must not ride in the wagon. Signed: Dan McNamara, Chief of Police."

Dan McNamara obeyed, Nancy Belden visted the card, blotted it and handed it to Lanny. "Now, you tell 'em all who's kind to you, Rebecca. I'm some kid, am I not? You bet I'm some kid. Dan knows it and your boss knows it and if, by now, you don't know it, I hope Steve fires you."

"You are some kid. I admit it. Thank you, dear. You shall have a highball."

"Have one yourself," Nancy suggested grandly. "Let's all be sociable, eh, Steve?"

"Miss Belden—" Steve began.

"Call me Nancy," the strange young creature interrupted. "Why all the formality?"

"Have you any objection, Nancy, to telling me your real name?"

"None at all. I don't know my real name."

"Who were your parents?"

"I don't know."

"Why did you steal the silk stockings?"

Nancy threw back her head and laughed. "Why you silly, I had runs in every pair I owned."

"Poor dear!" Lanny was speaking. Her hand strayed over the girl's jet black, shiny bob; her fingers sought a shell-like ear and tugged it gently.

Nancy looked up at the nurse, surprise and friendliness shining in her eyes.

"Why, you're sweet, aren't you? Why, you darling!" And she lifted her face for Lanny to kiss. Lanny kissed her. Trust Lanny for that.

"It's too late to go further tonight, Dan," Lanny said. "Bring her in at nine tomorrow morning."

"Can't, Lanny." With a bound the excellent McNamara had landed beside Lanny in the garden of friendship, as one might say. "She's due in the police court at nine o'clock for sentence. Black away she'll be walked over to the Superior court to the judge that gave her a suspended sentence two years ago. She hasn't made good, so he'll sign the commitment papers, and it'll be some time before we see our Nancy again."

"Has she an attorney?"

"The public defender, that's all."

Lanny looked at Stephen. Stephen looked at Lanny. Both nodded.

"Get the best in town, Dan," Lanny urged the chief. "Doctor Burt will appear in court and plead for a stay of sentence. We'll tell that judge a few things about criminal psychology and just why it would be frightful social injustice to put this girl in San Quentin."

She turned to Nancy Belden, drew the girl's face down on her breast and patted the rouged cheek. "See you tomorrow, dearie," she promised. "Be a good girl now and be nice to Dan McNamara, because he's one of the best friends you'll ever have."

"Kiss me again, please," Nancy whispered. And when Lanny had complied, the girl came around the desk to Stephen Burt. "I want you to kiss me, too," she said. "You're sweet—thank you a lot."

When Dan McNamara and his prisoner had departed, Lanny and Stephen looked at each other throughout a long silence, which Lanny was first to break.

"That girl's clean, Steve. Not a touch of the slattern about her. She could pass the Binet intelligence test so fast she'd meet it on her way back. And she isn't tough at all. She's only trying to be, and she finds it uphill work."

"Defense mechanism largely," he said. "Better go home, Lanny. Get a good night's sleep and try to forget what a sad world we live in."

"It'd be a d—d sight sadder if you didn't live in it," she snapped.

Under stress of emotion, Lanny, as she grew older, occasionally indulged herself in a little mild profanity. Stephen didn't mind. He knew she was disillusioned, middle-aged in point of years, but old with the wisdom and sadness of the world, as only a doctor or a trained nurse can be; that she had earned her privileges. As a surgical nurse she had been sworn at by doctors whose nerves grew taut as piano wires, during a dangerous operation, and she had learned to give as good as she received—wherefore the men of her world respected her and liked her, for her courage and efficiency.

"See to it that you're on hand in court tomorrow morning, Steve. With a sweet line of scientific argument to bewilder that judge and the district attorney," she charged a little later.

"Good night, my dear boy."

Dear old Lanny! Once more love had occurred to her the miracle of love. A stranger—a bit of fotsam and jetsam on the muddy sea of life—had looked behind her brusque, businesslike, beligerent exterior and found the great warm heart that yearned so for affection and understanding. Hers was a strange nature. She was so strong, and so possessed of the urge to share her strength with those she loved, particularly if they evinced any affection for her, that she was singularly democratic in her choice of beneficiary.

Nancy Belden, like Stephen Burt, had appealed to her thwarted mother love, and nothing that the girl had been, nothing she might ever be, would alter Lanny's opinion, formed on an instant's notice, that the girl was an angel. A dark angel, perchance, and like Lucifer, fallen from high place, but—an angel nevertheless.

The presence of Chief of Police Daniel McNamara cleared a lane through the corridor of the Hall of Justice, in which the police courts of San Francisco are located.

He paused before a courtroom door. "Nancy is in there," he told Stephen. "I'll not go in with you. I'd have a week of rotten publicity in all the papers if I appeared to have any special interest in the case. Her lawyer's name is Tyrrell and he'll call you as an expert witness."

CHAPTER III

Stephen elbowed his way into the courtroom. Nancy Belden saw him, and from behind the bars of the prisoner's dock waved to him and called cheerily: "Hello, Steve."

"Silence—you!" the bailiff warned her.

Nancy made a face at him; then, observing Stephen lay finger to lip in a warning gesture, she tossed her head, tilted her chin and bent upon the judge a cold and defiant stare.

The bailiff opened the door of the prisoners' dock and beckoned to her. "Nancy Belden," the judge queried, "have you anything to say as to why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?"

"I've got a mouthpiece," the girl retorted. "Ask him!"

From a chair beside the counsels' table a young man arose. "May I please the court, the public defender has withdrawn from this case and I am now counsel for the defendant. My name is David Tyrrell. I am reliably informed, your honor, that, following a fair and impartial trial, this defendant has been convicted of the crime of which she stands accused and is now before the court for sentence."

"Mr. Tyrrell, your client is now under a suspended sentence from the Superior court, for the crime of grand theft. She was there sentenced to two years in San Quentin penitentiary, but paroled for two years. Less than two months have passed since she was paroled, and today she stands before the court for sentence under a charge of petit larceny. The defendant evidently is incorrigible, and I intend to remand her to the Superior court for commitment under the old charge of grand theft."

"I thank your honor. I have been retained in this apparently hopeless case for the purpose of adducing a sound reason why this defendant should be neither sentenced under the present charge nor remanded to the Superior court for commitment under sentence for the former crime. To that end, your honor, I ask leave to present an expert testimony to testify to the mental irresponsibility of my client."

"One moment, please, Mr. Tyrrell. Your action would be merely wasting your time and that of the court. I shall remand the prisoner immediately to the Superior court, with a request to the judge thereof that her case be taken up immediately. I sentence this prisoner to ninety days in the county jail, but the sentence will be suspended during her good behavior for one year from date. A bailiff will conduct you, your expert witness and the defendant at once to Department Number Six of the Superior court, and I will immediately telephone to the judge and request that he listen to your expert witness."

As they entered the Superior court the judge glanced at a document which evidently had reached him from the police magistrate's court. "Mr. Tyrrell, I understand you desire to present some expert testimony in an effort to prove the mental irresponsibility of this defendant, Nancy Belden. I may state that I have already been in telephonic communication with Doctor Blethen, and have had a complete report from him on this case. You may proceed, however, to present your side of it. Who is your witness?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt, your honor," and Tyrrell indicated Stephen.

"I know all about Doctor Burt," the judge said pleasantly. "I had him in my court a year ago as an expert witness in the matter of the Carter will case," he nodded to Stephen. "This court is very much interested in getting at the facts in this case and it is obliged to you for your voluntary attendance. What is your professional opinion of this girl's mentality?"

"I have not had a fair opportunity to study her, your honor," Stephen replied, "hence I am not in a position to give the court more than a snap decision."

"How long have you studied her?"

"About thirty minutes, your honor."

"H'm-m-m! Doctor Blethen examined her on three different occasions, his examinations embodying a total of about six hours' time."

NEARLY TWO MILLIONS IN STATE CORN-HOG AND WHEAT PAYMENTS

Kentucky farmers cooperating with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in the corn-hog and wheat programs have received nearly two million dollars in benefit payments.

A summary sent out from the College of Agriculture University of Kentucky, shows that on Nov. 14 farmers of this state had received a total of $1,666,024 for adjusting their production of corn and hogs.

Wheat growers had received $221,909 in three installments as follows: First 1933 installment, $171,938; second 1933 installment, $10,861, and first 1934 installment, $39,110.

The corn-hog adjustment program for next year will include a reduction of 10 percent in corn production and in the number of hogs raised from the average production in 1932 and 1933. Payments will be $15 a head on the number of hogs reduced and 35 cents a bushel for the estimated yield of corn on the number of acres removed from production.

In 1935 wheat adjustment program calls for a reduction of 10 percent in production from the base period of 1930-31-32 in Kentucky. Benefit payments will be 30 cents a bushel on 54 percent of the allotted production, less local costs of administering the program.

Marl is being used in Mason county to prepare fields for alfalfa.

Hundreds of Kentucky farmers are planning to take inventories the first of the year and then to keep accounts. This will give them a record of receipts and expenses, crop acreages and yields, and other information necessary under present conditions. See a county agent about obtaining record books.

TO TRAP OR POISON HOUSE MICE EASY

Like so many city dwellers who go to lakes and resorts for the summer, mice and rats depart for open places in gardens and fields in warm weather and return to houses, barns and other buildings when it becomes cold.

For the next month or so house mice will be a great annoyance and cause considerable damage to stored food and clothing. Traps or poisoned baits will remove the pests in short order if applied in a thorough manner, according to G. C. Oederkirk, rodent specialist of the U. S. Bio logical Survey, who is cooperating in this state with the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Pieces of fresh fried bacon tied to the triggers of the common snap traps or a smear of a mixture of rolled oats and peanut butter on the triggers will attract mice to the traps. The main idea is to use plenty of traps. A dozen or more properly set along walls should remove the mice from a house in one or two nights, says Oederkirk.

Where poisoned bait can be safely used, stir an eighth of an ounce of powdered strychnine thoroughly through one quart of dry rolled oats. Place pinches of the rolled oats bait at intervals along walls or put it in small flat containers where mice will easily find it.

Picked pigs' feet recipe: Remove toes from well-scraped feet. Soak feet in water overnight; then cover with water and cook until soft, or about five hours. Add salt to the water during the cooking. When soft remove feet from kettle and split. Pack in an earthen jar and cover with hot vinegar. Spices may be added to the vinegar, if desired.

ber of the boys are ineligible due to grades and the irregularity of attendance. There will be an added attraction Friday night since the Boys Independent team will play the Butler Independent Team. As you know the Florence Independent team has entered the Coca-Cola League and have arranged their schedule so that they may play at Florence each Friday night that we have a home game. So this will make three games instead of two. You will have the privilege of seeing the following boys play on this team: Alphin, Mr. Caton, Bill Scott, Bunt Scott, Bill McEvoy, Elmer Noe, Joe Dringenberg and T. C. Crume. They will play the following teams at Florence: Corinth, Dry Ridge, Butler, Williams-town, Glencoe, Ghent, Petersburg, Walton, Sparta, Ghent, Petersburg, Florence and Walton are the Boone county entries in this league. The winner of this district will go to Aurora, Indiana for the Tri-State Tournament, which includes Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. In fact there will be six teams represent Kentucky in this tournament, and we are expecting the Florence boys to make a noble effort in being one of these teams to go to Aurora. In fact if they defeat the teams mentioned above they will represent this district.

This is going to necessitate the first game starting earlier than we have been in the past. The first game will start promptly at 7 o'clock. The price of admission will be the same as of the past, and it is certain that you will get your money's worth from seeing these three games.

THE CHRISTMAS RUSH

A big rush of trade is expected this year for Christmas as usual. While the country has not recovered full prosperity, the amount of money in circulation has largely increased. Many people have been hanging onto their dollars with the idea that they would need them for Christmas purchases. The trade this year ought to come nearer to normal volume.

The people who buy their gifts early get the pick of the goods. The assortments are full, while those who delay buying will find that many of the most attractive articles have been snapped up by early customers.

There seems something positively wrong in the old-fashioned practice of delaying the holiday purchases until the week before the holiday and then rushing into the stores in one grand jam. It is not possible to buy goods well under such conditions. The clerks can not possibly wait on all such customers when the stores are so full. People must buy the stuff without getting much information about it, and as a result they are often disappointed in the purchases thus made so late in the season.

It also seems inhuman treatment for a store and postal employees to require them to lift such a mountain of work in a few days or a week, when the great majority of people could just as well buy their Christmas stuff early and get that business out of the way. The inevitable result of the Christmas rush is that many store and postal workers become tired, and the epidemic of colds and grippe that so frequently comes along about New Year's is probably due in part to fatigue incurred in the Christmas rush.

If we have any money ahead, let us make the store and postal workers happy by getting our purchases out of the way.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

ESTABLISHED 1875

Volume 59

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY DECEMBER 13, 1934

NUMBER 44

HOUSING PROGRAM

STARTED IN BOONE COUNTY—WILL INCREASE EMPLOYMENT AND IMPROVE BUSINESS CONDITIONS — GOVERNMENT TO MAKE LOANS FOR REPAIRS.

Most people in this county are familiar with the fine work that was done recently in connection with the Better Housing Program under the National Housing Act in Kenton county. As a result of this survey over one million dollars were spent in repair and construction work. This program is now being extended to Boone county, and workers are on the ground making a survey of housing conditions. There are ten teams making the survey and the entire county will be covered.

The National Housing Act was instituted by the U. S. Government for the purpose of increasing employment and improving business conditions. It hopes to provide means whereby needed repairs may be made from money advanced or loaned by the government. In those cases where people have not the cash available for repairing their houses a loan may be secured from the government through the local banks at 5 percent interest. Local banking officials will be the judge of the borrower's credit. After the loan is made the repairs will be made by the borrower and all contracts for the work done will be made also by the home-owner who receives the loan.

The survey in Burlington and for those living on the Burlington Pike will be under the charge of Charles E. Kyle and Mrs. Frances Schweneman. They are here under government direction in the hope of being of service to the Burlington people. It is expected that the people of this section will fully cooperate with them.

CHRISTMAS SUPPLEMENT FOR THE RECORDER

Next week the Recorder will have a Christmas Supplement containing eight pages. The supplement will be printed in colors. On the first page will be found a full-page picture in four colors of The Sistine Madonna by Raphael. This is the most famous of the Raphael Madonnas and the original now hangs in the Royal Gallery at Dresden. This picture would be beautiful in a suitable frame. Inside will be found a number of Christmas stories for adults and children. There will also be Christmas greetings from practically all Boone county business houses and institutions together with cards from quite a number of professional men and others. We call the subscribers' attention to this added feature of the Recorder and trust that it will be greatly enjoyed by all our readers.

FOUR-H TOBACCO

CROPS WILL BE SOLD AT KENTON LOOSE LEAF TOBACCO WAREHOUSE IN COVINGTON SATURDAY — 45,000 POUNDS PRODUCED BY 4-H MEMBERS.

Northern Kentucky 4-H tobacco club members are expected to sell approximately 40,000 pounds of tobacco at the second annual 4-H show and sale to be held at the Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse in Covington on this coming Saturday, December 15th. Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant, Pendleton and Gallatin county members are expected to take part.

Premiums on best baskets, best crops of each county and the district and 4-H club project record books will be awarded. The crops will be delivered on Friday and judged on Friday afternoon and Saturday morning the crops will be sold. The member from each county having the best crop will receive a prize trip to Junior Week at the University of Kentucky. The district champion will receive a trip to Chicago.

Members have been greatly hindered by the weather and few members have been able to get their crops all stripped out. Ninety-three Boone county 4-H club members this year have produced approximately 45,000 pounds of tobacco in the 4-H club project.

FINE SALE HELD AT FARM BUREAU LAST SATURDAY EVENING

The community sale held at the Florence Farm Bureau building last Saturday was well attended and all articles offered for sale brought fair prices.

These sales are being conducted by Check Tanner and Col. R. G. Kinman, both of whom are very efficient in this line of work. Mr. Kinman is also employed by the Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse as auctioneer and has quite a reputation in this line of work.

These two young men guarantee the high dollar for anything offered at the community sales.

THE LEXINGTON TOBACCO MARKET

Lexington's burley tobacco market averaged $21.07 per hundred for the 2,609,303 pounds of leaf sold over its breaks in the first week of the 1934-35 sales season which began last Monday, figures released today by Supervisor Ben Bosworth reveal.

The average for the opening week this year is exactly $8.61 above the $12.46 recorded for the first week of sales a year ago, representing an increase of 67 percent. A total of $549,874.95 was paid to the growers who sold here last week.

The first of the 1934 burley crop went on sale here Monday, when 837,000 pounds were disposed of for an opening day's average of $20.95, which was $7.15 above the opening last season. Tuesday the average here was $21.55; Wednesday $21.32; Thursday $21.33, and Friday the week closed with the sale of 393,000 pounds at $19.32.

Receipts were light throughout the week, and every warehouse on the market had a sale every day. Most of the leaf offered was of a medium quality, with only a few really good crops sold.

SEASON IS OPENED

Kentucky basketballers, entered in the Coca-Cola Championship, were to open their season on all fronts this week. In the inaugural game last Friday, Florence scored the first win of the season by repulsing Butler's invasion, 32 to 22.

Seven games are on this week's card. Crittenden and Walton were to open at Walton on Tuesday night. Boone county games for Friday, Dec. 14 are as follows: Silver Grove at Florence.

Walton vs. Petersburg at Hebron

LICENSE TAGS

MADE BY CONVICTS AT STATE REFORMATORY — KENTUCKY TAXPAYERS SAVE $45,000, DESPITE INCREASE IN PRICE OF MATERIAL.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 9.—Automobile license tags for 1935 were manufactured by prison labor in Kentucky at a saving of approximately $45,000 to taxpayers, Ewell More, Superintendent of the plant at Frankfort Reformatory, announced.

The plant turned out 300,000 tags for passenger automobiles, 50,000 for trucks, 1,000 for motorcycles, and 1,700 in-transit tags at a cost of 6 cents a pair. In 1930, the last year the tags were manufactured under contract with an outside firm, the cost was 17 cents a pair.

The cost to the state was approximately 1 cent a pair more this year than last, Superintendent More said, due to an increase in the price of material.

Manufacture of the tags with convict labor is not only a saving to the taxpayers, but it also is a financial aid to the Department of Public Welfare.

The plant is operated under the supervision of the State Tax Commission, which employs the prison labor and pays the Welfare Department $1.25 a day for the men. It required the services of 30 men for approximately four and a half months. From three to five workers are kept on the payroll the year round.

The Welfare Department received approximately $5,000 this year for the prison labor. This sum will be increased from year to year, as the number of automobiles and trucks increase.

Output of the plant was 50,000 greater this year than last, Superintendent More said. If this increase continues it will be necessary to increase the force or work the same number a greater length of time.

The plant also is partly equipped for making road signs, but it will be necessary to expend approximately $20,000 to install other needed machinery, according to the superintendent.

Making these signs with convict labor also would result in a saving of thousands of dollars annually to the taxpayers, or at least add the sum to road construction and maintenance funds.

The signs now are purchased by the State Highway Commission on competitive bidding, being paid for from the road fund.

EXAMINERS REPORT LOCAL BANK IN GOOD CONDITION

Bank examiners, E. R. Gover, D. L. Walker and G. C. Ransom, made the usual semi-annual examination of the Peoples Deposit Bank last week. These examiners are high class gentlemen, very thorough in their work, yet courteous at all times. They found all accounts in balance and the bank in a sound and highly liquid condition. Mr. Ransom is a Boone county man, formerly assistant cashier of the Verona Bank.

HONOR BESTOWED ON BURLINGTON BOY

The following letter was received from the Secretary of Governor Ruby Laffoon by one of our Burlington citizens and was handed us for publication:

"Governor Laffoon has issued a commission appointing your friend, Hon. Walter C. Brown of Burlington, Kentucky an Aide-de-Camp on his staff with the rank and grade of 'Admiral of Woolper Creek.'

"I am today mailing this commission to you under separate cover, that you may have the pleasure of delivering it to Mr. Brown.

"The Governor was delighted to make this honorary appointment.

"Very truly yours,

"H. H. Holuman,

"Secretary to the Governor."

We are certain that Governor Laffoon made a wise choice in selecting this young man for so great an honor, and we feel that he will fulfill his duties in a very efficient manner. We have traversed some of the creeks of Kentucky with Mr. Brown and know whereof we speak.

"The Winding Road," will be given Saturday night, December 22 at Berkshire Hall, Petersburg. This play is sponsored by the P. T. A. of Petersburg.

UNION CITIZEN

CALLED AT AGE OF 68 YEARS AFTER SHORT ILLNESS WITH BRONCHIAL PNEUMONIA — WAS ACTIVE IN CIVIC AND CHURCH WORK.

Robert C. Newman, aged 68 years, passed away Monday at his home near Union, after a short illness with bronchial pneumonia.

He was a member of the Union Presbyterian Church. Mr. Newman is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lydia Newman, two daughters, Mrs. R. V. Lents, who is a teacher in the Constance School and Mrs. Susie Clark, of Covington; two brothers, Martin Newman, of Covington and Edward Newman, of Florence, besides many other relatives and friends.

The pallbearers were Raymond Newman, Harry Riley, Clarence Norman, John Conrad, Albert Sheets and John Summers.

Funeral services were conducted at the Hopeful Lutheran Church Wednesday at 10:30 A. M., by the Rev. Hammock of Louisville, after which the remains were laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

TOMCATS WIN IN EASY STYLE

The Burlington High School Tomcats, led by Weaver and Voshell found the Florence High School basketball team an easy proposition Saturday night at the Burlington gym and captured a 41 to 20 victory.

Weaver, who was playing his last game, turned in 10 points and tied his running mate, Voshell, for high point honors. John Richards, captain and center of the losers, showed best for his team. The game was rough and Burlington used a flock of substitutes during the greater part of the last half. Weaver was the only one left on the floor of the first string men, and he was left on account of it being his last game.

In the girls' game, the Florence team trounced the Kittens by a score of 25 to 6.

Practice for the Christmas White Gift Service will be held on Tuesday evening, December 18, at 8:00. All who have been assigned parts in this service are requested to attend rehearsals.

WILL ORGANIZE

A KENTUCKY WILD LIFE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION CLUB FOR SPORTSMEN AND FARMERS IN COUNTY—MEETING DATE SET FOR DECEMBER 18.

Game Warden Johnson announces that there will be a meeting of the sportsmen and farmers of Boone county at the court house, Burlington, on Tuesday, December 18 at 2 P. M., Central Time.

The object of this meeting is to organize a Kentucky Wild Life Protective Association Club for sportsmen and farmers of this county. There is a great need in Boone county for such an organization and such a club will be to the interest of both sportsmen and farmers. For this reason it is hoped that a large and representative gathering will be on hand.

A speaker from Frankfort has been engaged. This gentleman is Curtis Allin, publicity man for the State Game and Fish Commission. He will bring along his camera and will show a motion picture of the wild life of Kentucky. Farmers of the Gunpowder section are especially invited since there will be a discussion of the movement to establish a game preserve or refuge on Upper Gunpowder.

ALLOTMENT CARDS

RECEIVED BY GROWERS

AAA tobacco allotment cards under the Smith-Kerr Act were received by approximately 400 Boone county growers the first part of this week according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. These allotment cards demand Government tax exemption warrants for 25 percent sale value of the crop when the crop is sold.

Both contract signers and tax-exempted non-signers are receiving allotment cards. Only about 50 percent of those growers not signing contracts have been allotted exemptions. The exemptions for those applying in most cases were greatly reduced by the Washington, branch office at Lexington. Growers who have signed contracts feel that because of the reduction they have been compelled to take the exemptions to non-contracting signers should be awarded very sparingly and only to worthy cases.

P. E. GULLEY RECEIVES PAINFUL INJURY SATURDAY

P. E. Gulley of Gunpowder Heights neighborhood received several broken ribs last Saturday while hauling fodder. Mr. Gulley had just driven his team into the barn where he intended to unload the fodder when it began to slip, he swung around in order to light on his feet, but became entangled in a rope, falling to the ground. Mr. Gulley's many friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

MERCHANTS

LOOKING ACROSS RIVER WITH HOPE OF OBTAINING BALM FOR SALES TAX—OHIO GOVERNOR'S SIGNATURE ON BILL MIGHT FORESTALL BATTLE.

Northern Kentucky merchants are hoping that Governor George White of Ohio will not carry out his threat to veto the retail sales tax passed by both Houses of the Ohio Legislature. They believe a sales tax in Ohio would lighten the burden they have borne since the Kentucky sales tax became effective last July.

Many merchants in Northern Kentucky towns have absorbed the sales tax, the law notwithstanding. They say that they were forced to do so to meet competition from across the river.

Kentucky state authorities assert that some of the merchants are collecting the sales tax, but are not turning it in. They have ordered a closer check by tax inspectors. They declare that this has caused revenue from the tax to be much less than anticipated.

Kentucky merchants made a desperate but losing fight at Frankfort against sales-tax legislation. They are clearing their decks for action again in 1936, when they intend to make a fight for its repeal. This battle, however, they believe would be unnecessary if border states pass a similar tax.

Wallace Embry, Louisville, President of the State Retail Merchants Association, in Covington recently voiced the opinion that at the end of two years citizens of Kentucky will have had their fill of the sales tax and will be willing to repeal it.

AUGUSTA FIVE BEATS WALTON

Walton High School's inexperienced team tackled a tartar Friday night when Augusta sent a speedy prep school eleven to the Boone county institution.

The Bearcats took it on the nose 46 to 20.

In spite of the setback, Walton fans were not discouraged over the result. Coach Beverly, Bearcat fans point out, has had inexperienced teams before and the end of the season has discovered a smooth outfit performing for the Boone countians.

Benny Stansifer, the shifty guard is the only netman left from last year's crack team and Coach Beverly is building his club around him.

FLORENCE SERVICE STATION CHANGES HANDS

The Service Station located in the Campbell property in Florence on the Dixie Highway has changed hands. This property has been leased by Matt Linz, of Taylor Mill Pike. The business will be conducted under the name, The Matt Service Station. Mr. Linz will handle the Pure Oil products.

REFERENDUM VOTE

ON TOBACCO TO BE HELD SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16—AAA TOBACCO PROGRAM HAS DECREASED PART OF LARGE SURPLUS.

Boone county tobacco growers both AAA contract signers and non-contracting signers will vote "Yes" or "No" on the Smith-Kerr Act for 1935 according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. The vote will be cast between December 13th and 20th with balloting in care of the ten Committeemen on this coming Saturday, December 15th. The Smith-Kerr Act protects the AAA contract signers who reduce their tobacco acreage by placing a 25 percent tax on all non-contracted tobacco sold.

The AAA tobacco program thru the acreage reduction program has decreased part of the large surplus of tobacco which in return has resulted in a much better price for the crop produced this year. The AAA contract signers will be held under contract for 1935. This further reduction should result in still higher tobacco prices. If the Smith-Kerr Act is voted "Yes" for 1935 it will prevent the non-signers from greatly increasing their acreage and producing the surplus that the contract signers cut out.

The leading tobacco growers expect the vote to carry approximately 90 percent in the county. The growers feel that it is highly important that the contract signers be protected for this coming year. Each grower is being sent a ballot by mail. Ballots may be cast in the community on Saturday afternoon of this week or on any day until December 20th at the County Agent's office in Burlington. You may also mail these ballots to the county office before the 20th of December.

LUDLOW TRIMS

FLORENCE FIVE
Ludlow put one on the right side of the ledger last night when they defeated Florence 29 to 18. The game was played at Florence.

The game a rough and tumble affair and five players were ejected via the personal foul route. The Florence team lead at the half, 12 to 10, but Ludlow came back strong in the second half to earn a decisive victory.

The Panthers had a bad eye for their free throws, making only three in nineteen attempts, while Florence sank seven out of seventeen tries. Beets and Rose were the high scorers for the Panthers, making eleven and eight points respectively. Grayson, center for Florence collected eight points for his team.

Mr. and Mrs. Denzil Carpenter was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Carpenter Wednesday night. They celebrated W. T. Carpenter's birthday.

BOONE COUNTRY

WRITES INTERESTING BOOK ENTITLED "IN THE LIVING WAY"—DEAN OF TUFTS COLLEGE PRAISES BOOK HIGHLY.

The people of Boone county of which the author of a new book entitled, "In the Living Way," is a native will be interested, we think, in the publisher's announcement, as follows:

"In the Living Way" is a distinctive volume, the contents of which adapt it to private or public libraries for both reading and reference. It is one of the most significant, books in recent years. There are seventeen thought-stimulating essays with real insight and rare spirit. The paragraphs, in a style resembling that of Emerson, abound in pithy, quotable sentences."

Charles Chambers Conner, is the author and is a native of Boone county.

Dean McCollister of Tufts College says of the book: "It is an element of fine literary and spiritual values, such as these times call for. It is a book for the quiet hour and meditative and reverent mood; it has a fine uplift for aspiring souls."

The book is tastefully printed by the Driftwood Press of North Montpelier, Vermont.

A CHANGING CONSTITUTION

If someone had said a hundred years ago that by 1934 the Constitution would be plastered with 21 amendments, and could have made the people believe it, a cry would have gone up that we would have a Constitution by this time. Great men of good intentions have always been trying to save the Constitution instead of trying to make it elastic enough to save them. Review the 21 amendments to the Constitution and decide for yourself if the great document is now stronger or weaker because of the changes. To argue that the Constitution should not be changed is to argue that no law should be changed. It would be to say that conditions never change. The purpose of the law is to govern society, and as society advances, laws must conform to society's needs. The so-called "Liberty League" seeks to save the Constitution. The head of that organization, Mr. Jewett Shouse, be it recalled, said nothing about saving the constitution when he was at the head of another organization whose purpose it was to add the twenty-first amendment to that document.

THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

A good newspaper serves all its readers, not just a few. If some of its readers disagree, the newspaper is sorry, but it cannot be bribed to betray the best interests of its community in order to hold one subscriber. It may disagree with a man today and agree with him tomorrow. This must be so because a newspaper is a public trust. Its decisions must always be based on what will aid the development of the community and bring prosperity to its residents.

Those who disagree with newspapers must remember that if they could control it easily, that others could, also. The newspaper is always open to news and comments on different topics and is glad to get them to enlarge its own fund of information, but it must always be free to decide what will be best for the community it serves. Any other course would be a betrayal of public trust of which no true newspaper would be guilty.

It is to the interest of every subscriber to insist that his paper stay independent no matter whether he agrees with it or not for it is one weapon which can be used instantly to fight corruption and graft without fear or favor.

AID GIVEN COUNTIES

Distribution to counties of the state of one-third the revenues collected from the sales tax, will in many instances prove to be their salvation. More than forty counties have defaulted in payment of interest on their bonds. Money divided among the counties from the sales tax must be applied on road bond indebtedness, if such there be. In counties that have not road bond debt the money must go into the county road fund.

In addition to the money which goes to the county treasury from the sales tax it is well to take into consideration the fact that schools of the county have been placed in a position of security as result of enactment of this revenue measure which made possible sending to the county $11.60 for each pupil as compared with $6.00 last year. Free school books for children in the first four grades is another decided benefit which the schools are receiving as result of money having been provided to finance this benefit.

Relief money for the needy of this county continues to be available month after month as result of the state having been placed in a position to contribute its part to supplement federal money appropriated for the humane purpose of preventing suffering of those upon whom the hand of misfortune has been laid most heavily.

Credit of counties defaulting on their bonds has been buttressed and credit of the state has been restored. State warrants, which a year ago were selling for 80 cents on the dollar, are now worth par. The result of that fact is to save the state thousands of dollars in purchases which must be made.

THE IDEA'S THE THING

One of the striking aspects of modern scientific investigation is that let a new law of fundamental principle be demonstrated, no matter how imperfectly at first, and the world is assured that the rest will follow. Literally thousands of laboratory workers and scientists at once set about curing defects early manifested, and perfection of method is certain to be secured.

Remember the first transatlantic crossing of a wireless signal? When it was definitely known that Marconi's "S" from Ireland was received at Glace Bay, the future of wireless transmission was immediately predictable. The wonderful subsequent development was certain to take place.

Parallel cases were the steamboat, the railroad locomotive, the automobile, the airplane, the household radio receiver, the telephone, the electric lamp, the printing press. There is hardly one of the great utilities of mankind that did not come from the slow perfection of a crude idea.

Perfection is usually the product of the combined efforts of many, and yet there is glory and honor only for the inventor who conceived the fundamental idea. Although their contribution is equal as essential as that of the inventor, the men and women who work quietly in the laboratories to make the invention practical die unsung and usually unrewarded.

THE THOUGHTLESS PAROLE

Thoughtful people are appalled at the thought of nine federal agents being slain in pursuit and capture of the notorious Dillinger gang. This tragedy upon tragedy may be traced to the thoughtless paroling of Dillinger by the Governor of Indiana. That act released a desperado upon society, who through his influence and daring manner was able to get cooperation of lesser lights of gangdom. Thinking people, too, will hereafter give greater protest to granting parole to men of criminal tendencies. Men who commit crime in moments of passion or mental aggravation are due some consideration, but men who deliberately plan and commit crimes deserve no such mercy. They should be permanently separated from society. Maudlin sympathy is not a sound basis for parole. Nine brave officers killed or mortally wounded in line of duty, more than that many homes shadowed with grief, a score of children orphaned, many to become wards of society, is a price too dear to pay for such folly. The loss of money and property in the wake of the sordid affair sinks into oblivion in a flood of tears, wreckage of homes, and blighted human happiness.

Fireside Thoughts

We notice our friend, James H. Richmond, has announced as a candidate for governor. This means that his usefulness as State Superintendent of Schools will probably be lessened. Politics and schools do not mix or should not. Prof. Richmond has made an able superintendent of schools. However, schoolmen have never gone very far in politics, altho Woodrow Wilson was an exception. Mr. Richmond's political future is still to be determined.

We read the other day where a young man in Washington was arrested for holding two jobs. He worked at one of them at night under an assumed name. However, he filled both positions efficiently. Wherein is this an offense when the judges, themselves, often teach in Night Law Schools for an added salary. Nearly every senator or representative has members of his family working in his office and receiving government pay for it. We once knew a former governor of Kentucky whose family drew $20,000 a year for work supposedly performed for the state. It seems that it makes quite a difference who holds the extra jobs.

There are many things we do not know or understand, but a few of them are profound mysteries to us. We never could appreciate what thrill there is in hunting with Fox hounds; another mystery is the attitude of the English toward royalty. Why they will tax themselves to keep the members of royalty from working is beyond our comprehension; again, we cannot understand what people see in the comic section of a Sunday paper. If there is humor there it is too deep for us; nor do we know why countless thousands rave over the silly crooners on the radio. We regret our inability to throw something at them; another thing that bothers us in where all the countless thousands of city people work; finally, we wonder how women can smoke cigarets and eat ice cream at the same time. We have come to the conclusion that most women do not know how to smoke but do so because they consider it "smart."

As we listen to the radio programs we cannot help thinking that old music was the best; that old songs were the sweetest; that former actors were much the superior; that plays were better acted in the past; that books of former days were more interesting and worthwhile. Can it be that we Americans are on the decline intellectually and culturally? Our radio talent would seem to prove it.

Speaking of the radio reminds us that there is a vast difference between the way that this industry is managed in the United States and in England. In England the programs are made and controlled by the government and there isn't any advertising permitted on the air. At least this latter feature would be an improvement if we could find means to finance the radio programs. It is rather disconcerting to listen to a beautiful opera and immediately thereafter be informed of the value of a certain brand of ham or bacon. Or to be enraptured by a soulful hymn and then be brought to earth by the description of the merits of chicken feed. There seems to be something wrong somewhere but we don't know the answer.

Editorial of the Week

ON CHRISTMAS GIVING

(Georgetown Times)

It is not necessary to agree with all the things that are being done in the name of the New Deal to admit that the general run of men and women this year have more money to spend for Christmas than they have had for the last two or three years. Retail merchants are reporting heavier Christmas trade, setting in earlier, than for a long time past.

The custom of general giving at Christmas time is a comparatively recent one. Less than a hundred years ago Christmas was exclusively for the children, so far as gifts went. Today those are few who do not share the holiday spirit of making presents, if nothing more than a Christmas card, to a wide range of friends and acquaintances.

This year, more than ever before, in spite of the wider distribution of money in the pockets of the people of the United States, there is need of Christmas giving to help those who otherwise would have to fall back upon Government for relief of their needs. Any one who has not given to the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the local charity organizations, whether of his church or otherwise, seems to us to have been overlooking the true spirit of Christmas giving.

Every dollar given for such purposes does double duty. It blesses him that gives and him that takes. And there is a very real reason for making as generous contributions as one's purse will permit for these charitable ends. The tendency to "let Uncle Sam do it" is, we think, becoming altogether too widespread. It is time that we resumed the duty of looking after our own unfortunate and distressed, as we have always done in the past.

We shall never rebuild the morale of our people until we get back, as well as we can, to the principles of self-help.

D. E. Castleman and family had a very narrow escape with their lives last Sunday afternoon. They had started to Bellevue in their buggy, and as they were going over the bridge just beyond Richard White's the horse became frightened and backed the buggy against the railing on the upper side of the bridge. The railing broke, and the buggy, horse and Mr. and Mrs. Castleman and little girl were precipitated to the bottom of the creek.

Agnes F. Wilbur and others, have, through their attorney, J. M. Lassing, filed a suit in the Boone Circuit Court against the Trustee of the Morgan Academy, asking that the Academy property be sold, and that the proceeds of sale be divided among them, they being the heirs at law of Johnson Watts, who deeded the 2 1/4 acre lot on which the Morgan Academy stands for academy purposes and for that only. They allege, which is a fact, that the property has been abandoned, and is no longer used for school purposes. The deed to the property was made in 1816, by Johnson Watts to the trustees of Boone Academy, the name of which was afterwards changed to Morgan Academy. The building was erected in 1857.

Rev. C. C. Conner has received a hearty and unanimous call to become pastor of the Universalist Church at La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Rev. Mr. Conner is one of the most finished scholars who ever occupied a pulpit in this city. He is a modern man with modern ideas. Mr. Conner stands very high in this city as a minister and a man and LaCrosse is to be congratulated on securing so able a preacher.

It is surprising to see so many congregating at the post-office every Thursday, to read the Recorder, and some we are ashamed to say, are able to subscribe, come early to borrow it, and sit all the afternoon and read and comment on the news. Gentlemen, it don't cost much, and every man ought to take his own county paper instead of borrowing his neighbor's.

C. H. Acra, of Rabbit Hash, came up last Wednesday and qualified as Constable for the Third Magisterial District. His bond is signed by a long list of names, and has as formidable look as a sheriff's bond.

Jupt. Voshell called on the Recorder Thursday afternoon, on his return trip from a visit to the schools in the northern part of the county. Fifty-three schools are under control in this county, and he reports them as doing well. He had to pay off one teacher and dismiss the school on account of non-attendance. The Supt., says the colored schools, as a general thing, have excellent teachers.

The river has been full of coal tows for several days, and the fears of a fuel famine along the river has been dissipated.

Hog cholera is on the increase among the hogs in this county. Levis Beemon near Limburg, has lost nearly all his hogs in the last two weeks.

CHILLING IMPORTANT

IN HOME BUTCHERING

Comparatively little home butchering was done in Kentucky in November, due to uncommonly mild temperatures. Chilling of the hog carcass is an important step in the preparation of home pork. In fact, Grady Sellards of the College of Agriculture, who is giving a series of pork making demonstration over the state, says that probably it is the most important step.

After the carcass has been cleaned, splitting down the center of the backbone and the removal of the leaf fat and of the head will assist in the chilling. A temperature of freezing or a little above is ideal for butchering.

If the temperature is much above freezing, it may be necessary to chill the carcass in a refrigerator or by the use of ice. It usually is sufficient to chill the carcass 24 to 48 hours.

FLORENCE TEAMS

TO MEET HEBRON

The Florence basketball teams will meet the Hebron basketball teams at Florence Friday, Dec. 14. This should be a very interesting game. From the previous record of this year the Florence girls have lost one game and the Hebron girls have a perfect record. So some real competition should exist between these two teams.

The independent team will play the Silver Grove independent team at Florence. The Florence team last Friday night defeated the Butler quintet by a score of 32 to 22. Coach Alphin was high point man. All American Caton failed to connect with any of his long shots from the center of the floor during the first game, due to the lack of practice. This week he has been practicing with the boys and is getting back in form.

Due to the fact that three games are to be played, the first game will start at 7:30. These will be three very interesting games. The Silver Grove independent team from previous records is figured to be one of the best teams in the league.

The starting line-up for the Florence independent team will probably be Coach Alphin and Smittle Noe as forwards, T. C. Crume as center, Bill Scott and Prof. Caton as guards. The school teams will have their regular line-up.

The girls defeated the Burlington girls Saturday night, while the boys were defeated by a large score. Mr. Alphin had only one of his first string men in the line-up. This made the game very one-sided. However it was a very clean game and the Florence school desires to express their thanks and appreciation for the hospitality shown them by the teachers and pupils of the Burlington School.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Her life ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. Half way into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin expelled the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a criminal, but a neurotic. He obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

"With all due deference to my distinguished colleague," Stephen replied with his singularly charming smile, "six hours is not usually considered more than sufficient time to form an approximate opinion, which subsequent investigations may set at variance. If this girl were to become a patient of mine today, I should devote many weeks to an effort to demonstrate that my original opinion regarding her was in error."

"Is she crazy, Doctor Burt?"

"Not in the sense that we customarily employ the term, your honor. I should say, rather, that her psychology is abnormal, that she is neither moral nor immoral, but amoral. For instance, when I asked her why she stole silk stockings, she told me quite frankly that she did it because there were runs in all her old stockings. That reply was very illuminating. As I talked further with her I noted her valiant moods and quickly came to the conclusion that she is suffering from dissociation by reason of shock. In other words, this girl, who doubtless in happier days possessed a single personality and that a normal one, has now acquired a secondary personality. In plain English, two entirely different people inhabit the one body."

"The first personality, which I shall call A, is the result of acquired instincts, habit, education, and repressions imposed on society by convention and the code of procedure which we call morals. This has been submerged wholly or in part by a second personality, which I shall call B, and when B personality rules her she has amnesia for what I have termed her acquired or normal instincts. Out of her unconscious mind then emerge, as definite impulses to action, the old antipathies to such action, which we medical men term conflicts."

"Let me illustrate. We will assume that at this moment she is possessed of her personality A, and in this state she realizes she has runs in all her stockings—that she must have new stockings, but she sees some stockings which she can readily steal. Normal people often have impulses to steal, your honor, and Nance Belden has an impulse to steal the stockings she needs."

"But here a factor intervenes. She has been taught, from the day she manifested thought, that it is wrong to steal, and this moral lesson has impressed itself upon her conscious mind. With repetition, the thought, becoming a habit, dropped out of her conscious mind to become conserved in her unconscious mind. Conserved there, it became a definite part of her personality—her soul, if you will. Thereafter it was not necessary to remind herself that it was wrong to steal. She knew it was, without having to think about it at all, and this unconscious knowledge was her protection in the fleeting moment of temptation, aroused by her definite need and the knowledge that, lacking money to buy the stockings, and faced with the absolute necessity for acquiring stockings, the sole alternative was to steal them. She got no further than that vague, conscious thought. Immediately the knowledge that it was immoral to steal—that nothing could possibly excuse theft—rose out of her unconscious mind and became a dominating conscious thought. Now, right there appeared the mental phenomenon known among psychiatrists as a complex or conflict. In all conflicts the stronger wins—and in this particular mental conflict, the will not to steal won instantly. It was an older habit of thought. It was an acquired instinct, whereas the impulse to steal was not a habit of thought, because she had never indulged in theft! We say we do a thing on instinct, but really we act after due, if incalculably brief cogitation, based on reason, which is the result of habituation to doing certain things."

"This defendant, your honor, is a healthy girl as far as I can judge from outward appearances. But she is what you often hear referred to as high-strung. And she is so unusually intelligent that I readily realized there must have been a very potent reason for the commission of such an unintelligent act as theft. So immediately I commenced to question her as to her family, her past."

"She could tell me nothing. She is not at all sure that her name is Nance Belden, and I am satisfied that her inability to throw any light on her genesis was not born of a desire to withhold that information. I believe she has amnesia for a certain period of her life, and we know that such a condition is usually the result of a severe mental shock. In such cases the patient usually has an intense desire to forget absolutely the unhappy, unpleasant or terrifying episode or person that produced the shock, and so intense is the power of will in certain highly sensitive people, women particularly, that not infrequently they succeed! Thus amnesia is produced. It is, in a sense, autohypnosis, and your honor undoubtedly is aware that people who have been hypnotized remember nothing of what occurs during the hypnotic state."

"I believe I follow you," the judge murmured.

"I have shown you why the normal Nance Belden would not steal. But now comes that mental shock I spoke of, with consequent amnesia for all of her life that has preceded it; or it may be a part of that life. With the amnesia comes what we term dissociation or mental disintegration. The unconscious overwhelms the conscious; the acquired instincts of morality—social usage—drop out of the conscious into the unconscious, and the thoughts and impulses that have lain dormant and defeated in the unconscious are now in the saddle. Unfortunates who have acquired dual personalities or a dissociated personality go from one personality into the other and back again, with or without amnesia for the preceding state."

"At a time when Nance Belden's second personality (B) ruled her, and she decided to steal those stockings, she was acting under the impulse of an idea that could not be combated. To steal had become an acquired instinct, or at least a very strong instinct. There may have been a certain amount of repression against the act at first, but gradually that repressive instinct, i. e., her moral instincts, once part of her conscious mind but now relegated to her unconscious mind, grew weaker, until finally the stronger instinct won, and the result is, we have Nance Belden up before your honor for commitment to San Quentin penitentiary on a suspended sentence for grand theft."

"Have you any theory as to what this mental shock might be, Doctor Burt?"

"I have a very definite theory as to what prepared the ground, so to speak, for the mental shock, but I have not the slightest idea of the nature of the shock."

"This is most interesting, Doctor Burt. Pray explain."

"Look carefully at this defendant, your honor. You see a young woman about five feet, five inches high—normal height for a woman of her age, which I imagine to be about twenty-one or twenty-two. How much do you weigh, Miss Belden?"

"A hundred and twenty-eight, Steve."

"A normal weight, your honor." He took the girl's hand and counted her pulse. Then he took a stethoscope from his pocket, placed it against her left breast and listened. Her pulse and heart beat normally, your honor, and from her appearance of general good health we have no reason to suspect pulmonary trouble. Her skin is clear, soft and smooth; it is free from blemishes—another indication of good health. Her hair is fine and lustrous; not dry and lifeless, as is the case of a person of pronounced psychopathic tendencies. Her eyes are full, lambent, kindly, intelligent. Her brow is full, broad and of medium height, her head a little larger than that of the average woman, and she is broad between the ears—because, as she has brains, nature ordained that she should have room for them. She is neatly dressed and decidedly not a slattern. She gives no indication of dissipation—drugs or alcohol. But mark her nose. It is a grand wreck. A nose like that would cause a continuous mental conflict in any woman."

"But for this lamentable facial defect, this girl would be beautiful. Perhaps she remembers, or used to remember, herself as beautiful or attractive; then this accident occurred and lo, she became an ugly duckling. She brooded upon her misfortune; she wept over it, doubtless she thought it very hard that God should afflict her so. Doubtless the knowledge that she was an object of curiosity or derision to strangers and repugnance to her friends made of her a gloomy, depressed recluse. Who knows what wild, desperate and futile thoughts she became a prey to? Mental conflicts undoubtedly were at work—an impulse to run away, to hide herself, countered by the natural impulse to make the best of the situation, to be brave, to pretend she was not different."

"In the case of a girl whose mind and nerves had been thus harassed over a long period, a new sorrow, constituting a definite mental shock, even if of no great magnitude, might nevertheless be sufficient to bring about the condition of dissociation of personality which I have described."

"Anything else, Doctor Burt?"

"I have given a concise and general outline of the case as it presents itself to me, your honor. This defendant should have treatment. It is quite possible to cure her and I am morally certain I could do so. Her saddle nose can be repaired. I have a very good friend, a specialist in plastic surgery, and I know he would be willing to help, without charge, to make a swan of this ugly duckling."

"And you think you would make her over into a responsible moral citizen?"

"I think so, your honor."

"How would she support herself during the period of treatment? By theft—or worse?" The judge glanced at Nance Belden. "How do you support yourself, young woman?"

"I carry my own check-book," the girl replied.

"You have a private income?"

"Sure, old thing."

"What is its source?"

"I don't know. On the first of every month somebody puts some money in the bank for me and I check against it."

"And that's all you know about it, eh?"

"Sometimes I can remember, but I can't now. It's the time I can't remember that raises h—l with me, Judge. I don't know what name to sign to my checks then or I forget I have a checking account. Then I get hard up and steal."

"How truly remarkable, Miss Belden! Have you ever issued any checks that bounced back on you?"

"Yes, are you trying to kid me, Whiskers?"

The judge ignored this obvious contempt of court. "I suppose you have had many sweethearts, Miss Belden?"

Nance Belden's scornful laughter filled the courtroom. "Oh, Judge, you're precious. What sort of a man would pick me for a sweetheart, I ask you? Be yourself, Judge. Now you tell one."

"Why not?" the judge pursued remorselessly.

"Well, maybe because nobody ever asked me," the girl assured him with simple directness. "I don't mind admitting I'd like to have a nice sweetheart if I could find one, but what the h—l is the use trying? I'd only have him a little while; then he'd get ashamed of me. What's the use bothering myself? I know a blind fellow that's mad about me. I've often thought of taking the poor gazabo on for my steady sweetie, but he makes me so sad I know it wouldn't last. He has that funny staring look, and when he walks with his arms held straight out, it just breaks my heart."

"Where does he live?"

"God knows—now. I was taking care of him when I got pinched. You see, Judge, I took him to a doctor to see if something couldn't be done for his poor eyes, and the doctor said he could be cured, but it would be expensive. He'd have to go east to a very noted specialist, who would charge a lot for the operation. I well, I paid that doctor his bill and that left me short."

"Did the same doctor say anything to you about your nose?"

"Yes, he said he could cure that himself, and to come in when I was ready and he'd put me in a hospital and operate. Gosh, it's some baby, isn't it, Judge?"

"How did it happen?"

"I don't know."

"You don't know anything, do you?"

"Yes, I know something."

"What is it?"

"You haven't the slightest intention of agreeing with Steve. That sheep-faced mutt, Blotchen, has given you an earful. You're one of these judges that believes what he wants to believe. Steve's told you I'm nutty, but Steve's wrong. I'm not. Steve's just a good fellow trying to give the little girl a hand."

"So you believe you're quite sane?"

"Of course I am. There's nothing wrong with me except a bad memory, and a leak like the American eagle."

Stephen sighed and shook his head, seeing which, Nance crossed to his side, put her arm around his neck, and laid her cheek against his. "Steve, darling, you'd be a wonderful sweetheart," she assured him, and laughed.

"Your honor," Stephen pleaded, "can't you see she's—"

"I can see she's as intelligent as you say she is, Doctor. In fact, she's more than that. She is very artfully simulating mental irresponsibility by attempting to spoil the good work of her expert witness. It is my conviction that Doctor Blotchen was right when he told me she was the smartest, most adroit criminal type he had ever examined. I believe, with him, that she is incorrigible, and incorrigible criminals should be set apart from society."

He turned to his clerk. "I believe the sentence was two years in San Quentin penitentiary. Verify it and prepare the commitment."

"Good G—d," Stephen Burt cried sharply, "you are not going to commit this social outrage, your honor?"

The judge eyed him sourly. "Doctor Burt, you will apologize to the court for that language or I shall fine you fifty dollars for contempt of court."

Stephen Burt drew a fifty-dollar bill from his pocketbook and tossed it on the table.

"Court is adjourned," his honor murmured, much embarrassed.

The policeman who had brought Nance Belden into Superior court approached her. "If you're a good girl, Nance, I'll not put the cuffs on you."

"You didn't put them on me coming here; so why should you think it necessary now?"

"You're an important prisoner now, Nance. The judge just gave you two years in San Quentin, didn't he?"

Nance Belden turned. "Did he, Steve?"

The doctor nodded miserably.

"And I'll not see you any more, Steve?"

"Of course you shall Nance. I'll come to see you from time to time. I haven't finished with you—not by a long shot, my dear. Tyrrell, you're still retained on this case."

JUST BELOW THE HORIZON

With lively interest we have followed the fortunes of the characters in John Uri Lloyd's new novel, "Our Willie," the villainous country squire, the simple-hearted Knobland folk, the hapless and sparsely heroic hero, and the other denizens of Stringtown on the Pike and the hinterland of Boone county. As the veteran story-teller portrays it, the region is a sort of witch land with ghosts, "hants," astrologers, mystery, sudden death. Yet what attracts us most are the backgrounds and swift, friendly glimpses of customs and idioms that are of a past but lately dropped below the horizon. The people of the book use sulphur matches and carry hickory-withe baskets, and sit in cornshuck bottomed rockers and drink butter-milk and sweet clabber, and hang their hats on blacksmith-made iron spikes, and "worm" their tobacco patches and "chaw spiced tobacco" (holding that "chawin' livens men's brains") and deem it a difficult thing to get a child "through his second summer," and declare that "a runt pig allers makes the best hog in the littah."

AND THE POCKET INKSTAND

Also, these Stringtown folk know the old-fashioned combination bookcase and desk, and the pocket inkstand, and "the sweet-tater hole undah the hah'th," they use wild turkey wings for fans, and think little of "cur dogs," and have guinea hens that cry "Pot hook! Pot hook!" and note "the big crawfish an' ets children" plowing sand in their springs. Their Knobland neighbors register conviction with the phrase, "Suah es Gawd made little taters," and sell "eggs an' buttah an' huckstah stuff," and value the imported Kentucky coffee-nut tree. As to the pacific hero of the tale, his proud mother explains, "He nevah carries no knife, jest one little pistol an' a dirk his fathah gave him."

A KENTUCKY FISH

One curious idiom Mr. Lloyd admits is beyond him. In near-by Kentucky, crappies, a white fish of the sunfish family, used to be called Campbellites. If the Office Window Man is not mistaken, these fish are still known as New Lights, which is the name of a religious denomination that emerged after the great Kentucky Revival early in the nineteenth century. The fish is alleged to begin spoiling as soon as you take it from the water. It was a libelous witicism that this was also true of members of the new creed soon after they had come up from the waters of baptism.

JACK JOUETT TO BE HONORED BY STATE DEC. 12

Jack Jouett, strapping Virginian whose breakneck ride in 1781 saved Thomas Jefferson and the Virginia legislature from capture by the British and the cause of the colonies from ruin, is to receive belated honor from the people of Kentucky, his adopted state.

A Paducahan, Mrs. C. E. Purcell, a sponsor of a state-wide movement to build a memorial to the immortal Jouett.

On December 12 all school children will mark his deed. Governor Ruby Laffoon has set aside, next June 4, the 154th anniversary of his ride, as "Jack Jouett Day." Efforts are being made by Mrs. Purcell to have a special postage stamp released on June 4, in honor of Jouett's service to the nation.

Story of Ride

Following is Mrs. Purcell's authenticated account of Jouett's dangerous ride:

"All Kentuckians love a horse race. The children of Kentucky schools will learn on December 12, (Kentucky Day) of the greatest horse race in U. S. history. "The lone rider was Jack Jouett. One June evening in 1781, he was resting in Cuckoo Tavern, Louisa county, Virginia. Here he overheard the British general, Tarleton, planning to capture Thomas Jefferson, take him to England in fetters, there to be tried by the Crown. They hoped and believed he would be convicted and hanged as a traitor."

"As they left the tavern for Monticello they went the highway. Jack Jouett leaped upon his spirited stallion and also started for Jefferson's home, but he chose an old unused Indian trail, overgrown with tangled vines, briars and thorns."

"Tarleton little believed his plans had been discovered and that an unknown rider was racing against him and his 250 mounted soldiers, but sensing victory they rode on eagerly."

"Jouett reached the little mountain first. As he rushed up to the door of the mansion, his horse white with foam, that June 4th morning he shouted his warning, 'The British are coming! Your Honor must fly!' Then on to Charlottesville he rode like mad and roused the lawmakers there."

"When the British reached Jefferson's home, he and his family were safe on the farther side of the mountain. Also the legislators had fled from Charlottesville when their would-be captors arrived."

"Had Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee and other patriots been captured and hanged, what would have been the result? It would not only have taken some of the founders of our nation away at a critical time, but would have discouraged the leaders left. Take out the work of Jefferson alone for those years from 1781 to 1826 and see what a loss to history. It might have disheartened the remaining leaders so that would have given up and tried no more. If so, there would have been no Monticello shrine, no Mount Vernon, no Washington, D. C.—no United States. We might today be under the rule of the King of England."

"So let us give honor to the bold rider who saved all this for us. Virginia, his native state, gave Jack Jouett an elegant sword and pair of pistols. She also has erected several markers to his memory. Kentucky, his adopted state, where he spent the last forty years of his life, and which claims his famous artist son Matthew Harris Jouett, has been dilatory in honoring him. For more than a century he has lain in an unmarked grave in Bath county, Kentucky."

"A movement is being sponsored now to honor this hero in our state. Let every Kentucky Day program tell of Jack Jouett's race. Let every child contribute a penny toward building a memorial in Kentucky to the greatest rider of any race in our history. Every school that registers 100 per cent in the Penny March will be placed on the Honor Roll; this will be published in our papers, and a copy sent to the office of State Superintendent of Public Schools James H. Richmond, who is cooperating in this movement."

"May we make Kentucky so Jack Jouett-conscious that when Governor Ruby Laffoon names June 4, 1935 as 'Jack Jouett Day,' we can be able to unveil for posterity a memorial worthy of the man who saved our nation."

THE PROCESSING TAX AND HOME BUTCHERING

The producer who slaughters his own hogs and sells or exchanges directly to consumers not more than 300 pounds of the products derived during any marketing year is not required to pay the processing tax. If the producer sells more than 300 pounds but not more than 1,000 pounds of pork products from his own hogs direct to consumers he is liable for the tax only on the volume sold in excess of the 300-pound exemption. If he sells more than 1,000 pounds during any marketing year he loses his 300-pound exemption and is liable for the tax on all products derived from his hogs which he has sold. The amount of the tax is determined upon a live-weight basis, which is arrived at by using the conversion factors prescribed in the regulations. Farmers who slaughter and sell hogs not of their own raising are not entitled to the 300-pound exemption. Any farmer who processes hogs for consumption by his own family, employees, or household is exempt from the payment thereupon.

Farmers who acquire or build good poultry houses will need to exercise care about ventilation and over-crowding. A 20 by 20 house contains 400 square feet of floor space, which is room for 100 hens and 10 or 12 male birds.

CREDIT OF NATION UNIMPAIRED

Impressive evidence that credit of the United States government remains unimpaired is supplied by the fact that the offering of $900,000,000 worth of treasury notes was over-subscribed quickly.

The subscription books on two of the issues were closed within the day, presenting the first instance in many years that a bond issue had been sold in one day. The eagerness with which bankers and others with money to invest bought the government paper is indicative of the fact that federal securities are regarded as the safest possible investment.

Occasionally a pessimistic partisan sounds a sour note over the fact that the federal government is borrowing money and spending it to meet emergency needs. There are those who have been predicting for two years that such procedure would undermine credit of the nation.

But such forecasts have been repeatedly discredited by the rush of investors to buy the offerings of treasury paper every time it is presented. Those conversant with conditions are convinced that there is no question about the financial solidarity of the government.

Products raised by junior club members have a sales value of $1,796, reports A. C. Burnette, agent in charge of Negro work.

BANK CHECK TAX TO END

Washington, December 8—The two-cent tax on bank checks which expires December 31 is the first of a long series of "nuisance" taxes which drop off the statute books soon unless Congress acts.

The check tax expires with 1934. Most of the others in this group continued until June 30.

Administration and House Ways and Means Committee members have indicated this group of levies will be extended. Probably the most productive to the Government is the gasoline tax. Others include levies on telephone, telegraph cable and radio communication, transportation of oil by pipe line, electrical energy, lubricating oil, toilet preparations, furs, jewelry mechanical refrigerator, sporting goods, and chewing gum.

In Bath county 800 cattle were tested for T. B., and no diseased stock found.

96 PER CENT FAVOR KERR-SMITH ACT FOR 1935

Boone county farmers favor the Kerr-Smith Act for 1935 according to the first 490.5 acres voted up until 3:00 P. M. Monday afternoon according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. The vote shows that 470.2 acres voted "Yes" and 20.3 acres voted "No" or approximately 96 per cent in favor.

Voting will be done by mail or at the county Office through Thursday, December 20th.

Seventy five per cent of all tobacco growers must be "Yes" before the tax in 1935 will be effective.

The Kerr-Smith Act permits the non-signers to continue to produce tobacco and receive a return equal to what his return would have been without the improvement in tobacco prices brought about through the Adjustment Program. In brief, the Act seeks to prevent the man on the outside from unduly profiting by his neighbor's reduction in production.

CITIZENS ALARMED

OVER ACTIVITIES OF ELUSIVE ARSONIST—INVESTIGATION BY DISTRICT MARSHAL FAILS TO PRODUCE CLEW—CHURCH AND DEPOT IGNITED

Residents of the village of Elsmere are confronted with a dangerous and mysterious problem—a "fire bug" at large.

The periodical fires started by the pyromaniac have caused considerable alarm among residents of the Dixie Highway village. Many of the citizens dread the night and are afraid to retire for fear their homes will be set afire and they will be trapped in the burning building.

During the last several months the "fire bug" has fired a number of buildings. Despite the precautions taken by officials of the town and citizens, the arsonist has escaped at all times and has left no clues that might lead to his apprehension or identification.

Works on Sunday

He commits his acts usually between 2 and 3 a. m. on Sundays, according to J. F. Corwell, chief of the Elsmere Volunteer Fire Department. Chief Corwell stated that practically all of the incendiary blazes have been started during the early morning hours.

Chief Corwell and Henry Maher, district fire marshal, and Southern R. R. offices have made a thorough investigation of the series of incendiary fires, but they admit they are completely baffled by the activities of the firebug.

PETITIONS BEING CIRCULATED TO FURNISH RADIO FOR INFIRMARY

The American Legion is always thinking of ways and means by which it can be of benefit to others. Boone Post No. 4 is no exception to this rule. At this time of the year when the Christmas spirit is in evidence Boone Post thought a way should be found to make the lives of those who live at the County Infirmary more cheerful. With this in mind a drive is being made to solicit funds with which to purchase a radio for the enjoyment of these folks. Petitions are being circulated by different Post members in all parts of the county. It may be that Boone Post members will not be able to see everyone. In this event such persons are asked to mail any remittance to O. R. Russ, Adj., Florence, Ky. The money should reach Mr. Russ by Saturday as the Post wishes to buy the radio Monday and have it installed by Christmas day. This is a very worthy cause and should be liberally supported by all.

FIFTY-NINTH

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED BY MR. AND MRS. B. A. FLOYD—SUNDAY, DECEMBER 16TH—WERE MARRIED AT HE-BRON.

Fifty-nine years ago today (December 16th) B. A. Floyd and Florence Hankins were married at Hebron of this county.

On Sunday, December 16th, some of their friends and relatives surprised them with a dinner from well-filled baskets served in their honor at their home near Florence. Those present were Mrs. Zadie Ayler, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Crutcher, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ledford, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit, Mrs. Melissa Hankins, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Riley and son George Hankins.

A bountiful dinner was enjoyed by all, after which an article from The Boone County Recorder of December 1875 was read by Mrs. Eunice Pettit accompanied by the soft strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

Far too many times do we wait until too late to pay tribute to our friends and then try to atone by placing flowers on their graves. For this reason we wish to pay tribute while it can be appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd have lived the simple life, have been good citizens, good neighbors, good parents, and above all have been true Christians. May God in his mercy add more blessings to their noble lives and help the people of this county to take time to show their appreciation for all such persons before it is too late.

William L. Stephens age 69 years, passed away Monday at noon after a few days illness. His death came as a shock and unexpected. He leaves one son Stanley Stephens, of Bellevue neighborhood, with whom he was visiting at the time death came, also four daughters, Mrs. Ralph Cason, Mrs. B. C. Kirtley, Mrs. Shelby Acra and Mrs. T. Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

S. T. Hagan, of Monroe county spread 100 tons of lime on his farm, bringing the amount used to 350 tons.

On January 3 and 10 the Recorder will be mailed to every resident in Boone County who lives on any rural route or in any village or town. This will mean practically full coverage of the entire county. The rural mail carriers and postmasters have been so kind as to cooperate in the matter and sample copies will be distributed to everyone who does not now take the paper. This means that 3500 copies will be mailed for each one of the two issues above mentioned. This will be an excellent opportunity for advertisers to tell the people what they have to sell. For the information of these advertisers we wish to state that space will be sold at the regular rate. Any such prospective advertisers should write us in the matter or inclose copy which will receive prompt attention.

The purpose of these sample copies is to acquaint all residents of Boone county who are not already subscribers that there has been a change in the ownership of the Recorder, that the paper will be run in a business-like manner, and that the future of the paper, we hope, may be considered secure. The Recorder is fifty-nine years old, has had a most honorable record during these many years, and hopes to continue to serve the public in the future as loyally as in the days when it was managed by the original owner.

At present the Recorder has a fine and large list of subscribers. This list is representative and extends to every section of Boone County as well as to the adjoining territory. However, in order to enlarge our influence and to widen our service we wish to increase our subscription list. There are many good people in the county who should be taking the Recorder.

We hope those who do not now receive the paper will read the sample copies and decide to become subscribers to their county paper, The Recorder.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Christmas, the happiest season of the year, is close at hand and we look about us as our thoughts turn to the spread of good will and cheer.

For nineteen and a third centuries we have had Christmas to celebrate. To that lowly stable in Bethlehem came the three wise men bearing their gifts to a newborn king. The thought for others about us and the giving of gifts to gladden the hearts of neighbors, friends and relatives had its inception in that unheralded visit of the herdsman to the manger where the son of Joseph and Mary lay.

At Christmas time, above all other seasons, we teach our little ones to be unselfish and to remember others; to have a thought for the happiness of their friends. It is therefore refreshing to find a group of little girls willing, yea, anxious to forego the exchange of gifts among themselves in order to carry their happiness to little ones, unknown to them personally but known to be less fortunate than themselves.

This is indeed the real spirit of Christmas giving. Theirs will be the greater happiness because they have the real and deep satisfaction of knowing that what they do brings joy to the hearts of others, to little one who otherwise would find empty stockings on Christmas morning, evidence that Santa did not pass their way.

Lowell in Launfa said immortal words, "The gift without the giver is bare." Truly those who give up the happiness of one gift for the sake of remembering some friend less fortunate is showing a heart of a giver and will, like Launfa find the chalice of golden happiness in the giving.

This Christmas, more than ever in the lives of a great many people, is an appropriate time to think of others. In your Christmas planning, plan to be a Santa Claus to some who would do otherwise be forgotten. You will find added joy there.

HIGHWAY FREIGHT CARS

It should be clearly understood that the growing opposition to auto trucks does not apply to the small or medium sized individually owned trucks—but it does apply to the big commercial trucks whose bodies occupy every inch of space possible under the law. They hamper and endanger ordinary traffic and pay only a pitifully small part of the highway expense they incur.

ROOSEVELT'S INCREASED RESPONSIBILITY

No previous President, half way through his term ever won such an overwhelming popular endorsement as Franklin D. Roosevelt received in the recent election. The President's personality dominated the whole campaign. This is the plain truth whether all the people like it or not.

No longer can it be said that the New Deal was imposed upon the country without having been passed on by the American voters. Now they have endorsed it with emphasis.

What will be the effect upon the President's use of this added responsibility put upon him by the will of the people? New power require new efforts to justify its use. No doubt the President's mind is already turning to the grave questions which the near future is very certain to thrust upon him. Mr. Roosevelt must be pondering to find ways and means of exerting himself so as to maintain the control which the people seem to have placed in his hands.

STATE HIGHWAY PATROL

Ernest Thompson, Chief of Police in Lexington, said recently: "I regard the creation of a state highway patrol as one of the most advanced steps that has been taken toward better law enforcement in Kentucky in recent years." Chief Thompson made the statement at the time he was awarded a medal by the United States Flag Association for the most notable contribution to law enforcement.

The Lexington chief believes that a state highway patrol will provide increased protection for rural districts, will reduce traffic accidents and promote observance of law. The highway patrol, consisting of about 36 men, will soon be placed on duty under command of Adjutant General H. H. Denhardt. While it is a relatively small force it is anticipated that it will demonstrate its effectiveness and justify its creation.

State highway patrolmen are used in many states as an auxiliary law enforcement arm and will prove to be highly useful. Traffic accidents have been reduced in states where patrolmen are on duty. The value of stolen motor cars and other property recovered, together with fines collected from law violators has totalled in many states more than the cost of maintaining the patrol force. It is no new experiment upon which Kentucky is embarking in a modest way. It is a plan that has been extensively tried and proved of great value.

HELP FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS

Tuberculosis is not inherited. It is caused by a small germ that is passed from the lips of an individual sick with the disease, to the mouth of a well person thru ignorance, carelessness or indifference. For more than fifty years we have known the cause of this disease and hence have known how to prevent it. No one need have tuberculosis if a few common sense rules of cleanliness, good health habits, good food and right living are practiced day after day. It takes time to educate people in these good health rules and this entails the expenditure of money. The only money that is dedicated solely to the fight against the spread of tuberculosis is that raised by the sale of our Christmas Seals. Through the sale of these seals along with other health influences the number of annual deaths in the state of Kentucky have been reduced from 5,993 in 1911 to 2,266. But this is still entirely too many deaths from a preventable disease. We can save more people if you buy Christmas seals and join in the fight against tuberculosis.

During the next few days a worker will call at your door. Will you buy all the Christmas Seals that you can?

Fireside Thoughts

Christmas entertainments—how the children enjoy them. What is it that makes their little entertainments so splendid? Their stage fright helps a little. The sea of heads in the audience confuses them and gives them stage fright, but whether they make perfect orations, or fail in the attempt, their baby faces creep into the hearts of the people and make them glad. So if they distinguish themselves in their recitations we love them; if they break down, we love them in their discomfiture. This is how the matter stands, and no mother need be ashamed of her boy because he fails in his "piece."

Two men—political physicians—have prescribed for present ailments of the Republican party. Dr. Wm. E. Borah prescribes sun baths, new tonic, and a change of policy from antiquated to modern. Dr. Henry P. Fletcher says no to all these, and asserts that old-time home remedies will bring the old elephant to her feet again. It looks now as if the fight is on between two schools of political doctors. The outcome will be watched with interest by Democrats and Republicans alike.

What is the approaching Congress going to do? It is not so much a matter of what Congress will do, but what it will not do. The session will be a little stormy, but not beyond control. Congress will back up the President's program and not take from him any of the powers granted for recovery's sake. Provision for the unemployed will be definitely along work lines with some constructive step looking toward those unemployable on account of age or physical defects. The approaching session will be noteworthy, sensible, and will pave the way for 1935 to be the year of rapid return to normal business conditions.

They are trying to debunk Santa

Claus again this Christmas—those childless, professional improvers of the human race. These debunkers do not know the hopelessness of what they propose. Here is one idol they cannot smash, one myth they cannot explode. One cannot create disbelief in the mind that wants to believe, and where is there a child that does not want to believe in Santa Claus until arrival at the skeptical age? And after all is there so much harm in the great, bright dreams of childhood, or in the joy the imaginary coming of old Kris Kringle brings to millions of little hearts? Is Santa Claus a public enemy that his power must be overthrown?

A long line of young women await patiently their turn for an interview for a prospective position for which several hundred are applying. An aged couple sits by a small fire, not a glowing fire, but a little warmth from fuel provided by public funds. Here and there former business men are seen looking for new connections, though past their fifties or sixties. Young men, thousands of them, are on the highway trails in quest of positions. This is just a cross-section of hundreds of thousands of Americans struggling at the cross-roads of life. And true Americans they are, for they know a better day awaits them. May the kindling spirit of love of those who are more fortunate remember in a practical way these unfortunates during the Christmas season and share with them that which they have. Even a word of cheer might prove to be their best and greatest Christmas gift, and that is a gift all can bestow.

Editorial of the Week

OUR STATE PRISON PROBLEM

With the two state prisons at Frankfort and Eddyville crowded to the limit of their capacity the Public Welfare Board faces the problem of what is to be done with those convicted of crime in the state courts and sentenced to prison.

The prison population in the two institutions has attained record proportions. The Frankfort reformatory now houses more than 2700 despite the fact that it was constructed to provide quarters for only 1700. Similar conditions of congestion exist at the Eddyville prison.

Col. John Skann, member of the welfare board, suggests that circuit judges exercise the authority given them under the probation law, which authorizes them to suspend the sentence imposed on first offenders for minor crimes. The court may, at its discretion, instead of sending to prison one convicted for a minor offense, suspend the sentence, release the prisoner on probation, giving him his freedom so long as his conduct is good.

Circuit judges have been reluctant to use this newly delegated authority, due, no doubt to the fact that they anticipate that if they start the practice they will be besieged to grant probation to all who are subject to its provisions. Yet, when the prisons become so filled that they cannot admit other prisoners, it seems that use of the probation law is justified.

Consideration has been given to leaving prisoners convicted for minor crimes in the county jails to serve their sentence. Changes in the law will be necessary, is the opinion held, before this may be done.

Taxpayers have always been reluctant to support measures designed to provide money for enlargement of the penal and charitable institutions of the state. We have approached the point that it has long been predicted would be reached, when capacity of the institutions is no longer adequate.

The next legislature, which will meet in January 1936, will have to take steps to meet this situation. In the meantime, the welfare board will continue to parole all prisoners convicted for minor crimes as they become eligible for release. Courts will find it necessary to suspend sentences of those subject to clemency.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS
(Contributed)

President Roosevelt's message on the question of social security for the aged and infirm has brought forth many opinions pro and con on the subject. If we analyze the situation and face the facts as they are no alarm should be made over what we are actually doing. In every state, and in practically every county in all the States, we have an almshouse, county home, poor house, or some institution by a similar name but all performing the same function; namely, caring for the homeless or those no longer able to work and who have no means of support. Hundreds, if not thousands, of these institutions maintain a directing personnel at great public expense, not to mention the cost of building and maintaining them. In too many instances salaries for management equal the cost of feeding and clothing the inmates. We may not like the terms "old-age insurance," "social security," or whatever you wish to call it, but we are doing this very thing in a piece-meal, haphazard way. One illustration will suffice: There are hundreds of instances where these unfortunates in three or more counties could be cared for under the same supervision. Aside from this waste of money, we uproot these poor old souls from their humble cottages and place them in an environment not akin to their liking. Some form of protection for their support would enable them to live out their days amid scenes and surroundings of their love and liking and among friends who know, love and appreciate them.

THE RIGHT TO WORK

Not only should the right of workers to strike be assured them, but the right to refuse to strike should be preserved for those who want to work, was the sound and logical view expressed in a recent address by Commerce Secretary Roper.

Labor regards the right to strike as one of its most cherished prerogatives. There is general agreement that exercise of that right should not be abridged. Yet, in every strike there are many workers who do not want to quit their jobs. While they prefer to work and do not want to join in walk-outs, coercion from fellow workers often forces them into such action.

Infringement upon the right of laborers to work is regarded by Secretary Roper as being as subversive of the liberty of labor as would be a denial of the right to strike. The logic of that position is unassailable. Head of a department of commerce has called attention to a fact seldom considered when labor strike develops. It is a principle which should be as securely established as is the right to strike.

We have discussed various plans for raising funds and among other things the students agree that each will try to earn a dollar before the middle of January. We have a number of boys and girls who are eager to help in this way and we wish to ask all of the people in our school community to aid us in carrying out this plan. If you have some piece of work to offer, will you please ask one of our high school boys or girls about it, or if you prefer, call Mr. Charles Riley, at the Hebron bank and some one will be sent to do your work. We shall greatly appreciate your cooperation in this plan.

SOAK EVERGREENS

BEFORE FREEZING

Because of the dry fall, it is advisable to soak the ground about evergreens before freezing weather sets in. As evergreens hold their leaves all winter, they give off moisture in large quantities. Unless moisture is supplied to their roots they may suffer winter injury.

N. R. Elliott, landscape gardener at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, advises two or three thorough soakings of the ground about the evergreen. Let 10 days or two weeks intervene between the waterings.

Will Carpenter, Allen county, obtained good results from seeding 30 pounds of sericea lespedeza per acre.

RECALLS THRILL OF FIRST CIRCUS, 80 YEARS AGO—PROF. JOHN URI LLOYD OLDEST MEMBER OF CIRCUS FANS.

One of America's unique organizations is the National Association of Circus Fans. At a meeting of the Cincinnati Branch of the Association held this week John Uri Lloyd related to those present how he was thrilled when he saw his first circus at Lawrenceburg, Indiana in 1854. Prof. Lloyd, oldest member of the Circus Fans told the story as follows:

"One thing a boy never can forget, no matter how long he lives, is his first circus." "I remember my first circus of eighty years ago as though it were but yesterday." "I lived at Petersburg, Ky., then. The circus never came to Petersburg, but Petersburg always went to the circus—went in a body—when the circus came to Lawrenceburg, Ind., a few miles away on the other side of the river.

"We crossed the river on a flat-boat and oarsmen in a number of skiffs pulled the boat four miles to Lawrenceburg. It was only a one-ringed circus, but only one ring was necessary for enough thrills and action and excitement were packed into that one ring to enrich our memories for a lifetime. The greatest thrill of all was Dan Rice, the most wonderful clown in the history of American circuses. I have watched circus clowns for eighty years—I never missed a circus, but of Dan Rice it can be only said that he was a marvelous entertainer, representing the perfection of the circus clown's art—unsurpassed, unequalled. He had in his great bag of tricks every imaginable stunt to make the child and grownup laugh.

"The circus tent was not filled that first day—for there were some who had religious scruples against the circus in that era. Nor was there a great band such as heralds the opening of the modern circus. I can recall how the master of ceremonies, a big man in a dress suit, came down the aisle and cracked his long whip with amazing skill over the heads of the audience. Then he exclaimed: 'All right, Mr. Merryman; come in!' and with that there came rolling into the ring—not walking or running, but actually rolling—the world's funniest man, Dan Rice.

"Never will I forget the side-splitting things Rice did with his trick horse. Excelsior. The horse would put his head down to listen when Rice had something to whisper in his ear. Excelsior would not or shake his head to reply 'Yes' or 'No' to Dan's questions, and the horse limped at times, pretending to be lame. Dan and Excelsior made an unbeatable combination for fun."

The path to victory in the Coca-Cola Basketball Championship led along Kentucky's famed Dixie Highway, "go in South," last week as no less than four towns along that pike blasted their way to the top of the Kentucky League standings. ## FARM CENSUS IN JANUARY

The farm census to be taken next month consists of 100 questions, relating mostly to the number of acres of the various crops, the yield in bushels, pounds or tons. Also information about the number of livestock, including chickens and turkeys, together with the number of gallons of milk and pounds of butter and the number of eggs produced in 1934.

The questions do not involve matters of a very personal nature. Most of them pertain to matters commonly discussed by farmers among their neighbors with much freedom; but at the same time no personal information given to the enumerator is to be disclosed to any one except the Census Bureau.

The Enumerator will be under oath to perform their duties properly and the law provides a heavy fine and imprisonment for enumerators disclosing any information obtained by them in their work, to any unauthorized person.

Farmers desiring to become familiar with the information required by the enumerators, may obtain a sample Schedule giving the questions to be asked, by writing a card to E. E. Barton, Census Supervisor Federal Bldg., Covington, Ky.

4-H MEMBER REPORTS 4-H CLUB CONGRESS TRIP

Mr. James Franklin Brown, member of the Burlington "Blue Ribbon" 4-H Club and 1933 Northern Kentucky 4-H Club Tobacco Champion reports on his scholarship trip to the National 4-H Club Congress held in Chicago during the International Fat Stock Show from December 1 to 7. His report is as follows:

Ludlow, Kentucky, Route No. 2, December 14, 1934.

I am writing you this letter to tell you and other 4-H Club members of Boone county and Northern Kentucky what a wonderful time I had the past week at the International 4-H Club Congress at Chicago.

I was awarded the Northern Kentucky 4-H Tobacco Club Championship for 1933 and received a scholarship awarded by the Kentucky Loose Leaf Warehouse of Covington to attend with other Kentucky 4-H Club members the 4-H Congress at Chicago. My crop last year averaged $16.20 per hundred when the average for the sale was only $8.50 per hundred. I also won $17.00 in premium money.

There were twenty seven other 4-H Club delegates from Kentucky. The Chaperones for these fine boys and girls were Mr. J. W. Whitehouse, State Club Leader, Mr. J. G. McKinney, and Miss Edith Lacy, Club specialists. Thirteen hundred boys and girls from all over the U. S. and eighty from Canada attended the meeting.

They gave us the finest and best Hotels in Chicago to stay in, and showed us the points and places of interest. The places of interest visited on our trip included a fifty mile sight seeing trip around Chicago, visiting the John D. Rockefeller Institute, Fountain of Time, International Livestock Exposition, Armour's Packing Plant, Banquet at the Stevens Hotel (the largest hotel in the world), International Harvester Company, Art Museum, with specimens of every known animal and element in the world, and many other points of interest.

Every one of the delegates that were there said it was the time of their life. The people were so courteous and taught us so many things that we would not have known had we not been there. The trip showed and taught the 4-H Club boys and girls many of the different ways of the world.

I think that the 4-H Clubs are the finest organizations that there are for country boys and girls. It teaches them many things in their project work and prepares them better to be the future farmers of America.

If it had not been for Mr. Becker and the Kenton Loose Leaf Warehouse Company my trip would have not been awarded. I think it is mighty fine of them to take this keen interest in 4-H Club work and in giving their prize trips for the boys and girls scoring highest in tobacco club work.

All of the boys and girls attending the International Club Congress will not forget the trip as long as they live. I hope other boys and girls will receive trips in the future.

James Franklin Brown.

FLORENCE SCHOOL NOTES

The girl Reserve and the Hi-Y Club of the Florence School will sponsor a community Xmas tree Saturday Dec. 22 at 8:00 o'clock in the High School Auditorium. Last Saturday the two above organizations sponsored a Bakery Sale and secured more than $20.00 which will be used to buy clothing, food, shoes and other necessities for the needy in the community. Several donations have been made, and this money will be used for the same purpose. Representatives from the Hi-Y club have been collecting clothes, shoes and food from the people in the community the last week and a supply is on hand to be distributed Saturday to the needy. In fact more than a hundred people will be given aid from this program. We are of the opinion that this is a very worthy cause, and evidently many are of the same opinion from the response being made. We have made it a community affair thus far and we are looking forward to a large crowd being present Saturday night to attend this program. Coach Alphin has some special music planned for the orchestra, and the entire audience will be expected to join with us in singing Xmas Carols. All of the ministers of the community have been invited and we are expecting a large percentage of them to be present. Together with the clothing, shoes, and food many baskets of fruit will be distributed. Be sure and come to this program, and join with us in making many of those in our community who have been more or less unfortunate, happy at this particular time of the year. Don't forget the Xmas entertainment Friday afternoon beginning at 2:00 o'clock. Most all of the children in the first eight grades will take part in this program. Come early and visit the different rooms in the building and observe how the children have decorated for Xmas in a very inexpensive manner. You will be very welcome. Don't forget to buy your Xmas seals from the school children. This is money well spent. As this year comes to a close we wish to express our sincere thanks to the people in the community for their loyal support during the past year. You have manifested a spirit of loyalty, that is superior. Your cooperation could not be improved upon. We appreciate it all and hope you continue through 1935 in the same loyal manner, making it a more fruitful year than the one gone by. To each and every one of you, we wish a happy Xmas and a happy and prosperous New Year.

FLORENCE TO MEET PINER The Florence High School Basket Ball Teams will meet the Piner Basket Ball Teams Friday night at Florence. The Piner teams are two very strong teams and we expect plenty of competition. The independent team will play Sparta Independent Team. The first game will start at 7:30. The Florence girls were defeated by the Hebron girls Friday night. The Florence boys won their game by a small margin.

OLD CLOTHING AND SHOES NEEDED The American Legion is making a call for old clothing and shoes to be used for the needy of Boone County.

If those donating clothing and shoes will notify me as to the place where they will be left, arrangements will be made to collect them or someone will call for them at your home.

If the amount collected is sufficient there will be a renovating project started employing relief labor. The clothing will then be distributed to those the relief has been unable to supply.

Ezra and Robert Aylor, of East Bend neighborhood, two of this county's thrifty farmers, were in Burlington last Monday on business.

W. L. Ogden, of Hebron neighborhood, was a business visitor to the county seat Monday, and while here made this office a very pleasant call.

Farmers have been very busy the past few days stripping their tobacco, and those who have sold their crops are very much pleased with the price.

All sales held by the M. C. between the August and the December term of the court were confirmed except one, that being the Citizens Deposit Bank vs. E. S. Pope, et al. on account of Bankruptcy proceedings.

Boone county has, compared with other counties, relatively few trial civil cases by a jury there being only one this term of court.

The Grand Jury of the Boone Circuit Court was in session the past week for three days. The jury submitted the following report:

Boone Circuit Court To The Honorable J. G. Vallandigham,

Judge Boone Circuit Court: We, the Grand Jury of the Boone Circuit Court, beg to report that we have been in session three days, have examined 30 witnesses, and have returned nine indictments.

All cases referred to us by the examining courts of Boone county have been carefully investigated and indictments returned in all except in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Frank Reynolds on a charge of assault and battery, which case was dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence.

We have carefully examined the County Property and have the following recommendations to make:

No. 1. We suggest that the Fiscal Court buy a moderately priced Radio for the County Infirmary for the entertainment of the inmates; the purchase of a floor covering for the sitting room; the equipment of a down stairs room to be used as a hospital.

No. 2. In the court house, we urge that a door be cut, opening from the hall into the Circuit Clerk's Office, eliminating the door just opposite the Men's toilet; and that the floor on the landing of the stairway leading to the Circuit Court Room be repaired; that the Tax Commissioner's Office be given a coat of light colored paint.

We commend Stanley Eddins for the manner in which he keeps the County Infirmary and cares for the inmates, and Elmer Kirkpatrick for the splendid condition of the Court House and Jail.

All officers have given us splendid cooperation.

L. D. Rennecker, Foreman This December 12, 1934.

Attest F. E. Walker, Clerk.

DAIRYMEN COOPERATE—CLEAN HERDS Boone county dairymen are cooperating in a splendid way with the Federal Government in the federal Bang's disease elimination project according to a report of Dr. Kenneth Ryle, of Burlington.

Dr. Ryle reports that reactors in herds are running from none to 100 per cent. Those dairymen having reactors are reported as being well pleased with the appraisals allowed, and are going about to build up clean herds from Bang's disease.

The number of herds and cattle listed are as follows: Herds—86; Cattle—1394.

All owners of cattle who are interested in having their cattle tested should list them with the County Agent or with Dr. Kenneth Ryle, at Burlington.

The debating club of Burlington High School consisting of six boys has been debating last week. The proposition is, "Federal Aid to Education." We have every good prospect and hope to have a fine team later.

The basketball teams journeyed to New Haven Friday night where they broke even. The Kittens losing by 24 to 6 and the Tomcats defeating the Tigers by 26 to 17. The Tomcats both first and 2nd teams will entertain Erlanger Friday night Dec. 21.

The Christmas spirit has completely taken the activities this week. Each room will have its own tree and program. All are decorated very nice.

The holiday will begin the 21st and will return to school the 2nd of January.

The First Graders enjoyed a candle lighting service this week very much.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Theodore Callin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for his foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Callin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Callin removed her from the hospital, which her former husband had hurried her to. Mrs. Callin spirited the child to Europe. Penelope left her money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls. The lawyer waved his hand hopelessly. "We're licked," he stated, without emotion. "This is one hand no lawyer can beat, and I wouldn't try." And Tyrrell shook hands with Stephen.

"If You're a Good Girl, Nance, I'll Not Put the Cuffs on You."

and Nance Belden, put on his hat and strode out.

"Come, girlie," the policeman suggested.

"Well," the girl declared, with an effort at nonchalance, "this is a tough break for old lady Belden, isn't it?" She smiled upon him patronizingly. "You're a good scout, Steve. Thanks a lot for all you've done and tried to do. You meant well, but at that I think the old scientific honey has got you a bit cuckoo, too. I stood for it a while because I thought his nits might fall for it, but when I saw you weren't going to get to first base with the big boob I called it no contest." She thrust out her little hand. "Well good-by, Steve. I suppose I'm keeping you from other nuts."

She came close to him and looked up at him wistfully; so he stooped and kissed her. At once tears suffused her eyes. "You don't mind what I look like, do you, Doctor Burt? You're kind enough not to feel sorry for me."

Amazingly she had changed—slipped out of one personality into the other as one slips out of a coat. "Will you do something for me, Doctor?" she continued, and he saw that she was all nerves now. "I'm looking for a girl named Penelope. I can't remember her last name, but I do wish you'd try to find her for me, even with so little to go on."

"Where does she live, Nance?"

"Out there, somewhere."

"You're reading a poem, I think, Nance—a poem that runs:

And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,
With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth."

She trembled with eagerness. "Why, you know her, Doctor. That's the Penelope I'm looking for."

"Oh, if that's the Penelope, why of course I'll find her for you. Good-by, my poor dear girl, and remember to look for me at the gate the day you're released from San Quentin."

A deputy sheriff took Nance Belden to San Quentin and was decent enough to refrain from handcuffing her, as route. The girl was not particularly sad. Indeed she appeared to enjoy the brief trip across the bay in the ferry boat, and the half hour's journey by train to Greenbrae, where the prison bus meets arriving deputy sheriffs and their charges. Even the first glimpse of the penitentiary did not disturb her, for the road that enters the grounds is flanked by the homes of the officials and guards, and well-kept lawns and flower gardens give no hint of the gloom that lies in waiting beyond the main gate.

She was taken first to the warden's office, from here she was passed on to another officer where she was measured by the Bertillon system, thumb-printed and photographed, after which a guard escorted her over to the women's wing of the prison.

The building in which female convicts are housed at San Quentin would readily be mistaken for a hospital were it not for the bars at the windows and the high metal mesh fence that surrounds the grounds. Two young women were hoeing in the flower beds; along the cement walks other women strolled, singly or in pairs, chatting and enjoying the sunshine and fresh salt breeze that blew in from the bay, less than fifty yards distant. About two hundred yards off the beach, some men in skiffs were fishing for striped bass, and with the exception of a guard in a kiosk at the entrance to the grounds, one would have to search in vain for the slightest hint of official surveillance.

"So this is San Quentin," Nance remarked gaily to her escort. "Not so bad, my boy, not so bad."

The guard did not answer. He knew that the realization of restriction rather than high walls constitutes the horror of prison life. He took her into a small lobby, where a pleasant-faced, middle-aged matron greeted the girl cordially.

"Come with me, Nance," she said, and led the girl into her office, where she took charge of Nance's suitcase, opened it and searched it thoroughly.

"You have nice clothes and toilet articles," she commented. "Have you more clothes at home? These will scarcely last two years."

"Yes, I send for them?" asked Nance eagerly.

"Of course you may. The women inmates of San Quentin are not required to wear a prison uniform, although we furnish one if necessary."

"Hurrah for our side," Nance replied cheerfully.

"You read and write, of course, Nance?"

"Do I look like a dumb-bell?"

"Well," patiently—"here are the prison rules. Read them, and then obey them strictly. Failure to obey them will lead to disciplinary measures, and repeated infractions may lead to solitary confinement. If you prove to be a good girl, you'll receive credit for good behavior in the shape of a reduction in the length of your sentence. Good conduct will also render you eligible for parole after you have served half of your sentence; if you should get into trouble, tell me about it first. I try to give my girls a square deal, but very few of them try to give me one. If you should think you're not being treated fairly, I'll always be glad to discuss your grievances with you. You will meet some terrible women here and you will also meet some who had they been spared the unfortunate circumstances which conducted to bring them here, would be ladies. Conviction doesn't mean that a person is devoid of all human attributes. You will keep your person and your cell clean. You will not be locked in your cell unless you misbehave. Your cell—it is really a nice little room—will be sacred to you alone, and you will have the freedom of the building and grounds. I will assign you to a cell and show you up to it. Then you can change your clothes and come down and join the women in the recreation room yonder."

"You'll do," Nance declared, and held out her hand. Her cell proved to be exactly what the matron had said it was—a small, neat white room, with a neat little white bed and wash stand, and a small chest of drawers, not unlike that of a room in a hospital, save for the steel door with an office in the center of it, and connected by a locking mechanism with all the doors in that tier of cells so that the throwing of a lever locked them all simultaneously. Nance surveyed it with satisfaction. "This will do me nicely," she said. "Thank you ever so much, Matron."

She unpacked her suitcase, stowed her few belongings in the chest of drawers, removed her hat and sat down on the bed to read the printed list of prison rules. But one of the rules interested her. She discovered she could write letters once a month and receive visitors once a month—if she behaved herself. "I must be mother's little lamb," she decided. "This is some joint to get out of, but where there's a will there's a way." And she set herself resolutely to discovering the way.

Before locking-up time she thought she had discovered it. It was the fishermen in the cove just off San Quentin point who suggested it to her. In her stroll around the grounds she inspected the fence. It was sixteen feet high, of quarter-inch steel mesh, set on steel posts bedded in concrete, and it ran along a concrete base. A barefooted woman, using her toes to cling to the mesh, could climb the fence readily enough, were it not for an eighteen-inch topping of barbed wire, strung in strands four inches apart, and set inward at an angle of forty-five degrees. One could not possibly surmount that. Nor could one burrow under the concrete base to daylight, even were the means available. Nor could one do it at night, because then one was locked in the cell. But one could stroll down the main walk to the sentry box just outside the entrance and appraise the situation there. As Nance suspected, the gate, was kept locked and the guard had the key; indeed, the gate was never opened except to admit a new prisoner or an official, or to provide an exit for a discharged prisoner or official. However, Nance did not despair, for the gate was narrow—two feet—and there was no toppling on it. She decided she would climb over it some day when the guard's back was turned; ergo, the thing to do was to induce the guard to turn his back!

For a month Nance gave her thoughts over entirely to this problem.

Lanny came into Doctor Burt's office and laid a letter on his desk. It was dated from San Quentin, on the cheap prison stationery and read:

"Dear Miss Lanning:

"I can receive visitors next Sunday. Won't you please come over and visit me? I'm so lonely, and you were so kind to me when I visited Doctor Burt's office. I have never forgotten you and never shall. Sincerely,

"Nance Belden,

"No. 43,231."

"Just think, Steve," Lanny declared proudly. "She hasn't forgotten me, the poor devil."

"I suppose you'll go over."

"Indeed I shall. It would be terrible if I didn't. You'll send her something, won't you, Steve? I think that might please her. I think she'd appreciate a portable photograph and a couple of dozen records. I understand model prisoners are permitted such luxuries."

Stephen smiled. "Well, I'll stand for that expense, too, Lanny. And I shall await with interest the report you will have to make on your return." Lanny beamed.

Several in this neighborhood contributed enough money to purchase a new wood saw, from Sears Roebuck Co., of Cincinnati. The men have made good use of it this last week. Mr. James Aylor sawed wood on Tuesday, Kenneth Aylor on Wednesday, B. Johnson Thursday afternoon and Friday morning and Russell Garrison on Friday afternoon and Saturday. Each helped the other and made the work easier for all.

Bailey Johnson and James Robert Wilson were shopping in Covington last Friday.

Several from here attended the basketball game at New Haven Saturday night. Hamilton Farmers and Farmerettes suffered defeat, but they are good sports and can take defeat as well as being victorious.

New Haven girls took the long end of a 24 to 6 score from Burlington last Friday night. Burlington just couldn't penetrate the Tigerettes defense.

The boys' game, doped to be one sided for Burlington, was a battle royal throughout. At the first quarter the score was 7-5 for New Haven; half, 11-14 Burlington, third quarter 17-17. Well into the last period, with the score still tied, two Tigers overly anxious walked out by the foul exit. The final count was 26-17 for Burlington.

Several of our 4-H club members had their tobacco at Covington last week for the show and sale. Maybe that is why some of them are smiling, they have some Santa Claus money.

A Country Doctors Wife

—BY—
Martha B. Thomas

CADDY lighted the fire in the fireplace. She switched on the Christmas lights for the tree. She pulled down the shades, and pushed an easy chair towards the fire. Halsy would be home any time now, cold and weary from his round of calls on sick people. This was their first Christmas eve together since they had been married.

Halsy had started out on his rounds at noon. At three he had telephoned to say he was obliged to abandon his so deep I can't walk through. I'm out of the wood road all safe, and within two miles of that sick child. But none of the farmers near here has a team of horses. I really need oxen to pull me through. It's tough going."

"Oh," breathed Caddy, trying not to sound dismal.

"Caddy, I wonder," he hesitated. She could tell he was tired by the drag in his voice. "If you could possibly get Lem Salter's team of oxen and drive here for me, I simply can't ask him to do it himself. He has his daughter home for the holidays and her family. It's Christmas."

Caddy could not speak. She knew what this meant. Hours of being out in the storm. Heaven alone knew when they would get home. She glanced about the friendly, inviting room.

"Won't you, darling . . . to help me out?"

Then she remembered something her father had said to her on her wedding day:

"You will never be allowed to forget you are the wife of a country doctor. But I think he's worth it . . . if you are!"

So now over the telephone she said, "All right. Stay where you are. Get warm and rested, and I'll be there by Shanghai Express!"

The tedious drive behind the oxen seemed endless. The snow sifted down inside her collar. It blinded her. She was not actually suffering, but she was pretty uncomfortable. On . . . and on . . . and on. The whirling curtains swept before her. The snow drifted across the broad backs of the patient beasts. They took their own car. The snow was too deep. He had borrowed a pair of snowshoes and a fur cap, and with bag in hand, was about to walk a road leading through the woods to a small shack where a sick woman lay waiting his ministrations. At Caddy's worried inquiries, he said it would take him a couple of hours. Then he had a three-mile walk further on the main turnpike, to a child suffering with a quincy sore throat. After that, he would retrace his steps, get his car, and drive home.

Caddy gazed into the flames. This country practice covered miles and miles. Halsy was conscientious. He never failed to reach his patients somehow, but he was tired and worn out. And Caddy herself was often lonely. Her plans for fun, for little parties at home, usually ended in trying to get someone to fill Halsy's place. She knew it would be like this. Halsy had warned her. She was sensible and patient. Yet tonight . . . Christmas eve, and Halsy's birthday. She sighed . . . she simply couldn't bear to have anything go wrong.

The telephone rang. "That you, Caddy? I'm stuck again. The drifts are way in their own plodding time. Caddy sat on a box wrapped round with a bear rug.

On and on . . . and on. Crenk . . . creak . . . the swaying of the beasts was like some grotesque, nightmarish rhythm. She almost fell asleep.

Then out of the whiteness ahead she heard a shout. "Hey . . . bless your heart, darling!" And Halsy jumped aboard.

The child was very sick. The throat had to be lanced. Caddy forgot her injured feelings. She helped capably. The mother, worn and harassed, thanked them both with tears in her eyes. And together they drank coffee beside a hurable kitchen stove, and ate huge slices of thick, buttered bread. Not what Caddy had planned for Christmas eve, yet, curiously enough, it seemed better than the other. It had . . . she tried to think it out—more strength and sinew to it.

She smiled at Halsy. "This is positively the best Christmas eve I ever spent in my life!" she whispered.

Behind a large buttered slice of bread he kissed her. "You are the perfect pattern for a country doctor's wife!" he whispered back.

"O, Little Town of Bethlehem..."

SO BEGINS one of our best-loved songs in honor of that small community which gave to the world two thousand years ago something that has been cherished down the ages as infinitely precious.

And now at this season of the year when our thoughts turn to the events which have made that little town of Bethlehem forever famous, let us, who also live in a small community, think also of the blessings that come to us because of that fact.

Let us think of the neighborliness, the friendly interest in each other's welfare, the sharing in each other's joys and sorrows, the close kinship in ideals and aspirations which are characteristic of such a community as ours.

Let us increase that neighborliness, that spirit of helpfulness, that unity of purpose in making our community a better place in which to live. Let us renew our faith in our own "little town" and be proud of it and its people—our neighbors and our friends.

It is in this spirit that your Home Town Paper, a community institution devoted to the best interests of our community, reminds you of that other "little town" and with it sends you its best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a greater measure of happiness in our community than it has ever known before.

The Christmas Party by Martha Banning Thomas

"THIS isn't bad luck! Here I'm all packed and ready to go to Ridgfield . . . and I can't even get my car out of the garage!" Rudy gazed gloomily out of the window.

His mother gazed at Rudy. "I know, dear. I'm awfully sorry. But I don't think even trolley cars or trains will run after this blizzard. Perhaps none will go to the party."

"That doesn't help along my Christmas spirit any," replied her son. "It was to be a grand party. That Sallie Sims . . . you know, the girl with the hair I told you about . . . was to be there. It makes me boil."

His mother waited a moment or so. "Why not work off steam shoveling the walk? You can help out the janitor. He's got more than he can handle."

"A fine substitute! Really, mother, sometimes it doesn't seem as if you appreciate how I feel. It's awful. Looked forward for weeks to this thing." He went on grumbling.

Without saying more, Rudy slammed out of the door. Soon his mother looked down from the third floor to see him half-buried in a drift by the entrance. He had borrowed a shovel from the janitor and began working like a rotary plow. The snow fairly swirled away from him; he became a figure dimly seen in the midst of whirling flakes. "Good for him," smiled his mother; "I'm sorry he's disappointed, though."

She went about her usual preparations for Christmas, which was next day. Rudy and she lived alone in a small apartment and she sometimes felt smothered and lonely and disheartened. It was not the way in which she had lived before. Rudy's mother liked space; she hated crowded, city districts. However, she said nothing of this to her son. It was necessary, and she made the best of it.

After an hour or so she heard a noisy, laughing scrambling up the stairs. The door burst open. Rudy stood there, red-checked, covered with snow, his eyes full of eager pleasure. Beside him was some one else. A slim figure with glorious hair like a cloud coming out from a small knitted cap. She was lovely with her high color and fresh outdoor beauty.

"Mother, this is Sallie Sims! Would you believe it, she's visiting an aunt in this same building! I'd never known it. If I hadn't gone down to shovel, she saw me and came down to help. Isn't it wonderful? I've asked her to share our little tree with us . . . and tomorrow we're going sliding on the hill. It's simply grand . . . simply great!"

Sallie agreed. They were both heard to remark that evening that they didn't think that party would be so much.

"It's never the party," laughed Rudy's mother. "It's the people who go to it—or stay away. What an awfully nice Christmas eve this has been."

Rudy grinned at Sallie. Sallie tossed her lovely hair. "The best ever!" she said.

Dear Old Santa Claus By Earle Hooker Eaton

THERE'S lots of folks I'd like to know
Who live in summer rain and snow;
Who dwell as well, in cold and heat,
And on earth's good old Easy Street,
But here's the chap for loud applause,
Our good old friend, dear Santa Claus.

Though men may come and men may go,
Though kings speed fast and then go slow,
There's one who gets here every year,
On time with his old jingle deer,
So hail this chap for loud applause,
Our good old friend, dear Santa Claus.

Father's Ingenuity

A Christmas Story
By Alice B. Palmer

TWAS just two weeks before Christmas and there did not appear to be any material means of attaining the necessary funds for the great celebration.

"Oh dear, if John would only sell that old heirloom," thought Mary Armstrong.

Just then Betty and Jerry came charging in from high school.

"Oh, Mother, I just can't wait until Christmas. I know you are going to get that tuxedo for me. I can see it now, oh boy!" exclaimed Jerry.

"And I can see that party gown, Mother, with slippers to match," said Betty, sweetly.

"It's no use expecting anything this year, children," said mother. "Your father has made some unwise investments."

"Here comes father, now!"

"Hello, everybody, what's up? Why the frigid atmosphere?" queried father.

"Mother says there's to be no Santa Claus this year," ventured Jerry.

The next few days John Armstrong was trying to figure it all out. Perhaps he had been a little negligent in the past.

few years concerning his family. Now he realized that he must make amends. Christmas bells were chiming, reminding the Armstrong family that 'twas truly Christmaseve. Mother and the children were thinking of the things they were not going to get for Christmas. But Father was chuckling inwardly. In fact he could scarcely keep from bursting out laughing; but that, of course, would never do.

The silence was broken by the jingling of sleigh-bells. They hurried on unsee to see what it was all about.

Were they all dreaming? There stood an old-fashioned bobbed. Out stepped Santa Claus.

"Why, Uncle Joe, what are you doing here on Christmas eve?" exclaimed Mother, all excited.

"I've come to take you and the family for a ride. So bundle up and hop in, without delay."

All stared at one another and tried to speak, but not a word was uttered. They simply obeyed their Santa Claus and within a few moments Father and all were seated cozily within the fairy-land contraption and were driven off.

The sleigh stopped with a jerk, right in front of a stucco bungalow all brilliantly lighted up with Christmas decorations.

"Why, I never knew the Thompson home was for rent. It has stood vacant so long," said Mother, with great concern.

"A friend of mine from the office just purchased it," said Father, with a convincing smile.

"We were invited over to see it in its new regalia. But you were all so out of sorts that I called up Uncle Joe and ordered the Santa Claus ruse."

They all laughed most heartily. They couldn't help it—Christmas or no Christmas! They had to give father credit for his clever ingenuity.

Out they hopped, beaming with the Christmas spirit.

Father took the lead and rang the doorbell, but no one answered.

Then he actually turned the knob as they all stepped back in protestation.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted Father. Too surprised to speak, they looked at one another and back again at father and then—

"Don't you understand? Oh, hang it all, anyway! This is your Christmas present," said father, sinking into the closest easy chair and gasping for breath.

"What?" they all exclaimed.

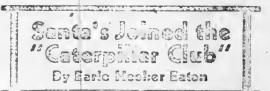

Then father explained it all to them—how he had sold the old heirloom, purchased the home and furnished it.

They unraveled: "How could you? When did you? How did you know just what we liked?" All these questions were fired at father at once.

Father had done a perfect job. But that wasn't all. He led them proudly into the living room where stood the real host of the evening—the gorgeous Christmas tree. Needless to say Jerry received his "tux," Betty her gown and slippers and mother a set of silverware, a long-desired luxury.

Then descended such a shower of Christmas hugs and kisses, gratitude and joy that dear old father was practically snowed under. But he enjoyed his Christmas presents better than all the material gifts he had bestowed upon his family; and he felt that his heart was filled with enough Christmas cheer to last forever.

THE motor car now goes so fast,
That reindeer days are largely past,
And airplanes sail the way do the work.
Oh Santa who will never shirk
The job of giving girls and boys
Their dolls and dolls and other toys;
For Santa has a parachute,
And "let's out" on the chimney route,
For just like "Lindy," he's no dub—
He's joined the "Caterpillar Club!"

If reindeer throw a shoe or two,
And fail to get the cargo through;
If motor cars blow out a tire,
Or get all matted up in the mire;
And Santa Claus is in despair,
He merely flies up in the air,
And if the airplane fails him too,
He drops straight down the chimney flue,
For just like "Lindy," he's no dub—
He's joined the "Caterpillar Club!"

OUR SANTA CLAUS

THE American Santa Claus is a corruption of the Dutch Santa Nicolas, G. H. McHughes says: "Santa Claus, the name derived from St. Nicholas through the familiar use of children in Teutonic countries, crossed to America. The direct route followed by him is somewhat open to question. On the way he traded his gray horse for a reindeer and made changes in his appearance."

When company is entertained to luncheon or dinner the meal should be simple so that the hostess may be rested and at ease. The menu should be planned so that not more than one dish will have to be prepared at the last minute, such as broiling steak, making the croquettes, or arranging the salad.

Aunt Martha's Christmas

By Alice B. Palmer

MEMORIES of the long ago kept ringing like sleighbells in the ears of dear old Aunt Martha as she sat alone in her favorite window seat by the side of some old-fashioned graniums and pondered the fact of its being Christmas eve.

She looked outside beyond the icicles which hung like grim sentinels toward the snow-coated trees and heavy drifts heaped high by the wayside and she was reminded of the beautiful story of "Snowbound." "But in that home there had been people—people and people, gentle and boisterous voices, everywhere."

"This will never do," suddenly spoke Martha Graham, rousing herself and trying to shake off the haunting memories. "I must prepare for a joyous, Merry Christmas just as if those people were really here."

With a spirit of youthfulness beyond ordinary endurance, Aunt Martha dashed kitchenward, every fibre of her being enriched by the Christmas spirit. The next moment she was busily engaged in preparation of all the holiday delicacies which she thought these people would like.

Soon delicious odors of sizzling doughnuts and soft sour milk cookies, such as only Aunt Martha could make, were in evidence.

When all was completed, together with a pitcher of steaming hot chocolate, Aunt Martha sat down and realized that there were no people to partake of her carefully prepared delicacies.

With a start, she realized that she heard voices, real voices, not visionary ones, but loud wild shouts coming from without. She could scarcely see through the blinding snowstorm. Now she actually heard footsteps! "It must be true!" thought Aunt Martha, as she threw open the door. Sure enough there they were, her imaginary "Snowbound" people for whom she had been preparing the Yuletide feast.

"Twas the joyous carol singers. They had become lost in the snowstorm and were almost frozen.

"Come in! Come in!" cried dear old Aunt Martha.

Then followed such a Christmas welcome and greeting as they had never received before. "Aunt Martha, their hostess, sat at the head of the table smiling and beaming, passing her Christmas goodies and pouring out the steaming hot chocolate. She secretly rejoiced as she accepted the carol singers as an answer to her loving thought of service on Christmas eve.
